Hotel Vancouver shuts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The strike-bound Hotel Vancouver, owned by Canadian National and operated by the Hilton hotel chain, closed its doors indefinitely Friday as the strike entered its third week.

Denis Buchanan, general manager of the hotel, told a news conference at the hotel Friday that the move was being taken because of violence on the picket line and the lack of police protection.

About 700 members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 275, began their strike June 9 after hotel management refused to provide a wage increase in the new contract. The hotel had offered a dental plan and improved working conditions but said the slump in the hotel business prevented an increase in wages.

Buchanan said a security guard at the hotel was pushed through a glass door early Friday and was injured. He said police were asked to provide protection but did not respond.

He told the news conference the hotel was closing to prevent further violence on the picket line and "possible death."

On Thursday, hundreds of trade unionists participated in a mass picket demonstration at the hotel in support of the strikers.

Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor which organized the mass picket, said it was a demonstration that labor in B.C. was supporting the strike and would not tolerate strike-breaking by the hotel.

Shortly after the strike began the hotel began hiring outside help to keep the business in operatons.

Pickets appeared early Friday at a southside Canada Manpower office to protest the forwarding of job applicants to Hotel Vancouver. About 60 Manpower employees were unable to enter the building until the pickets left later in the morning.

Vietnam resisters

Senate denies Carter funds for pardoning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rejecting appeals to "heal the wounds" of war, the Senate Friday refused to give President Carter money to implement the blanket pardon he bestowed on Vietnam draft resisters.

Senator Mark Hatfield, a Democrat, attempted to strike the pardon restriction, which the House had added earlier to a $7.7 billion measure financing several government departments.

But the Senate refused, on a 44-38 vote, to eliminate the restrictions, and it later approved the $7.7 billion money bill 70 to 9.

The entire package goes to a House-Senate conference committee where minor differences in the two measures will be ironed out.

Hatfield said the restriction "would effectively gut President Carter's pardon program for Vietnam-era draft resisters."

But a spokesman for the justice department said it would probably affect only those who have taken up foreign citizenship and wish to return home because the U.S. government would not be able to pay for processing their cases.

The spokesman said 283 of the estimated 2,200 draft resisters who fled to other countries have returned to the U.S. so far, and it was not known how many men have taken up foreign citizenship or how many wished to return home.

Carter cannot veto the restriction without also knocking out the money for all the agencies in the $7.7 billion appropriation bill, but the administration could appeal the pardon provision in the courts.

'No strike' guess in forest dispute

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Forest industry negotiators go back to the bargaining table in Vancouver today faced with a threatened shutdown throughout the B.C. coast and southern interior, but the guessing Friday night was that there would be no strike.

"I have a feeling the industry will start to move Saturday," Roger Lewis, president of the 1,700-member Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America said in a telephone interview from Vancouver.

The union took a strike vote from 35,000 members and served 72-hour strike notice Friday because of what it said was a failure by Forest Industrial Relations to make a serious offer in three months of bargaining.

Members from 12 coastal and southern interior locals supported strike action by an 85 per cent margin.

Officially, a strike could begin by early next week. But because of labor's problems with the Anti-Inflation Board, such a development was viewed as highly unlikely.

Sources say it would be futile to lose time and money through a strike only to have the AIB roll back any substantial gain. The anti-inflation program has had a deterrent effect on strikes.

Even so, IWA regional president Jack Munro isn't prepared to have the strike notice treated as a bluff. He said that unless F.I.R. (bargaining arm for the industry) budges on the union's demands, a strike was inevitable.

The union is seeking a $1 an hour increase. Another major stumbling block is the length of the contract. The industry wants a two-year agreement and the IWA is demanding that it be limited to one year.

Sources say AIB restrictions have made the union unreceptive to a two-year package. It would mean that members would be faced with a four per cent increase ceiling in the second year and wouldn't be in a position to bargain for something better if the anti-inflation program is abandoned in the meantime.

The AIB ceiling for the first year is six per cent.

There are a number of other areas of disagreement between the IWA and F.I.R., including a pension plan.

The Victoria local president said he felt the industry would make some concrete move at the bargaining table today because of the fact it made an offer to the pulp unions in negotiations Friday.

UIC payout up 11% over 1976

OTTAWA (CP) — Net unemployment insurance benefits paid in the first four months of 1977 totalled $1.553 billion, up 11 per cent over the amount paid in the same period of 1976, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

Higher average weekly benefits, up nine per cent over last year to $101.01, accounted for most of the increase.

During April, the net payout was $354 million, down 17 per cent from March but 13 per cent more than in April, 1976.

The number of persons receiving benefits in the survey week ending April 16 was 859,000, four per cent less than in March but six per cent more than a year ago. Unemployment rates in the early part of the year have hovered near eight per cent, substantially higher than a year ago.

About 10 per cent of beneficiaries received special sickness or maternity benefits.

It's Hubbub Canada

Bavarians will be dancing in Quebec, and Ukrainians kicking heels everywhere

By GERARD McNEIL
Canadian Press

Why are they having a Bavarian dance in Cap-Chat, Que., next Friday? For the same reason they're having a hubbub along the Codiac in New Brunswick. It's July 1 and Canada is 110 years old.

A year ago July 1—or Canada, or Dominion Day—was celebrated as usual: Mostly everyone went to the beaches, lakes or mountains for a long weekend. But the Nov. 15 election result in Quebec inspired a 1967-style attempt to unify the country.

Just about every Ukrainian in Canada will be dancing someplace. And where there aren't Ukrainians, there'll be highland dancers or drum and bugle bands.

It's a week-long celebration that began Friday with relay runners carrying torches across the country to Ottawa for a special flame-lighting on the big day. At the same time a Canada Week Caravan left Winnipeg for Bozeman, Montana, and a hands-across-the-border ceremony. The hands on our side will be Scots, Irish, Polish, Ukrainian, Italian, French and Canadian Indian.

The big cities all have gala events scheduled. Toronto, for instance, will have things like chime rings and rose presentations and a mass square dance.

Ottawa has commandeered the television networks to give the country a dazzling $3.5-million display of how great it is to be a Canadian.

They're going to run a 145-foot flag up the Peace Tower to see if anyone salutes.

A parade led by the RCMP musical ride will feature a giant styrofoam birthday cake. A star-studded show, including the National Ballet's lovely Karen Kain, will be held on Parliament Hill, where more than 100,000 onlookers are expected for the show and an hour of fireworks.

Actor Bruno Gerussi of Beachcombers fame will present birthday cakes to kids who were born July 1, 1967, when Canada was 100 years old. Andre Sarazin of Ottawa, one of four birthday boys found so far, says he is happy the country is celebrating his birthday.

And how is it celebrating?

Over in Prince Edward Island, Acadians will hold a "French picnic" at Port Lajoie. Celeorants are expected to speak French, but things being what they are there, organizers will distribute as gifts French-English dictionaries to help conversation.

At Privateer's Wharf in Halifax, the crew of the Bluenose II will renact something that didn't happen by trading tobacco and clay pipes for Micmac Indian gifts.

Just about everything happening in Quebec next week has been identified with the celebration: Horse races, parachute jumps. Etienne Bouchard and his group, hoisting the flag, horseshoes, bingos, dancing for adults,

We're going nowhere with S.A.L.T.—Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a pessimistic statement Friday on nuclear arms talks with the Soviet Union, President Carter said he had made basic changes in Gerald Ford's policies but "we have not made any additional steps forward toward a S.A.L.T. agreement."

Carter, in a White House interview, also said he could not guarantee success in the talks.

"I think we have made some basic changes in the previous policies that might bear fruit, but we have not made any additional steps forward" toward a strategic arms limitation agreement, Carter said.

"We hope we can. I think we are taking a much more bold approach to that question . . ."

Carter noted his administration was seeking limitations on future construction of arms as well as a freeze on deployment and development of nuclear weapons.

"We are asking the Soviets to join us in a comprehensive test ban that would prevent any nuclear explosives being tested," he said.

"This has never been done before. Demilitarization of the Indian Ocean has never been attempted before."

Carter said he was not criticizing his predecessor's administration and he held out no promises of success for his own program.

Carter also said there had been "a surprisingly adverse reaction in the Soviet Union to our stand on human rights." He said his administration did not single out the Kremlin and "I think I have been quite reticent in trying to publicly condemn the Soviets."

Fewer deaths

Neutron bomb 'safer'

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A new neutron bomb designed for use in Europe would be less dangerous to civilian populations than regular nuclear bombs, the White House said Friday.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said the neutron bomb would cause fewer casualties among civilians and friendly troops than conventional nuclear bombs.

He said the neutron bomb, on which President Carter will make a final decision later this year, was designed to inflict casualties on enemy soldiers in a specific area and has 10 times less fire, blast and fallout than conventional atomic devices.

No-tax Jim makes offer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter owed no income tax for 1976 but offered Friday to pay $6,000 anyway as a matter of principle, according to documents released by the White House.

The president and Mrs. Carter had a net taxable income of $39,366, but it was offset by $20,864 in expenses connected with the family peanut warehouse.

Garage fit for a king

HONG KONG (UPI) — According to Peking Radio, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's garage looks like the royal stables of French King Louis XVI. And if he's not careful, he may end up like him.

In its second attack in two months on the "bourgeoise" life style of the Soviet leader, the Chinese said Brezhnev's expensive tastes were affecting others around the Kremlin.

"The Moscow bureaucratic monopoly bourgeois consider that honor and glory lie in the ownership of a private car, and they go positively crazy over Western models," Peking Radio said in a Russian-language broadcast beamed to the Soviet Union.

The broadcast, a commentary, entitled Man and the Automobile was made last week and a monitored translation was obtained Friday.

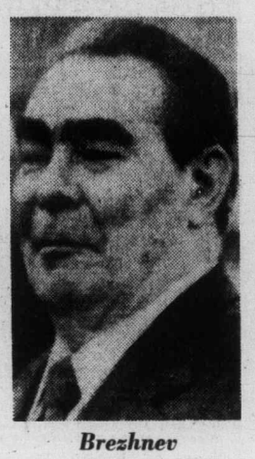
"Brezhnev," the broadcast said, "is an inveterate collector of Western automobiles and one can find nearly every known brand of high-class English, West German and U.S. cars in his personal garage," the broadcast said.

Brezhnev was given two cars by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing during his state visit to France earlier this week. However, he did not like the color of one of them and asked that it be repainted.

Noting that Louis XVI had 1,800 horses and 218 carriages in his royal stables, Peking Radio said, "If Brezhnev hasn't pursued his hobby quite as expansively as Louis XVI did, he nonetheless (has kept up with) the representatives of the monopoly bourgeoise in the West."

Just as Louis XVI, Brezhnev keeps his stable of cars "for his hunting, various junkets, entertaining excursions and other amusements," it said.

"In those days splendid carriages and thoroughbred horses not only served as a means of transportation but were also considered symbols of wealth and power.



Brezhnev
. . . 'like Louis XVI'

". . . The situation in which men are judged not by their abilities but by their wealth has not only been completely preserved in today's capitalist society, but is growing stronger in the Soviet Union."

Nevertheless, the day of reckoning is coming for Brezhnev just as it did for Louis XVI, Peking Radio says.

"The turmoil of the great French revolution forced Louis XVI to flee in his carriage in the dead of night and to go into hiding. He was nonetheless captured by the revolutionary people and was guillotined.

"The bureaucratic monopoly bourgeoise in the Soviet Union who amuse themselves by speeding on the roads of capitalism and social-imperialism are only driving along the old road of all parasites and adventurers of history," it said.

Hotel Vancouver closed in dispute

Transport and General Workers local, said Friday that security officers at the hotel sprayed mace on the pickets, sending two of them to hospital because of eye irritation.

A spokesman at Vancouver General hospital said only one of the pickets was treated and it was not because of mace. The spokesman said it is not hospital policy to give the reason for treatment.

Buchanan denied that mace had been used.

Union spokesman Dick Henham said the pickets were becoming angry because the hotel has been employing students and other workers to fill the jobs held by those on strike. He said the hotel should file charges with the police over incidents of violence.

Gordon Hubley, acting director general for manpower's B.C. region, said if the manpower offices are picketed again Monday the 60 staff members will be sent home.

George Johnston, president of the labor federation, said the Manpower picket line was a "tangible reply" to an earlier statement by Bud Cullen, federal minister of manpower and immigration, that Manpower must remain neutral in labor disputes.

Gammie said about 60 non-union workers have been sent to the hotel by Manpower. He said the law stipulates Manpower must fill job vacancies but said workers shouldn't be sent to operations that are on strike.

Workers at the hotel had been asking for a six-per-cent wage increase.

Bill Apps, the union's regional representative, had said the pickets would starve the hotel into surrender by cutting off its supplies.

The labor federation had applied a hot edict to the hotel stopping all unionized shops from supplying any goods or services.

Apps said the International Federation of Transport Workers had put the Hilton organization on its "we-do-not-patronize" list for hiring non-union workers.

Panther plans stop in Canada, but door's closed say officials

HAVANA (Reuter) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton, who disappeared from the U.S. in 1974 after being charged with murder, said Friday he planned to return home to stand trial.

Newton told an interviewer he had been living in Cuba for the last three years. He was going back to the U.S. because he believed he had gathered information to disprove charges against him. He also said he felt a new political climate in the U.S. meant he had a better chance of receiving a fair trial.

He said he planned to leave Havana tonight on a flight to Canada.

Newton, 35, a co-founder of the Black Panthers in the 1960s, had hoped originally to spend 10 days in Canada to consult lawyers.

However, he said he learned Friday that Canada would not grant him a visa to do this and he expected to be arrested as soon as he landed there. The Canadian embassy here refused comment on this statement.

"I charge that this Canadian decision follows a covert action by some people who don't want me to go back to the United States because of the revelations I can make there," Newton said.

He said he had evidence showing that the charges were part of a conspiracy against Black Panther leaders by the Central Intelligence Agency.

Newton said the U.S. justice department already had given him permission to stay in another country on his way back to the United States. He added that he had a valid travel document.

"I find the Canadian decision inexplicable," he said. "I have offered and still offer to stand by any conditions Canada imposes on me."

Newton said he hoped that by flying to Canada today Canadian authorities might relent and allow him to remain quietly in the country for a few days before going on to the U.S.

Newton, whose presence in Cuba had not been confirmed until Friday, said he had been here as a "very welcome guest of the Cuban government."

He made his way here in 1974 after jumping bail on a number of charges, including murder and assault with a deadly weapon, laid against him in Oakland, Calif.

"I've had hospitality from the Cuban people wherever I've been," he said. "I've stayed in every province in Cuba and the lack of racism here is one of the very imporessive things about the country.

"I've spent much of the time in preparing for my defence and getting the information I need. I've always intended to go back."

Newton, who spoke to the interviewer at the hotel in central Havana where he is staying, said recent legal actions in the U.S. and government investigations there were helping to establish that a CIA conspiracy exists against Black Panther leaders.

After founding the Black Panther movement, Newton was for many years its "minister of defence" before formally becoming its leader.

He said he hoped to fight for black rights through political action in the U.S.

"We've got growing political support after some years of stagnation," he said.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for the immigration department said Newton was "prohibited" in Canada.

"If he attempts to come he will be detained with no consideration to be given to his being released under bond."

Lebanon villagers fleeing fiery fields

HASBAYA, Lebanon (UPI) — Villagers fled from the burning wheat fields and shell-devastated towns near the southeastern border Friday, the seventh day of clashes between Israeli-supported Christian rightists and Palestinian guerrillas.

One person was reported killed and seven injured in Palestinian and leftist-held villages of the southeast as the rightists waged running artillery and machine gun duels with guerrillas and leftists.

However, no report was immediately available from the embattled Christian villages, cut off in a small frontier enclave accessible only from Israel.

"The fields are burning because of incendiary shells," a resident of Hasbaya said.

The resident of Hasbaya, the capital of the Arqoub area called "Fatahland," had visited nearby Ebel es Saqi — now a border ghost town except for the guerrillas and leftist fighters there who fight on a daily basis with the Christian forces in Marjayoun and Kleia.

Your Good Health

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why does there seem to be such a difference of opinion among doctors as to the treatment of shingles? Is there nothing that will help the situation and the pain, etc., after the blisters and scabs have healed? — O.K.O.

There's no difference of opinion. Most physicians are of the opinion (unpleasant as it may be) that there is precious little to be done about this pesky problem.

Doctors are continually seeking and trying out new ways to ease the pain you mention, which is about as far as they go. A method for ending the problem will pop up now and then, but it is usually of limited effect and then only for a selected group of patients.

There is no point in going into all of the various methods that have been tried. I've known of patients who have gone from doctor to doctor for years in hopes of finding one who might have the answer. There are certain combinations of drugs that can be tried. These have helped some. Surgery involving the virus-infected nerve itself has been tried. Judging by reports it has helped, but only when done rather early in the attack.

Medical research could provide an immense blessing if it could someday come up with a vaccine to disarm this troublesome virus.

dancing for Bavarians. The list is endless.

In Newfoundland, meanwhile, the citizenry will remember the gallant Royal Newfoundland Regiment that was nearly wiped out July 1, 1916, at the battle of Beaumont-Hamel in France. Of 801 Newfoundlanders who went into that battle, 233 were killed and 386 were wounded.

But Newfoundland will celebrate after it mourns.

While ballerina Karen Kain will dance in Ottawa's big show, the rest of Ontario will have plenty of dancers as well.

The Translyvanian Dancers from Kitchener will do their thing in Sault Ste. Marie. Highland, Chippawa, Filipino and German dancers will entertain in Sarnia.

A fish fry at Phantom Lake, with an 80-voice choir, will be held in Fin Flon, Man. At Miami, Man., a mule derby will take place.

The Lions will have a "funanza" (something like the Codiac Hubbub) in Avonlea, Sask. And a merchant in Grenfell has organized an essay, poetry and song contest. The Legion will supply prizes.

Many Saskatchewan communities are having a sports day but Meadow Lake will have a stampede, in which men will be flung from wild horses.

The restaurant association of Saskatoon will try to get people to eat Canadian food.

In Alberta, former language commissioner Keith Spicer will tour Calgary and surrounding communities. Alberta will celebrate with rodeos and multicultural festivals.

British Columbia will resound with tributes to Queen Elizabeth II. Its citizens will also sign a "togetherness petition" to present to Quebec.

'78 FORD COURIER
A tough new way to go truckin'

XLT with Free Wheeling Package.
Certain items illustrated are optional at extra cost and some are dealer installed.

Based on Transport Canada approved test methods no other pickup in Canada currently has better gas mileage ratings than Courier. With the 1.8 litre engine and standard 4-spd. trans., the Courier was rated at 46 mpg highway and 32 mpg city. Your mileage may vary depending on how and where you drive, truck's condition, and optional equipment.

More XLT Refinements and instrumentation include: woodgrain vinyl applique on steering wheel and instrument panel • bright instrument cluster surround • temperature gauge and ammeter.

5-Speed Overdrive. Economical 5-speed option has a smooth throw for fast, easy shifting.

Biggest Engine. Courier's optional 2.3 litre engine is the largest available in any compact pickup. Efficient OHC design.

New Interior. The standard Courier is remarkably well-appointed and comfortable with surprising stretch-out space. Smooth, long wheelbase riding comfort.

Cast Aluminum Wheels. Four aluminum wheels and RWL tires are hot additions for that "sporty" look with wide (70 Series) tire performance.

Trailer Towing Tough. The new Courier is now rated to haul popular Class I trailers (up to 21 sq. ft. frontal area) with optional 2.3 litre engine and standard GVWR.

New 7-ft. Box. Now Ford Courier gives you a choice of the standard 6-or optional 7-ft. box.
- Both with longer wheelbases than last year.

Teargas attack 'staged' for TV

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Riot police Friday fired volleys of teargas at gangs of black youths stoning trucks in the Soweto ghetto. They also found a woman's bullet-riddled body, the second victim of rioting a day earlier.

Police operating under new get-tough orders, said they were forced to fire teargas three times to disperse "riotous youths" stoning and domaging vehicles. But students at one high school said the officers charged them in an unprovoked attack staged for the benefit of a television crew.

The black principal of Orlando West High School said a police truck and a "Hippo" armored truck shot canisters of gas into the school yard. The irritating smoke filtered into classrooms and emptied the school, he said.

Police denied the students' claim and said they charged the school because it was a haven for rioters.

The South African Broadcasting System said police in the ghetto of 1.2 million people were "out in force . . . and the situation was considerably more peaceful" than on Thursday, when crowds of thousands of young blacks burned trucks and looted stores in the worst rioting this year in the ghetto.

"We will not tolerate further trouble from rioters," said Brig. Jan Gerber, a senior officer of the Soweto police headquarters. "We can stand no further robberies, assaults, stonings, damage to property and general lawlessness.

"Strong, well-armed contingents of police are patrolling the Soweto complex," he said.

Gangs of youths hurled stones at trucks making deliveries Friday in the Soweto ghetto's northern section, and many drivers steered clear of the area. Radio South Africa said two black truck drivers were injured in a collision caused by the stone-throwing.

Maj. Gen. Dawid Kriel, in charge of national riot control, said the body of a woman found early Friday apparently was a second victim of Thursday's rioting, in which police killed a black teen-ager and wounded at least 14 other persons.

The woman's death raised the black toll to 12 dead and at least 57 wounded since the June 16 anniversary of the 1976 South African riots that killed 618 persons. One white policeman also was shot to death accidentally.

U.S. equality demand angers South Africa

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South African Foreign Minister R. F. Botha angrily accused the U.S. Friday of "trying to outplay the Russians in Africa" by making "radical" demands for racial equality.

His voice rising in outrage, Botha suggested President Carter was toadying to the black American voter in his attempts to break down segregation in white ruled South Africa — and cited an embarrassing incident in Carter's presidential campaign to support his point.

"We are going to accept it," he told a news conference in discussing U.S. requests that South Africa shift toward one-man, one-vote democracy.

"It doesn't really matter whether you tell a man he must be hanged today or next week. The end is the same, the destruction of our state."

Botha
. . . 'toadying to blacks'

He indicated the Pretoria government was still not sure whether the Carter administration was serious about the one-man, one-vote goal.

"You are demanding things from us that you do not apply to the rest of the world,' he said.

"You are trying to outplay the Russians in Africa by being more radical than they are, because of your internal problem, the black-white problem . . . It is a fact that the issue plays a role in elections in this country.

"When your president made his 'ethnic purity' remark, you know as well as I do what happened."

During his campaign for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, Carter said he favored efforts to maintain the "ethnic purity" of city neighborhoods. Critics claimed the remark reflected a white racist viewpoint, and Carter spent some time denying that interpretation and cooling off the controversy it generated.

State department spokesman Hodding Carter denied Botha's assertion that U.S. policy toward South Africa derived from domestic political considerations.

"I reject that," he said. As to the charge the U.S. was trying to be "more radical" than the Soviets, the spokesman said, "We do not consider the democratic process to be radical."

Botha expressed bewilderment and dismay, as well as anger, over the new U.S. policy toward his government.

"I don't understand it," he said. "We have never harmed you. We have always helped you . . ."

Japan, Germany reject trade pitch

PARIS (AP) — Western countries headed by the United States renewed appeals to West Germany and Japan Friday to expand their economies and buy more abroad to help those countries facing heavy unemployment and large deficits in their international trade.

But German and Japanese spokesmen at the closing session of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development resisted the appeals, claiming they had done enough to help expand world trade. Both West Germany and Japan had piled up big surpluses in their foreign earnings.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said reduction of surpluses obtained by the stronger countries, including the Netherlands and Switzerland was essential because weaker states were approaching foreign-debt ceilings.

Blumenthal told a news conference later that the total payments surpluses of the four countries—West Germany, Japan, the Netherlands and Switzerland — would be between $10 billion and $12 billion this year—roughly equivalent to the payments deficit the United States expected to face.

Blumenthal told the OECD meeting that "the survival of our political institutions and our open trade and financial system depends on our success."

Bid to forge western ties led to Socred's death

OTTAWA (CP) — Andre Fortin's death Friday in a car accident came as the 33-year-old Social Credit party leader was attempting to reforge party ties with the party's once-powerful, now nearly-defunct, western flank.

Fortin died after his car ran off the road near Drummondville, Quebec, and vaulted a 30-foot-wide river. Police speculate he may have fallen asleep. He was driving the 100 miles from Ottawa to his home in Victoriaville after returning from a trip to Vancouver where he was attempting to rebuild the party's western base.

The death represented yet another blow to the tiny Quebec-based populist party which elected him as leader eight months ago.

Speculation on Fortin's successor immediately centred on Gilles Caouette, son of the party's former leader Real who died in December, a month after Fortin was picked to replace him.

But the newly elected MP declined comment on his political future, saying only that the party must pull together if it is to stay alive.

"He was a parliamentarian who had ideas and defended them"

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, whose political climb through the party organization had been compared to Fortin's through his, said he was shocked by the news.

Fortin was a friend, Clark said in a statement from Stony Plain, Alta. "For too little time his youth, his hard work and determination contributed to the political life of our country."

Fortin entered the Commons in 1968 as its youngest MP and recaptured his Lotviniere seat in the 1972 and 1974 general elections.

He first attempted to win a seat in 1965, but was defeated by former Liberal cabinet minister Jean-Luc Pepin. He spent the next three years working as Caouette's special secretary, and he was party House leader from 1969 to 1972.

His death reduces Social Credit strength in the Commons to 10.

A most sensible move

GOVERNMENTS are knocked for mistakes but get precious little in the way of praise when they do come up with good projects, good legislation.

Our B.C. government has taken a strong step in the right direction in the field of recreation and should be given full marks for the long overdue action.

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf announced Friday that British Columbia would be embarking on a program of winter and summer athletic games. Not only that, he announced his government had managed to lure away the director of the highly successful Alberta games program, Mr. Ron Butlin.

British Columbia has lagged far behind other provinces in recreation and athletic programs. One of the richest of all provinces had one of the poorest records in recreation achievement. Now we should quickly move to the forefront along with Alberta and Ontario.

The new program does not supplant the B.C. Festival of Sports in that the government cancelled that program quite some time ago — cancelled it as a wasteful, non-productive arrangement. However, the new concept is bound to draw praise from amateur athletic circles throughout the province. The attractive feature is that the program is for the average person — not for the super-star athletes who compete in Olympic and Commonwealth games.

Such advanced athletic performers will not be competitors in the B.C. games. These will be open to athletes from 13 to 90 and the participation total is expected to be close to 60,000 for summer games, with roughly 3,000 finalists going to the actual games.

It is a program designed to not only help all athletic endeavors, but to make sure there can be no dominance by the major population areas of Vancouver and Victoria. Any community with a population of 10,000 or more, will be eligible to bid for the games and past experience has shown these smaller centres possess far greater enthusiasm for such a task, than say, Vancouver.

Sam Bawlf says the primary objective is to foster participation in healthful sport activities by the maximum number of British Columbians, and this, unquestionably, is a solid goal.

The cost will be far less than what it was in the funding of the Festival of Sport debacle. Bawlf estimates the summer games, for instance, will be run on a budget of $250,000 — considerably less than was spent on advertising alone for the "festival" productions.

A most sensible project that should benefit athletic participation in our province to a far greater degree than previously experienced through government sponsorship.

Keeping the larder stocked

IT IS WITH a certain amount of smugness that we Canadians have thought of our vast homeland as one of the world's great breadbaskets. The truth of the matter is that only eight per cent of Canada's land can be farmed and much of that land is classed as marginal. The best farm land is being gobbled up by expanding cities and only British Columbia has effective legislation to stop it.

Perhaps detecting a weakness in the Social Credit government's resolve to protect agricultural land, developers and municipalities make continued attempts to bite away at farm land. A case in point is the application by developers to have over 70 acres of what is described as prime agricultural land in the Duncan area removed from the agricultural land reserve. The application was rejected by the Land Commission but the provincial cabinet is expected to hear an appeal. The Cowichan Region Farmland Defence League has petitioned the government in the hope that the land will not be lost to development.

Last November, when the cabinet rejected a bid to release 1,720 acres of land to the municipality of Chilliwack, the premier called it "a landmark decision which should make our intentions clear." With these words he supposedly ended weeks of speculation that the government was preparing to lift the agricultural land freeze. But now, it seems that Chilliwack is going to try again, this time asking for only 387 acres. The municipality possibly feels that good results may be obtained in smaller parcels of land.

With current bids to remove more land from the agricultural reserve, now is the time for Premier Bennett to clarify his stand on the matter. It is hoped that he will demonstrate once and for all this government's intentions to protect the farm lands of B.C. Alternate lands will simply have to be found for industry and housing.

Just this past week at a meeting of the Royal Society of Canada, Canadians were warned that if farm land was not protected, the country could be short of food in 20 years. Dr. Fred Bentley, president of the International Soil Science Society and dean of agriculture at the University of Alberta, told the society that Canadians have long been prone to over estimating the agricultural land endowment of this country.

He lauded the current B.C. legislation while at the same time calling the growth around Edmonton and Calgary "horrifying" because three-quarters of the land absorbed qualifies as top farm land.

"There are two very powerful vested interests at work here," Bentley said, "the farmer who can sell for $15,000 an acre land that would otherwise sell for $1,000 an acre and the developer who can buy it for $15,000 and sell for $50,000."

Developers can find alternatives but replacing good, productive farm land would be difficult, if not impossible. For this reason, protective measures must be taken today, if Canadians want to eat tomorrow.

Pictures do lie

Wagner's indignation justified

By PAUL HELLYER from Ottawa

Anyone concerned about government spending will be stunned by the two prescriptions for Canadian broadcasting put forward last week by Al Johnson and Judy LaMarsh.

The CBC president wants to spend mountains of money to expand his FM radio and French TV networks as well as launch a new television network — TV2 a la U.K. — in a last-ditch effort to Canadianize us.

LaMarsh would like to scrap all TV networks and set up a new multi-channel CBC-type monster. Each channel would appeal to a special audience, i.e. sports, drama, news, public affairs, etc., and in theory the range of choice in programming would be enlarged — "greater freedom". Judy calls it. And it would be all Canadian.

This idea borrowed from Stuart Griffiths and Roy Faibish (Faibish is now a CRTC commissioner) is supposed to provide the maximum freedom of choice in programming. But in fact it is statism in the nth degree. One all-powerful bureaucracy would have exclusive jurisdiction over what we see and hear — an alarming form of absolute censorship.

We had an object lesson last week in the two-part series on organized crime. It was great television and proved — Johnson take note — that us yokels will watch Canadian TV when it's worth watching. As investigative journalism, the series was fascinating and compelling and provided a public servic by letting us in on the scope and methods of the underworld.

But the other side of the coin had a different ring. The CBC producers crossed the bounds of decency in guilt by association and innuendo. Several of the MPs mentioned in the shows, Charles Caccia, Al Lawrence, John Reynolds and Claude Wagner, thought they had been maligned or unfairly treated. Two are suing the CBC.

Wagner's case was the most blatant. No evidence was presented to show even the remotest connection with the underworld. And anyone familiar with Wagner's record or who took the trouble to check would know that he had a reputation for fighting crime as attorney general, minister of justice and judge in Quebec.

Nevertheless, after pointing a finger at Reynolds, who claims the CBC deceived him, manipulated his testimony and lied to him, the program implicated Wagner by the simple device of showing Reynolds as a close supporter and confidante in the 1976 Tory leadership campaign. The Mafia, the program said, was watching the outcome with interest. The inference was given that organized crime preferred Wagner over Clark — without a shred of substantiation.

They say that pictures don't lie, but those did. And whether the particular exerpts were used deliberately or simply because some good file footage was available is irrelevant. The result was a smear of monstrous proportions which fully justified Wagner's indignation.

Byron Harrington, the Vancouver immigration officer, also has reason to be offended. He was made to look guilty even though the producers had already been informed by the RCMP that he had been thoroughly investigated and cleared.

In addition, he was not told he was being interviewed for the CBC. According to a spokesman for immigration minister Bud Cullen, the interviewer passed himself off as a special investigator for the RCMP — an offence under the Criminal Code.

And there was no sign of any microphone of camera. Apparently the camera was hidden across the street, which is the reason the picture was periodically interrupted by passing cars and trucks.

So the producers may have been guilty of unauthorized electronic surveillance, another indictable offence.

The CBC may try to rationalize their deceptions on the basis of the larger public good. Yet curiously after producing a show which was largely based on wiretapping that would not now be legal, and having created a public demand that action be taken against organized crime, they promote the views of commentators who would deny the police the wider wiretape powers requested as a necessary aid in their investigations.

The episode reminds us of the incredible power of the electronic media for good or for evil. The public expose was commendable yet, regardless of what the courts may say in the months ahead, reputations were tarnished unnecessarily in the process.

Ottawa Offbeat

A gesture that won't lose votes

By RICHARD JACKSON

It was strictly a "gesture of affection and esteem," they all insist, that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau should invite John Diefenbaker to share his sleeping quarters aboard the Armed Forces Boeing 707 to London.

"They," all of them, both Liberal and Conservative, are the personal aides of the two leaders.

And no, "honestly," they swear with straight faces, "that there should be anything political construed in it didn't occur to either of them."

★ ★ ★

Maybe so. Perhaps that's the way the two leaders in their mutual regard look at it.

But it isn't the way thousands of voters see it.

For when the prime minister invited Dief aboard, because, as he explained, it was the only way The Old Warrior was going to be able to lie down and get a little sleep, he must have picked up who-knows-how-many-thousands of new votes.

★ ★ ★

Friends and admirers of Dief — they increase with his increasingly incredible years as a living, growing legend — are giving the prime minister highest marks for doing the utterly unexpected.

The thing had class.

Some of them may have been among those who didn't merely dislike and distrust, but despised Pierre Trudeau.

They'll be seeing him now in a new and brightly shining light.

Maybe when the two leaders went aboard the big jet like old chums the thought of votes never entered their aides' heads.

But it sure has since.

And the way the story is being told, each one of those old always-faithful-to-Dief Tory votes is worth two.

★ ★ ★

Since every ballot is a two-way thing, a former Tory vote going Liberal is not just a plus for Pierre Trudeau but a minus for Joe Clark.

In a less sophisticated day before modern "media power" could make or break political leaders, the Tories missed the chance to cash in on a not totally dissimilar situation.

Dief was prime minister then, returning from Washington where he had signed the Columbia River Treaty.

★ ★ ★

Aboard his government Viscount aircraft, in addition to his wife Olive, his secretary and aides, and a small press party, was a United States Army Sergeant, Harry Miller.

How come this stranger flying to Ottawa, guest of the prime minister?

Turned out he was the son of a shoe repairman with a shop on Ottawa's Byward Market where the thrifty Dief usually had his Oxfords resoled.

The old cobbler was dying of cancer and on Dief's last visit to the shop, had asked him to look up his son and assure him the doctor had given him reason for hope.

Dief knew it wasn't true.

Through the Canadian Embassy and the brass at the Pentagon, he got in touch with Sergeant Miller and flew him home for the farewell to his father.

"But not a word in the papers," Dief warned his press party, "this is a private, personal, family matter and nobody else's business."

Nor has there been a word of it, until now, 16 years later.

Judgment on Amin

From The Christian Science Monitor

For too long the outrageous brutality and often childish actions of Idi Amin of Uganda have gone uncensured by his fellow African leaders. Hence it is laudible that the Commonwealth heads of government, with many Africans among them, forcefully have branded the Amin regime for what it is.

The representatives of the 34 nations meeting in London avoided mentioning President Amin by name. But that small compromise to personal sensitivities does not dilute the condemnation of the Amin regime for its "disregard for the sanctity of human life" and its "massive violation of basic human rights." Seldom has a nation more deserved such opprobrium from its neighbors and the world at large.

It took courage to speak out. But Prime Minister James Callaghan and his fellow Commonwealth members rightly perceived that the Britons and other working in Uganda would have wanted it no differently. They are there precisely because they value what Ugandans potentially have to offer to themselves and to Africa. Pointing to the true state of affairs can only serve to impress on Mr Amin that it is never too late to keep from justifying further charges against him.

Armageddon is postponed as China updates forces

By GWYNNE DYER
From Britain

The great Chinese panic about an imminent world war is over. They are not admitting it in public, of course — last month Defence Minister Yeh Chien-ying said that Chinese defence industries were in 'a race against time' to prepare for a war between the superpowers 'at an early date' — but such statements are mainly meant to stimulate the military efforts of Russia's other opponents.

Paradoxically, the proof that Peking has decided that Armageddon will be postponed lies in the May 9 announcement that China would henceforward concentrate on the rapid modernization and re-equipment of its armed forces. This statement signals the decisive victory of the advocates of large, well-equipped regular forces over the "people's war" concept, with its stress on the militia and on protracted guerrilla resistance by China's millions as the main defence against a Russian attack.

This dispute was always inextricably tangled up with rivalry between the "radicals" and the "moderate" in the Chinese leadership. The radicals favored the militia concept partly because it accorded with their "vulgar Maoist' conception of warfare, and more practically because it gave them a power base. Similarly, the regular armed forces were inevitably more interested in shiny new weapons and a high defence budget, and the political stability that would speed the development of Chinese defence industries.

The practical military argument in China revolved around the question of how soon a Soviet invasion might come. If it were due within a few years, then there was no other choice but to concentrate on "people's war." Only if you thought you might have a decade or more was it worth building up the regular forces to the point where they could actually deter a Russian invasion or stop it near the frontiers.

There was never a pro-Russian faction in the bitter Chinese internal disputes of the past decade; the differences only arose over the right strategy to adopt in defence against the Soviet Union. Even before the radicals were finally and decisively defeated with the arrest of the "Gang of Four" last October, the armed forces were already making headway with their insistence on modern weapons.

That course has now been confirmed, and it clearly distresses the Soviet Union. For the longer run, after all, it poses a much greater threat to the Soviet Union than the passive defence enshrined in "people's war." The Russian press optimistically suspended its vitriolic attacks on the Chinese leadership for a time after Mao's death, but since last April the ritual vilification of Peking has resumed.

In mid-May Pravda accused China of advocating "a new global slaughter." The Russian paper asked rhetorically, "Is it not clear that the nuclear rocket race launched by China — not without the approval of the military-industrial circles in the United States, West Germany and several monopolies in France, Japan and Britain — is aimed at threatening not only the Soviet Union, but also the cause of world peace?"

It is certainly not clear. China is a nuclear midget, whose few hundred nuclear warheads are deployed strictly for retaliatory purposes. It has at the most half a dozen missiles capable of reaching cities in European Russian (if they can get through Soviet anti-missile defences) and nothing else with a range greater than 1500 miles.

The Chinese Peoples' Liberation Army is incapable of operating in strength more than a hundred miles or so beyond China's borders in any direction (and probably not at all across the well-defended Soviet frontier). The consensus of Western military experts is that Chinese conventional military technology is about 20 years out of date. Most Chinese anti-tank weapons would probably fail to penetrate modern Soviet armour, and only 50 or so of China's 40,000 combat aircraft could stay in the same sky with modern Soviet planes.

For some years to come, China must still rely on the "people's war" concept of defence, even though it means accepting that large parts of China would be overrun and devasted in war. Development of a modern armaments industry will take much time: Chinese industry lags in electronics, high-quality steels and other strategic metals, and Chinese design teams have much leeway to make up.

The determination is there, though, and modernization of weapons can be speeded greatly by technology transfers from abroad. In the most eighteen months China has ordered Spey engines (used in Britain's Phantom fighters) from Rolls Royce, and over 100 Messerschmitt BO-105 helicopters equipped with military missions from West Germany.

It has also reportedly bought at least a quarter-million tons of aluminium and quantities of other strategic metals such as manganese in the West, probably for a new fighter aircraft, and last November the United States approved the sale of two large computers which can be adapted for military use. To some extent the Russians are right in saying that the West is willing to help in the modernization of China's defences.

Given the high military influence in the new Chinese regime, the instinctive preference of regular soldiers for a more professional and technological approach to defence, and the inherent desirability of defending China on its frontiers rather than in the heartland, this trend is likely to continue. China's leadership, while still concerned about the possibility of border clashes or limited Soviet military operations, has evidently decided that World War III is not just around the corner after all.

B.C. suppliers pay questioned

The willingness (announced the other day) by our provincial government to pay B.C. suppliers of material needed, as much as five per cent more than might be necessary from other Canadian sources and ten per cent more than from foreign sources, raises several questions which, so far, seem not to have been asked by anyone — even the Opposition.

First of all how many B.C. suppliers charge more than five per cent — delivered here — than anyone else in Canada, for things the government buys? One thing certain it is probable there will be a few more since this announcement than there were before it was made.

Second: How have they managed to remain in business unless the grateful taxpayer has already been propping them up? This goes for those competing with foreigners as well.

Third: It is understood the Canadian Manufacturers Association has praised this move. Thus do the great inflation fighters behave. (Not a question of course but a statement.) The question is — does this endorsation constitute qualification for ex-mayor Peter Pollen's Flat Earth Society?

The suggestion by the government that this will encourage or stimulate the B.C. economy is one of the most extraordinary aberrations to emanate from any public body, a collection not universally noted for making much sense. This is the same kind of dunderheaded nonsense which guides Mr. Whalen when he forces Canadians to financially support the production of huge quantities of various farm products, butter for example, which they are then not allowed to consume because the price is ridiculously high.

Bill 33

Since Mr. Barrett's boycotting of Legislature at the second reading of Bill 33, people will be more aware that public financing for independent schools is under legislation.

It is to be hoped that many people will obtain a copy of Bill 33 from the Queen's Printer before judging a document about which they are not fully informed.

The Federation of Independent Schools Association has printed a number of informative bulletins which deal with statistics concerning education across Canada and which provide answers to questions raised about independent schools in B.C.

Local independent school administrators and teachers can give interested members of the public the philosophies and curriculum details of their school in particular. Parents and students involved in the local independent schools are also excellent sources of information.

I believe in freedom of choice. I believe that the choice of education for one's children is one of the prime concerns for parents today. The independent school offers an educational alternative and should be available to any parent desiring that alternative regardless of economic status.

Fortunately, my children are able to attend the school of our choice. It happens to be an independent school. It does not mean I am against all other schools in the area — it does mean that it suits my requirements as to the standards of education and values.

Bill 33 deserves careful consideration by a well-informed public. It offers parents freedom of choice in the education of our most important natural resource — our children.

Stand lauded

I viewed some of the debate on Bill 33 (funding independent schools) in the Legislature on June 13 and feel obliged to make a brief comment. Congratulations to the members of the official Opposition on their clear and forthright arguments for postponement of six months for second reading of this bill. Thoughtful, well-articulated statements were made to a frequently almost - emptied house.

The NDP members rightly insisted that such a fundamental issue as giving funding to religious and private schools from public dollars must first be debated openly by the public. Additional monies can only come from already overburdened taxpayers, unless Dr. McGeer has his own private printing press to roll off the so-called New Money.

It was a great pity that more members of the public were not in the House to witness the erosion of a 105 year tradition in this province — public dollars for public education.

While our public school system is indeed fraught with weaknesses, the inherent strengths are found in the system's ability to integrate children of many cultures and ethnic and racial backgrounds. Within the public school system there exists a climate of non-partisan, non-denominational egalitarianism. Can independent schools boast of these same qualities? Congratulations to the Opposition on extremely well-made points followed by a well-deserved boycott of the second reading of Bill 33. Many citizens of this province will no doubt applaud their stand.

Responsibility

I feel it is necessary to write regarding the pamphlet What is a Baby Worth? That a minority opinion should be widely-distributed through the mail is abhorrent. Today's society needs information. The key to lessening the rate of need for abortion is control. Sexually there are two choices: sexual abstinence; responsible sexuality with birth control.

The human problems presented in the pamhlet are ongoing problems in human life. They will not be alleviated by unwanted babies being born. Women should not become baby machines for adopting couples. The controversy regarding abortion is an emotional one. It cannot be stated too strongly that the key to a better society is education for responsibility. Parents should encourage their children from an early age to be caring, responsible individuals. A wanted, caring child will become a caring parent if they so choose, when they choose.

The Motto Every Child a Wanted Child is a good one. Perhaps now it could read Every Pregnancy a Wanted Pregnancy. We should strive for education of all people in all methods of birth control. A positive approach to the problem of unwanted pregnancies is needed.

Good manners

In your issue of June 14 our worthy Prime Minister is quoted as saying "a quarter or a third of Canadians feel deep emotional attachments to the Queen." I simply cannot believe that three quarters, or two thirds, of the population of a great and highly respected country such as Canada, which recognizes and acknowledges our great and noble sovereign Lady as Queen of Canada, can at heart be anti-royalist or at worst indifferent to her position and I challenge Mr. Trudeau to openly state the basis on which he arrived at this astounding conclusion!

In a democratic society it is true that every citizen has a right to his own personal opinions but surely in public life there are occasions when discretion and good manners should prevail and one should learn to keep such feelings to himself.

As for the rest of Mr. Trudeau's remarks, assuming he has been correctly quoted, I dare not comment for you would be unable to print my remarks in any case. Suffice it therefore to say that for a man in his exacted and privileged position, who was at that time participating in the jubilee celebrations and enjoying the hospitality of a sister country as an honored guest, his general behavior and expression of indifference were beneath contempt!

I myself am a loyal Canadian citizen, having taken out naturalization papers many years ago, but I am like many thousands of other Canadians staunchly loyal to our great Head of state and it is with a great feeling of embarrassment and shame that I read of our chief representative behaving in such a boorish and indiscreet manner.

Pro-Life pamphlet sensational

I find the Pro-Life Society's recent pamphlet lacking in credibility — it dwells upon a sensational aspect of our society without reviewing the situation as a whole.

Should I believe that it is my right as a human being to not use my system to support a non-self-sustaining organism (especially should I deem it detrimental to my mental or physical health), the pamphlet insinuates that I am anti-life and get my kicks from abortion. Neither insinuation is true. Doing away with an organism that threatens my well-being is none other than self-defence. And seeing it as self-defence brings up what this issue is really about: the fact that when it comes to poverty and denial of rights, it is women and children first. The rights of children will never be gained until those of women exist.

Your efforts would probably help the human community more if you focused your obvious concern, energies and finances upon providing a more supportive environment for the many women who are now struggling as the sole support for their families and for providing better sex education and childcare courses for the many males who have fallen for the pitch that the playboy-consumer role is normal for men and the only fulfilling way to live. (Let's remember that when an abortion occurs, a male and a female have not been responsible for their actions: there is no mention of the male responsibility in your pamphlet.)

And these statements lead to another area in which your pamphlet is unacceptable. It is blatantly sexist. Enough studies have shown that every building block of language, even small pronouns, create a society that offers either bias or equal opportunity. In the pamphlet the aborted fetus is always a he. The pronoun he-she would show that you realize that females are aborted too and are of equal concern.

And there is the woman who carries the fetus. She is more than a vessel that bears children. To be legally opposed to letting her choose to have or not to have an abortion is to say that a woman cannot make survival judgments about her own body. It also implies that she can be discarded for a potential new life. When legal abortion is not available, many women are forced to use unhealthy and harmful means to defend themselves. Let's take care of what lives we have before we laud and create an ill-planned future.

The argument that there are not enough babies for those who want to adopt is also highly questionable. There may not be enough "white" babies, but certainly if we're looking at the human situation, we must consider the many who need homes and don't fall into that color category. Such prejudice is racism. And what about the great lack of adequate foster homes? Again, we have more than enough to deal with when it comes to child-rearing.

The degradation of women can also be seen in the idea that women "can just have the baby and give it up for adoption." This is to consider that a woman or female child is just a machine for producing babies without feelings after carrying a fetus for 9 months. Women do have feelings and often don't want to give up their babies should it live to full term. But what does this society offer a single parent? Poverty and pity. That's the problem to hit! But your pamphlet shunts it to the last page and obscurity.

It's a nasty subject when some are trying to dictate that others cannot choose what is healthy for themselves — and certainly supporting another organism may be detrimental to one's well being. The question is not pro- or anti-abortion; the question has to do with choice. And the issue is one of changing the focus from a society that commercializes sex with babies as a by-product to a society that plans its future generation with mutual respect for females and males, children and adults.

A DOUBTER.

Cry now for life of quality

Since the distribution of the pamphlet What is a Baby Worth?, it has been interesting to observe the complete change of attack by the local pro-abortion (or pro-choice as they prefer to be called) movement. No longer do they refer to the fetus as a clump of cells, a blueprint, a blob of protoplasm or a biochemical process. To reduce the unborn child to this level in light of the scientific data published would be folly.

Now the cry is for a life of quality and purpose, whatever that may mean. The unspoken part of this new slogan states that those who, at some time or other, may not measure up, are expendable.

The issue of abortion is much more serious than the average citizen may realize because the acceptance of this practice strikes at the very core of our human dignity. We have taken human life out of the category of an inalienable right and hung a price tag on it.

Recently a Vancouver pro-life physician related the case of a young woman whom he had seen through the first five happy months of her planned pregnancy. When her husband unexpectedly won an all-expense paid trip which coincided with the baby's delivery date that unborn child was suddenly labelled unwanted. When her doctor refused to terminate the baby's life the mother simply shopped around until she found a physician who would.

Of course this is an isolated incident (unfortunately such reasons for abortion are becoming increasingly common), but it does show the ludicrous aspect of the unwanted child theory. Did the unborn baby suddenly become less human because he was unwanted? Of course not, his status had changed only in the eyes of others. Yesterday a planned, wanted human being — he was protected by our laws. Today an unwanted nuisance — he is exterminated.

It is interesting to note that Germany legalized abortion in 1927 on the grounds that the fetus was a parasite. The next step was to do away with any parasite such as the senile, the deformed, the retarded and eventually anyone who disagreed. The key to their strategy was to label the fetus then define the label.

I can think of no better summary than this quotation from the November 1975 address of Cyril Smith, British Liberal MP for Rochdale, Lancashire. After naming the plight of the unborn child as the human rights issue of our century he said:

"I can definitely say that I started life as an unplanned, unwanted pregnancy. But as one of the 'poor bastards' who they would like to see rubbed out — nobody can fool me with the idea that by killing off illegitimate or supposedly unwanted children we are going to create a more loving attitude toward them. This is sheer humbug and the pro-abortionists must know it."

How the animals won

By DON COLLINS Colonist Reporter

Perhaps it all started several years ago on that fateful day that I interviewed the man from the Flat Earth Society.

He used my cigarette package to demonstrate that the world was indeed flat. Then he walked off with my cigarettes.

My light treatment of his serious claim didn't please him.

"I am fixing you with the ancient curse of Snizzlebop," he snarled into the phone the day after the story appeared. "Maybe not this year, or next year, but one day the animal kingdom will get you."

I waited. And waited. Nothing much happened, other than the mental torture that was inflicted upon me from time to time by a brutal city editor. But his striking resemblance to an enraged ape was not enough to convince me that the curse was taking effect.

◆ ◆ ◆

He wore shoes, and rumor had it that he had passed his rabies test.

A few years ago, however, strange things began to happen.

First of all, it was just a matter of humiliation.

I went to a farm in connection with a story I was covering and was treed by a bull that turned out to be a cow.

Everyone laughed. The cow smiled.

Some time later I was tramping through the woods with a case of beer on my shoulder. (One must never venture into the wilds without the necessary medical supplies.)

There was a crashing sound in the underbrush. An unseen monster was heading in my direction.

My trained ear told me I was being pursued by a moose. And this was rutting season, a time when a bull moose will challenge trucks and trains or anything that moves.

Up the tree I went, only to look down and see that the mighty moose was in reality a water spaniel.

Embarrassment wasn't my worst fate this time. In my haste I had dropped the beer over a rocky embakment.

◆ ◆ ◆

It was about this time that I met a girl from the horsey set.

"You can ride, of course?" she ventured.

"Certainly," I replied, not daring to mention that my experience had been confined to the merry-go-around.

So off we rode toward the sunset, she on a horse that obeyed her every command, and me on a grumpy half-blind beast that knew me for what I was — an awkward novice.

The horse bolted. I lost the reins and for a nightmarish half minute or so hung onto the mane. The horse did not like this at all. He threw me into a bush.

The girl left me where I lay. She had no time for a man who could not prove mastery over beast.

One day I married another girl who didn't care that much for horses. Eventually we filled our home with two children and a mongrel named Kris.

For a while, all went well. Then one day the dog fixed me with a look of contempt and went into an epileptic fit.

This, as it turned out, was to become a regular feature. Her timing was uncanny. She would wait for one of those moments of panic when I was rushing feverishly to get out of the house to keep an urgent appointment. Then, with what seemed like a fiendish smile, she would go into a fit.

The appointment would have to broken.

I know now what I didn't know then. One should not lunge blindly toward a washer. The washer cannot be moved by one's skull. My head still throbs when I think of it.

As the summer season approached this year the world seemed full of promise. The sun shone. The flowers bloomed. The air sweet.

The ancient curse of Snizzlebop was forgotten.

Until the worms came.

They came by the hundreds, those little green cutworms, then by the thousands, and seemingly by the millions.

They dropped down from the oaks on their self-induced threads to haunt me at every turn.

They got into my hair and down my shirt, and one day one of them took refuge in my coffee.

"I had to stop cutting the grass," I told my wife one morning.

"Why?"

"These little green things are getting all over me. I can't go on."

She thought I was over-acting. And there we stood engulfed in an argument over nothing more important than worms.

◆ ◆ ◆

As the days passed, the little beasts staged an all-out invasion in an effort to capture our home. For some unexplained reason they established a beachhead on our front porch and covered the doorway to such an extent we were forced to surrender.

The back door became the only safe entrance and exit. And on occasion, that too had its hazards.

Finally, they were gone to wherever it is cutworms go when they tire of tormenting humans.

So one day this week I set out to resume my grass cutting chores. Little did I know that other traps had been set for me.

In the backyard I slipped on something and mowed down a small portion of ripening strawberries.

Out front the enemy was patiently waiting.

One of the oaks on the lawn is covered with an enormous vine which, by my estimation, has become home to 314,278 birds.

Occasionally, one of their number commits suicide by flying headlong into one of our front windows. But the others obviously don't look on it as suicide. They think I am working some kind of evil plot against them and have been repaying me in the best way they know how.

My car stands today as a splended example of random spray painting.

The grass cutting incident was the final straw.

I stopped to pick up some twigs and something landed solidly on the back of my head.

The birds had won the day. The grass remained uncut.

And now, in all humility, I want to tell that man from the Flat Earth Society that I am ready to surrender.

If only he will remove the ancient curse of Snizzlebop I will tell the world I am a profound believer in his claim that the world is flat.

I know it is. I have this feeling that I am hanging from the edge while an endless procession of creatures steps on my fingers.

U.S. court blocks convict unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court ruled on Thursday that prisoners have no legal right to unionize because prisoners surrender some of their constitutional rights when they go behind bars.

While the court's seven-member majority did not say specifically that prison officials may prohibit unions, the decision gave state prison officials broad powers to keep such groups from all traditional union functions—holding meetings, soliciting for membership and mailing union literature from outside prison walls to prisoners.

Justice William Rehnquist, writing for the majority, said: "The fact of confinement and the needs of the penal institution impose limitations on constitutional rights."

He said prisoners retain only those constitutional rights that do not interfere with the running of prisons.

Chief Justice Warren Burger approved the ruling and interpreted it to mean that prisoners have no constitutional right to form unions.

The decision reversed a legal victory for a group of North Carolina prisoners who incorporated a union in 1974 to improve working conditions and resolve prisoner grievances.

The union attracted 2,000 members in 40 North Carolina prisons and jails before state officials clamped dbwn on all union activities.

Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall dissented. They called the court's ruling "a gaint step backwards" to "a time not so very long ago when prisoners were regarded as slaves of the state."

Second body found

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Police officers in a helicopter have found a body believed to be that of a second security guard whose armored car was commandeered and robbed last month of $288,000, federal agents said.

The body, belived to be that of Cecil Newkirk, 53, of Phoenix, Ariz., was discovered near Lake Mead, about 100 yards from the spot where Newkirk's fellow Purolator security guard, Russell Dempsey, 51, also of Phoenix, was found dead one week ago.

Newkirk and Dempsey disappeared May 24 when their armored truck was commandeered on a run from Phoenix to Prescott, Ariz. The truck was found near Phoenix the next day, minus its $288,000 cargo.

Authorities said they were running tests on both bodies to see if the victims had been drugged. The FBI said it had no suspects in the case.

A boating enthusiast found the body of Dempsey, clad in his security guard uniform and a sack over his head and shoulders, floating in Lake Mead June 16. An autopsy showed he had drowned.

Jack Keith, special agent in charge of the FBI office in Las Vegas, said the second body was being brought to Las Vegas for examination by the coroner, who had Newkirk's fingerprints and dental charts.

"We of course, will not know for sure until the comparisons are made, but it would appear to be the body of the second Purolator security guard," said Keith.

Band settles for $1 million

FORT NELSON (CP) — A settlement of $1 million Thursday ended a year-long dispute between the Fort Nelson Slavee Indian band and two resource companies in northeastern B.C.

The band had prohibited Quintana Explorations and Hudson Bay Oil from trespassing on reserve land or from removing gas from the land until royalties were paid.

The band still is negotiating with the provincial government for a transfer of the reserve's mineral rights to its name.

Jet Lag Jamieson, Pierre Trubent

Tory tags political pets

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Meet Jet Lag Jamieson.

Then there is the rest of the cast — Pierre Trubent, Ed Trubroad and a host of "fat cabinet ministers."

Lump them all together in a short witty speech and you've got John Crosbie's idea of what is wrong with the Liberal government and why he thinks it has to be dumped in the next federal election.

In what appeared like a rallying of the troops, the federal Tory energy critic told the Greater Victoria Progressive Conservative Women's Association Friday that Prime Minister Trudeau was arrogant, autocratic, incompetent and guilty of deceitfully playing on Canadian unity to stay in office.

Crosbie (PC-St. John's West) said the Liberals were frightening rather than wooing Quebec residents with what he saw a lust for centralization. Trudeau and Quebec Premier Rene Levesque had been engaging in a sham battle over unity, he said, while such national ills as unemployment went untreated.

He was particularly angered by the unemployment rate of 20 per cent in his native Newfoundland.

"Any government that allows one in five to be unemployed should be driven out of office. We shouldn't wait. We should be marching on Ottawa now."

And there was a broad hint that Trudeau's matrimonial problems shouldn't be the grounds for a sympathy vote.

"I don't care if he runs as a swinging bachelor, or a swinging single parent, or swinging double parent, or whatever he runs as — he's got to be driven out."

His pet names for political foes came into play in a variety of ways.

Of External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson, he said:

"I call him Jet Lag Jamieson. The other day he flew to St. John's in a government jet (he estimated the cost at $4,000 to $5,000) just to present a cheque. Perhaps they don't trust the post office."

The Liberals and NDP were so similar in style now, he said that he was forced to refer to the leaders by such names as Pierre Trubent and Ed Trubroad.

Crosbie also had two new versions of what the letters NDP stand for.

Nationally he calls the NDP "the party of Nicely Decent Perceptions."

"In Saskatchewan I call them the let's Nationalize the Damn Potash party."

The "fat" tag on cabinet ministers (there was no mention of the rotund Jamieson at this point) came as he explained that it was wise to nominate Conservative candidates early for an election he felt might come in the fall.

"There's nothing that worries a cabinet minister more — a big fat cabinet minister flying all over the world in his jet — than to know there is a candidate being nominated in his riding."

In a more serious vein, Crosbie said Trudeau and Levesque were staging "artificial confrontations" and using the question of unity simply for political advantage.

Trudeau was using the issue as a "security blanket" and he warned that "if we all get sucking our thumbs he thinks he'll win."

"If Rene Levesque had not existed he (Trudeau) would have invented him," he said.

Disturbed by what he sees as a bogus election issue, Crosbie told the women: "The time has come for us to take the gloves off on this issue."

Claiming that the Liberal bilingualism program had meant nothing to unity, he said:

"The people of Quebec are not concerned if they come to B.C. and you can't speak French to them. It's how they're going to survive in Quebec that bothers them."

He said Quebecers are afraid of increased centralization as they look to Ottawa and Hull and see the mammoth construction of new government buildings.

"They look on Quebec as their homeland and as a nation in the sense of the people who live there. They don't look to Trudeau. He is an arrogant man, an autocratic man interested only in political survival."

At another point he said: "I'm prepared to put up with somebody who's a bit arrogant, but when he's arrogant and incompetent, it's intolerable. He's got to go."

Crosbie, who spent several days on the West Coast to study the problems of an oil tanker route, said during a subsequent interview he felt it would be better for the Alaskan oil to be taken by tankers to Port Angeles, rather than Cherry Point, Wash.

Because of the location of Port Angeles there would be less chance of damage in the event of a spill, he said.

He believes there is no way of avoiding the use of tankers.

"The only real alternative is that you don't get the oil."

Crosbie said he was unaware of a poll (taken by federal Conservative Stanley Schumacher) which indicated the party would lose seats in Alberta to the Liberals. The poll also indicated the Liberals would win Calgary.

"I haven't heard about it. But in politics, anything is possible," Crosbie said.

"The line I use about Alberta, though, is that in the next election Alberta will be de-Hornered."

His forecast was for the defeat of rebel Jack Horner who bolted the Tories to sit in the Liberal cabinet.

In an Ottawa report earlier in the day, Crosbie said consumers would have to accept continued oil price increases.

"We can't shield ourselves forever," he said.

A day earlier, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie announced the price of gasoline would rise by 14 cents a gallon and heating oil by 12.4 cents in four instalments during the next two years.

Crosbie said he would only be concerned about prices if they brought the cost in Canada above U.S. levels.

Thatcher son switches to Tories

REGINA (CP) — A Liberal member of the Saskatchewan legislature announced Friday he will sit as a Progressive Conservative.

Colin Thatcher, son of the late Liberal Premier Ross Thatcher, was the second Liberal in a year to move to the Conservatives and his switch tied the two opposition parties in the house at 11 seats each.

Gary Lane, representing Qu'Appelle, switched last fall.

Thatcher, member for Thunder Creek, has said he got into politics to defeat the New Democratic Party, and he does not feel the province can support two anti-socialist parties.

He said Friday his major concern was the dominant position federal Liberals have in provincial politics.

St. Jean Baptiste blues

MONTREAL (UPI) — Organizers are holding a post-mortem on the St. Jean Baptiste Day celebrations, billed as the biggest nationalist festival in Quebec's history, even before they are over.

The inauguration Thursday night of the Fete de la St. Jean, a 300-year-old celebration honoring the province's patron saint but politicized this year into a "national holiday" by the separatist government of Premier Rene Levesque, had everything going for it except people.

Thursday's spectacular inaugural at the Olympic Stadium attracted only 30,000 people although all the tickets to the 70,000-seat showplace had been sold in advance.

Organizers speculated that fear of possible violence in a confined space may have kept people away.

There were no violent incidents.

A Jarry Park festival Thursday night attracted a smaller-than-expected and lukewarm crowd of 20,000 while in two other areas of the city — the cobbled streets of the old quarter and downtown's Crescent Street — the festivities were described as "boring" by participants.

Only on St. Denis, a street lined with outdoor cafes habitually patronized almost exclusively by young French-speaking Quebecers, did the festival take root in its traditional way.

Hootchie lure takes 47-pound chinook

Mike Dyer, 3193 Ayton Place, has taken over the lead in the special section of the King Fisherman contest for the heaviest salmon caught on a hootchie or fly-type lure by a Colonist subscriber, with a 47-pound chinook.

Dyer was fishing Beechey Head waters Thursday morning, using a blue and green Radiant Squirt, two pounds of weight, and 70 feet of line, when the big chinook struck.

After a 15-minute battle, Dyer was able to boat his prize catch.

He takes the lead from Ron Ebbs-Canavan, who previously held it with a 45.8-pound chinook from Aldridge Point taken on a green hootchie.

Sex devices ruled obscene

OTTAWA (CP) — Sexual devices advertised for sale can be considered obscene materials under the Criminal Code, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Friday.

In a 9-to-0 decision, the high court upheld the conviction of Dick Dechow, fined $250 four years ago for keeping obscene materials for distribution. Dechow owns a sex shop in St. Catharines, Ont., called Erotique.

The conviction was under Section 159 of the Criminal Code, which makes it an offence to keep for distribution any obscene matter. However, part of the section interprets obscenity as any publication which unduly exploits sex, crime, violence and cruelty.

E. W. Trasewick of St. Catharines, Dechow's lawyer, had argued that it was straining to find that his client's articles were publications. The Ontario attorney-general's department had contended that articles displayed and made available to the public were, in fact, publications.

Mr. Justice Ronald Ritchie, writing for the court, said the articles, for "unnatural sexual practices," were displayed in glass cases and advertised by two large signs on the entrance to the store.

At trial, the judge was shown 87 exhibits taken from Erotique and ruled that 16 of them were obscene. These ranged from massagers and an artificial penis to a game called Climax, in which a pertain square had to perform a certain sexual act.

Industrial winner

This photograph titled Rail Tankers, by Gwyneth Eburne of Merlin Photographic Studio in Victoria, received trophy for best industrial entry at this year's print salon held in Parksville by the Professional Photographers of B.C. Robbery trial: 'No proof,' case dismissed

Glen Malcolm Pratt, 22, formerly of 3-1010 Balmoral, was dismissed in Victoria county court Friday after a trial for robbery with violence in a downtown hotel washroom.

The accused man was alleged to have taken a wallet and money from Gerhard Erny, a merchant seaman, using personal violence, to which he pleaded not guilty.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart granted a defence motion by Malcolm Macaulay that the crown had produced no evidence of theft, or proof of ownership of money introduced as an exhibit, and noted that Erny had not been called as a witness.

Two voir dire trials were held during the course of the main trial to determine admissibility of statements made by the accused man to police.

Stewart said the only evidence produced by the crown to indicate the identity of Erny was a copy of handwriting of the man's name in a policeman's notebook, which the constable testified Erny had made.

"But that cannot be regarded as evidence of the fact that person was Gerhard Erny and therefore there is no evidence.

I don't like to see a case fall on grounds like this, but the crown chose not to call the most important witness who could have given evidence," Stewart said.

Court was told Erny had been drinking and playing pool with several others in both the Century Inn and King's Hotel the afternoon of June 18, 1976.

Bartender-waitress Lucille Allen noticed "a German fellow" enter the Kings and sit by himself at some point in the afternoon. A man she knew as Marty Alphonse, accompanied by a person she later identified as the accused man, entered the beverage room shortly afterward and sat at a table next to the German.

Within a short time the two later arrivals had joined the German at his table and the German was buying beer for them, the waitress said.

They stayed for two or three hours and about the time she took her 5 p.m. break, she recalled, the German got up to go to the men's washroom, situated next to the bar and close to a rear fire exit.

The other two men followed him into the washroom a moment later, and that was the last she saw of them that day.

But she saw the German emerge with blood coming from his nose and his clothes dishevelled. He was "fairly excited," Allen said, and spoke to her in German, which she did not understand except for the word "police."

The man then left the side of the room where Allen was serving and walked around other parts of the pub, she said. When he came back 20 to 30 minutes later he had police with him.

Herbert Woods, of 614 Esquimalt, told the court Alphonse was his cousin and that he had been with him at the Century Inn earlier that day in company with the German and the accused man, whom he named.

Pratt, Alphonse and the German left that pub and Woods stayed to play some more pool, he said. Alphonse returned a while later, spoke to Woods, then left again. Woods said Alphonse was then drunk.

The next time he saw Alphonse was in jail after a plainclothesman arrested Woods, he said.

Constable Donald J. Bland, of Victoria police, said he was approached by a man bleeding from the nose about half a block up the street from the King's. He had difficulty understanding what the man said because he spoke with a German accent, but he had the man write his name in his notebook, then took him back to the King's.

Bland said he arrested the accused man at the Glenshiel Hotel that evening and took him to the police station. He said he warned the accused man after charging him with robbery with violence, and the accused man made both an oral and written statement.

Jury clears sex magazines

OTTAWA (CP) — Sexually explicit magazines such as Penthouse and Gallery meet community standards of tolerance and are not obscene, a County Court jury decided here today.

The jury of seven women and five men acquitted National News Co. Ltd. and W.L. Burger, manager of the magazine distribution company, of possession and distribution of obscene material.

The trial lasted four days and the jury studied the evidence for 11 hours before bringing in the not guilty verdict early Friday.

"They've struck a blow for freedom of expression," defence lawyer Arthur Cogan said after the decision. "It shows Canadian people are not as narrow-minded and immature as law enforcement officers would care to believe."

Cogan said the verdict could have implications in obscenity cases in other parts of Canada. He also said that Ontario Attorney - General Roy McMurtry, who has ordered a crackdown on pornography, should "take a hard look at the direction he's giving his law enforcement officers."

Jury members studied 17 magazines containing what one trial witness described as "page after page of genitals." The magazines contained scenes of persons being tied up, women kissing women and depictions of oral sex. The magazines include Penthouse, Gallery, Oui, Elite, Genesis and National Lampoon.

The jury members included a Senate secretary, a computer analyst, a farmer, a real estate salesman, a nurse and an assortment of civil servants.

They interrupted their deliberations late Thursday to ask Judge Kenneth Fogarty what undue meant in the context of "undue exploitation of sex."

Fogarty said it meant excessive emphasis on sex for "a base purpose, for no valid purpose, for no rhyme nor reason." He also told jurors to disregard extremes in their own personal tastes.

Fogarty told Burger that he had been through quite an ordeal and commended the magazine distributor for screening material before providing it to retail outlets.

During the trial a physician and a psychiatrist told the jury that so-called soft-core pornography causes no harm to most readers and in some cases might be beneficial.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — Soaring oil issues sent the Toronto stock market to its highest point in nine months at the close of moderate trading Friday.

The TSE 300 index was up 3.72 to 1,034.39, a record dating back to Sept. 27, 1976.

Analysts attributed the gain to the rise in the domestic price of crude oil and natural gas announced Thursday.

Oil and gas issues climbed 12.91 to 1,198.38, their highest since May 21, 1976.

A total of 539 contracts were traded on the options market, almost three times the 182 traded Thursday.

CHUM Ltd.'s Class B shares, the day's most active industrial issue, topped the 37 block trades with the sale of 46,000 shares at $8.50 a share.

Celanese Canada Ltd. was second with 19,500 shares at $3.30 a share, followed by a $16,000-share block of Doman Industries Ltd. at $5⅞ a share.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market scored a broad advance in fairly active trading Friday as investor worries over interest rates eased a bit.

Several analysts pointed to the U.S. federal reserve's unexpected report on a decline in the U.S. money supply as a key influence in relieving worries over rising interest rates and spurring the market upward.

"The monetary situation is good, auto sales hit a mid-June record, the economic news is good," said Bud Simmon, analyst for Weeden and Co.

The Dow, which ran into profit-taking and spurred a general decline earlier in the week when it reached the 930 level again hit some preplanned profit taking at that level on Friday.

But Alan Poole of Laidlaw and Coggeshall said he was encouraged that the market did not back away further from the 930 level by the close and saw that as a sign of underlying strength in the rally.

Beech Aircraft gained 1¼ to 25¼ after an announcement that preliminary discussions had begun on a merger between Beech and General Dynamics.

The NYSE's composite index of all common stocks was up .31 to 55.42.

Among Canadian issues on the New York stock exchange, Seagram was up ¾ to 21⅜, Hiram Walker ⅝ to 25⅝ and McIntyre ⅛ to 30.

Campbell Red Lake was down ½ to 23⅝, Dome Mines ⅜ to 43¾, Inco ¼ to 26½ and Massey Ferguson ¼ to 19⅞.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Sales Friday at the Calgary Public Stockyards totalled 550 head, comprising a light run of slaughter cows and feeder cattle. Slaughter cows met a moderate demand from local buyers. There were no slaughter steers or heifers on offer in Friday's trade. Slaughter cows continue to sell under pressure at steady prices. No bulls on offer. D1-2 cows 24-26, D3 22-23.50, D4 18-22. Feeder steers over 800 pounds sold $1 higher while feeder steers over 600 pounds traded $2 higher on an active market. Several loads of above average quality feeder steers 600-700 pounds from one contributor sold to a high of 45.90. Feeder heifers and stock steer and heifer calves sold steady to a good demand from local buyers. Good feeder steers over 800 pounds 37-42, 700-800 pounds 37-42, 600-700 pounds 37-45.90 common to medium over 600 pounds 37-39. Good feeder heifers over 700 pounds 31-36.50, 600-700 pounds 31-36, 500-600 pounds 31-37, common to medium over 500 pounds 35-31. Feeder cows 24-32.59, good stock steer calves 500-600 pounds 36-43.50, 400-500 pounds 36-43, common to medium under 600 pounds 30-36, good stock heifer calves 400-500 pounds 31-37, 300-400 pounds 30-35.50, common to medium under 500 pounds 26-31.

Japanese TV sets curtailed

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — U.S. President Carter has signed a proclamation limiting imports of Japanese color television sets to 1.75 million a year, the White House said Friday.

Japanese makers had been exporting more than 2.5 million color sets annually to the United States, and the American manufacturer Zenith complained that the imports were hurting the domestic industry.

After extensive talks, U.S. special trade negotiator Robert Strauss signed an agreement May 20 with the Japanese limiting the exports.

Protectionism hurts Canada

LONDON (CP) — The Economist, a well-regarded weekly magazine of opinion and analysis, says in an article headed Broaden Canada's Border that Canada should "give its resource-based industries their head and rely less on protectionism."

In the issue dated June 25, the magazine says Canada "has induced the Americans to stop applying strictly their Trading with the Enemy Act to American subsidiaries in Canada. . . ."

"It has curbed the circulation in Canada of American magazines that do not have a substantial Canadian content but which pull in Canadian advertising, and it insists on having the last word on plans to build a gas pipeline from Alaska across Canada."

There is, however, the magazine says, "a big difference between such specific curbs and a logical plan for less Canadian economic dependence on its southern neighbor."

The Foreign Investment Review Act, when it was passed four years ago, appeared to be a possible answer.

"The act is now being used so loosely that it is not even a sluice gate, let alone a dike, to foreign investment."

The article says the United States takes 50 per cent of its Canadian imports in processed and manufactured goods, while Europe takes only 10 per cent and Japan "a miserly three per cent."

The country relies on high tariffs to insulate uncompetitive industries in Canada and has attracted the U.S. and other foreign investors by offering them a protected home market of 22 million consumers."

Edmonton-Victoria

Route denial appealed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines has appealed a Canadian Transport Commission decision denying it permission to fly between Edmonton and Victoria, company president Rhys Eyton told a business group Thursday.

The flight was to originate in Edmonton, stop in Prince George and Vancouver and end in Victoria.

Eyton said the proposed merger with Transair would permit PWA to operate flights from Prince George, Kelowna and Cranbrook, through Calgary and Edmonton, and as far east as Winnipeg.

Kahl tries to save Quadra Steel

The MLA for Esquimalt, Lyle Kahl, Friday said that he was attempting to investigate methods of keeping Quadra Steel from closing its business in Esquimalt.

Quadra, in announcing its impending closedown, said last week that Victoria's steel needs could be served from its branch in Nanaimo. About 15 employees would be out of work if the shutdown occurs.

Kahl, in a prepared statement, said that he was undertaking the study on behalf of the employees involved at their request.

"Mr. Harrison, the general manager of Quadra Steel, indicated June 22nd in a telephone conversation with me that the reason for the closure was one of economics.

"While I can appreciate his concern and that of the employees, I want to say that I was pleased to learn that Quadra would be interested in taking a second look at the closure of their plant.

"It is with the above in mind that I am today contacting my colleagues in government, both provincial and federal, and the officials of the three unions involved to ascertain what can be done.

"I will attempt to open doors for any group, both union and government, so that we can all work in a joint effort towards resolving this problem," Kahl stated.

The Socred MLA also said that he would contact major producers of shipbuilding equipment to speed up or place on a high priority those items that might produce employment. The groups include major forest firms that have recently announced major expansion plans.

MARINE NEWS

Subsidy deadline nearing

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Marine Reporter

Canadian shipbuilders, desperate for orders to breathe life into their hard hit industry, have received encouragement but no immediate commitments from Industry Minister Jean Chretien.

The shipbuilders are particularly worried about the fate of a temporary subsidy increase due to end Aug. 31. Chretien indicated to the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repair Association this week that a decision will be made in August on whether it will continue.

Chretien raised the shipbuilding industry assistance subsidy in March to 20 per cent from 12 per cent of the cost of building a ship. That subsidy increase is to expire at the end of August.

The builders are anxious for a quick decision because they say some orders depend on the amount of subsidy aid they can get.

The roll-on roll-off ship Allunga arrived at Esquimalt early Friday to undergo its annual drydocking. The ship will leave here for New Westminster about July 1.

The cruise ship Fairsea will dock at Ogden Point Wednesday for an overnight stopover on her return trip to San Francisco from Alaska. The ship is scheduled to sail at noon Thursday.

An eight-hour stay in Victoria is scheduled for the cruise ship Royal Viking Star due at Ogden Point at 8 a.m. Thursday from Los Angeles. The ship will leave at 4 p.m. for Juneau, Alaska.

About 14 million board-feet of lumber will be taken aboard the 20,000-ton Norwegian lumber carrier Robert Stove when it arrives Wednesday at Cowichan Bay. The 600-foot long ship will leave for the U.S. eastern seaboard July 5.

Year-round shipping in the St. Lawrence Seaway will be achieved by the year 2000, Robert Timbrell, president of the Dominion Marine Association told a Sarnia service club this week.

He said that plans are well under way for extending the navigation season by combatting ice through various means.

Experiments to date have involved chutes located at the entrances of locks designed to flush away broken ice, heating of lock gates and coating them with paint to which ice will not adhere.

Timbrell said the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority has estimated the cost of completing a three-phase extension of the navigation season to be $17 million. Funding will be shared by Canadian and U.S. authorities.

□

A surplus of shipping capacity might develop on the Great Lakes, says an official of a fleet based in Thunder Bay, Ont.

John Paterson, vice-president of N.M. Paterson and Sons Ltd., said an excess of available tonnage might occur if forecast economic growth through 1981 is not realized at any year.

This might develop "particularly in the bigger boats, such as self-unloaders," he said.

Peter Cresswell, vice-president of Algoma Central Railway in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., said there is little danger of ship capacity outpacing the traffic because of impulse buying or rash ordering.

□

The federal transport department has commissioned a Toronto engineering firm to access the feasibility of the marine mode for transporting oil and gas from the Arctic Islands to market.

The study to cost $229,000 is to be ready by September.

A spokesman for the firm of Albery, Pullerits, and Dickson, said the key part of the study will be to estimate the cost for a marine delivery system.

Mac Blo president:

Higher earnings seen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Calvert Knudsen, president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., told an investment seminar Thursday that the company is aiming for an average annual increase of 15 per cent in per share earnings over the next five years, from a base of $2 a share in 1977.

"We estimate that the $2 figure is the fundamental earning power of the company as it is now," Knudsen told about 50 institutional investors at the seminar sponsored by Pemberton Securities Ltd.

The company's short-range objectives in its capital spending are heavily oriented to productivity improvements, he said. The company's ability to expand production significantly in B.C. is limited by the fact that it is using all of its allowable annual cut, and it cannot expect any major additional allocation of forest resources.

"There could be some incremental expansion in linerboard, and in market pulp from our mill at Harmac on Vancouver Island. But I don't see MB building a brand new pulp mill in B.C.," he said.

In Alabama, where MacMillan Bloedel has pine and hardwood resources, there is potential for expansion in all major product lines, Knudsen said. It also has 50,000 acres planted in pine in Brazil where it hopes to develop enough timber to support an integrated forest products operation.

The short-term market outlook is for deteriorating pulp prices. The brightest spot is North America, said Knudsen, but even here production capacity is outstripping demand.

"We will set lower pulp prices in the third and fourth quarters of this year, and we are facing some downtime at our Harmac pulp mill during the second half," he added.

Knudsen said that total labor costs in the U.S. northwest forest products industry are about 11 per cent less than in B.C. The differential between southern U.S. and Canadian costs is much greater.

He said the U.S. northwest producers have signed a three-year contract with the International Woodworkers of America calling for a total increment over the contract period of about 38 per cent.

"If we are going to make any progress in narrowing the labor cost gap between ourselves and our U.S. competitors, we will have to settle at something less than 65 cents an hour over a one-year period, which will be within the anti-inflation guidelines," he said.

The B.C. forest industry is currently conducting contract negotiation with the IWA.

Coal miners fly to work

VANCOUVER (AP) — Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. of Vancouver will shortly sign a five-year contract to ferry 250 workers a day into the Luscar coal mine in west-central Alberta, President John Pitts told the company's annual meeting Thursday.

The service, believed the first of its kind, is expected to begin this summer and involves flying three shifts of workers 39 miles from Edson to Luscar. The mine is owned by Luscar Sterco Ltd., a subsidiary of Luscar Ltd., an Edmonton-based, British-owned company. The coal is destined for Ontario Hydro.

Pitt said the alternatives were building a new town site and highway over 50 miles of difficult terrain. He said while at first glance the helicopter service appears expensive, it will be economical when compared to the alternatives.

The value of the contract to Okanagan was not disclosed.

Okanagan will use a 28-passenger Sikorsky S-61 on the run, which will take about 20 minutes. Company spokesman Fred Moore said surface transportation would take up to two and a half hours in winter.

Two new faces

Two new directors were elected to the board of the B.C. Central Credit Union at its annual meeting at the Empress Hotel Friday.

Robert Hornal, Thompson Valley, and George Viereck, Prince Rupert, were elected to three-year terms. Ed Cross, Vancouver, was re-elected for another three years as well.

Other board members are P. Podovinikoff, Delta; P. J. Heyming, Kelowna; J. E. Darling, Burnaby; H. A. Down, Sidney; A. R. Glen, Nanaimo; H. Krueger, Trail; E. J. Simpson, Vancouver; S. Raschdorf, Nelson; S. Sutherland, Vancouver; J. Weremchuk and E. Kaulius, Surrey.

The 1978 annual meeting will be held in Vancouver and the 1979 meeting in Penticton.

To bee or not to bee—no question

SOUTH WOODSTOCK, Vt. (AP) — You get more talk than service down at Clyde Wood's garage these days. "Limited service: too much New Deal and old age," reads a sign posted on a grimy window.

You probably won't get to borrow his tools either, another sign indicates: "No tools loaned: reasons same as you might have for not loaning your wife."

But you can get honey as sweet as Wood's talk is tart.

Wood, who should have died in 1935 but wasn't ready, credits the venom from his 40 swarms of bees with saving his life.

As the New York Cancer Research Institute put it in a 1965 annual report that Wood fingers like a precious Bible: "Why do beekeepers have the lowest incidence of cancer?

"Perhaps it is because they are continually receiving injections of bee venom, i.e. bee stings, which cause an acute inflammatory reaction liberating histimine which then activates the reticuloendothelia system — another important defence mechanism against cancer."

At 79, he still isn't ready. But Wood, who bills himself as "the beekeeper who eluded death," loves to tell the story.

"It was Hodgkin's Disease," he says. "I was doomed. It spread to my lung, my spleen and my arm."

Wood recovered.

His love of bees, whose angry buzz his speech resembles, began as a child, when he discovered his first wild hive.

The stocky white-haired mechanic, who thinks nothing of reaching bare-handed into a hive and pulling out bees by the handful, has harvested as much as 5,000 pounds of honey in a single year.

"Shoot, just 'cause they can sting you doesn't mean they have to," he says.

The bees, and the chipmunks, who live behind Wood's garage, are better friends than men, he says. "The damndest fools on this earth got two legs."

Suzuki wins Cybil Award

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. David Suzuki, host of CBC—TV's Science Magazine and CBC Radio's Quirks and Quarks, has been awarded the 1977 Cybil Award, the CBC announced Thursday.

The Cybil Award was given to Suzuki for his contribution to making complex issues of science more understandable and relevant to the general public, the CBC said in a statement.

Suzuki, the fourth winner of the award, is a native of British Columbia and is known internationally for his work in developmental genetics.

Four fingers sewn back

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Four fingers severed from the left hand of a St. Louis County man have been reattached by a microvascular surgery technique in which doctors used microscopes and tiny needles and thread to repair torn arteries, veins and nerves.

A spokesman for the St. Louis University School of Medicine said that the 12-hour operation, performed about three weeks ago, is considered entirely successful.

Buffets on trial in 2 B.C. ferries

Dining rooms in the Queen of Saanich and the Queen of Vancouver will be reopened for buffet meals next week for a two-month trial period, B.C. Ferries announced Friday.

Target date is next Wednesday, just in time for the Canada Day weekend, said William Bouchard, assistant traffic manager.

Meals in the self-serve restaurants will cost about $6.50 for dinner, but less for lunch, he said. The price is to include salad and beverages.

Bouchard said if the experiment was successful, it would be expanded to include all other large ferries in the fleet.

He said the success of the program would be assessed in September.

The restaurants were closed in 1976 because of the high cost involved in operating them on a full-service basis.

The restaurants are to be open from 11 a.m. until the last sailing is completed.

Bouchard said the question of liquor on ferries hadn't been discussed. At the moment, the Queen of Prince Rupert is the only vessel with a bar.

Municipalities skip mobile home meeting

By NANCY BROWN

Municipal representatives were conspicuous by their absence Thursday from the third provincial-regional meeting aimed at providing more mobile home space in the Capital Region.

Sidney was the only municipality represented, with directors from the western unorganized territories making up the rest of the regional representation.

Chairman Howard Drummond (Colwood) and Esquimalt MLA Lyle Kahl each expressed disappointment at the lack of interest from other peninsula councils — Saanich, and North and Central Saanich.

Special efforts had been made to invite them to the meeting, Drummond said.

At least one area within North Saanich is suitable for mobile home development, according to Doug McColl, Vancouver Island's regional manager for housing for the provincial government.

He presented an inventory of Crown land within the region, and said that 50.65 acres on Alec Road in North Saanich could be developed for a mobile home park.

Crown land in the Highlands might also be suitable for mobile home parks, he said.

The crown has acreage in the unorganized areas, but that land would be expensive to develop because of lack of services.

Mean while, the region is that, if approved, would see a park established in the Langford area for 140 mobile homes.

Another application is also expected for land in the Metchosin area, and it is felt that if those applications are approved the pad shortage facing mobile homeowners will be ended.

Kahl said he was disappointed at the lack of interest from the private sector in mobile home park development, in view of provincial government offers to make land available and to assist with the provision of off-site services.

"I've had a number of people contact me with great ideas, but when it comes down to the nitty-gritty they are not really ready to proceed," he said.

"If the situation gets any more critical we may have to look at the possibiliy of having the region or the province involved in park development."

Drummond said he felt the private sector has held off until the region has a bylaw governing mobile home parks. Such a bylaw was introduced and given first reading earlier this week.

Pipe bids meet board dream

Four bids were opened by the Capital Region Board Friday for a supply of 30-inch diameter pipe for the first stage of a water link from the Greater Victoria Water District to the Saanich Peninsula.

All four bids were well below the estimate of $700,000.

Regional engineer Norman Howard said the board had tendered the pipe supply early, while there is little demand.

"I didn't want to wait until the Alaska (gas pipeline got under way and find a shortage of pipe and higher prices," he said.

Once the pipe is installed, it will carry water four miles from Beaver Lake northward to Martindale Road in Central Saanich.

Bids opened were: ITT Grinnell Sales Ltd., Richmond, $665,012; Interprovincial Steel Pipe Corp., Vancouver (three grades of pipe) $554,927, $534,728 and $513,571, Ameron Pipe Div., Portland, Ore., $565,001, and Canron Ltd., Vancouver, $584,044.

Caps stung by Moore

CHICAGO (AP) — A record-setting five-goal performance by Ron Moore swept Chicago Sting to a 5-2 win at Soldier field over Vancouver Whitecaps in the only North American Soccer League game Friday night.

Tom Ord and Buzz Parsons scored for Vancouver.

Masked trio robs pedestrian of cash

Victoria city police are looking for three masked men who jumped out of a parked car Friday morning and robbed a 47-year-old man of between $400 and $500 as he was walking along a street.

Richard Maxwell Flood told police that he was walking along Manchester, near Burnside, at about 12:30 a.m. when a man with a nylon stocking over his head jumped out of a parked, dark, four-door sedan and confronted Flood, brandishing a black revolver.

Flood, who is employed at Bill's Spot at 609 Johnson, said the man told him to "give me your money and don't give us no trouble."

At that time, two other men, also wearing nylon masks over their faces, got out of the vehicle.

After he informed the thugs he had no money, Flood said he was struck in the head from behind and the money was taken from his right front trouser pocket.

The men then returned to the car and fled.

Flood described the first man as about five feet eight inches tall, wearing a green-and-red plaid jacket. The other two, Flood said, were both about six feet tall.

Victoria city police are still investigating the case.

Talks expected soon on last CUPE hurdle

Negotiations are expected to resume soon in an effort to remove the one remaning barrier to a collelctive agreement between the core area municipalities and six locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

All but one of the locals have voted to accept the two-year jackage. Even at that, the only hold-out — the Greater Victoria School Board outside workers local — is in disagreement on only one clause. It wants protection against the contracting out of work.

Saanich employees, the last to vote, ratified the agreement as expected Thursday night.

The agreement is based on Anti-Inflation Board guidelines with a six per cent increase in the first year and four per cent the second year. There are also provisions for a cost-of-living allowance and dental plan.

N-shelter ready soon, property owners only

MONTREAL (CP) — Telephones ring throughout an eastend suburb and 400 residents learn by way of a prerecorded message that a nuclear missile is heading for the Montreal area.

The residents don special protective suits which will keep them safe from minimal amounts of nuclear contamination, and drive to the munation, and drive to the municipal fallout shelter.

There they are asked to produce a small metal identity card proving they have paid for space inside.

They remove the suits, enter the shelter and settle in for a 30-day period during which they hope they will be safe from the holocaust raging outside and the ensuing nuclear fallout.

However improbable, a group of Montreal businessmen and investors believe it might happen. They are building what they say is the first public emergency shelter of its kind in Canada, in suburban Pointeaux-Trembles.

Emergency Shelters AFAU Canada Ltd. is investing nearly $1 million in the project and hopes to build similar projects elsewhere.

A company spokesman said Thursday the shelter, with room for 400 "tenants," is capable of withstanding a nuclear explosion 1½ miles away. It can also be used during epidemics, civil disturbances or earthquakes.

Pierre Chapel said digging has begun on the 7,500-squarefoot project and 72 families have already rented space in the shelter.

The cost of reserving space is $3,000 for a 15-year period and only property owners in the east-end community are eligible.

Chapel said the shelter will be ready for use early next year and will contain an infirmary, a movie theatre and smoking room. It will be equipped with its own electrical and air supply.

Chapel said rooms in the emergency shelter will be rented to doctors, dentists and pharmacists or anyone wishing to use its halls until the time it is needed.

The floor of the shelter will be about 20 feet underground and the 24-inch-thick concrete ceiling will be covered with about two feet of earth. It will be stocked with enough food and water for 30 days.

Ross Lake dry after winter

HOPE (CP) — Ross Lake, the man-made reservoir that floods the Skagit Valley behind Washington state's Ross Dam, is a dry and dusty wilderness of old tree stumps this week as a winter of light snowfall begins to take its toll on the water level.

Hugh McIntosh, a spokesman for Seattle City Light, the utility that wants to raise the dam another 122 feet to enlarge the reservoir, says this year is the first time since the dam was completed in 1940 that the reservoir will not fill to full pool level.

Ross Lake crosses the Canada-United States border about 25 miles southeast of this Fraser Valley community. The dam itself is 22 miles south of the border.

The reservoir was 1,554 feet above sea level Wednesday, McIntosh said, 37 feet below the planned level for the date. Full pool level is 1,601.5 feet.

American campers and fishermen visiting the parched reservoir say they're not sure why Seattle City Light wants to raise the dam.

"I don't understand why they want to make the reservoir bigger when they can't keep it full now," said camper Mary Williams of McNary, Ore.

"It's too bad the countries have to disagree over it," said Billie Everett, of Sumas, Wash., who with her husband, Henry, was sharing a campsite with the Williams family.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen has pledged the province will do all it can to oppose raising the dam, which would back the Skagit up another 7½ miles into B.C.

The low lake levels have exposed the rotting stumps of thousands of trees logged off before the dam was completed in the 1940s. Tourists anxious to launch their boats must carry them from a high-and-dry launching ramp through the stumps to the water's edge.

Some were prepared to take the trouble, though, confident that the water would rise.

"It's coming up," said Harry Hawkins of Auburn, Wash. "It's always up in July.

"A lot of people didn't come this year because they didn't think they could get their boats in the water. But you can do it if you work at it."

Jack Delair, B.C. conservation officer, said the number of fishermen out for the opening of the season on the Skagit was "quite a few less than normal" because of the difficulty of launching boats.

U.S. may ban infants' rattles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission has ordered its staff to look into a possible ban on some baby rattles — especially those shaped like telephone receivers — which have caused at least four infant deaths.

The agency said in addition to the fatalities, at least 14 youngsters have had the rattles lodged in the throat.

The deaths apparently occurred when the infants rolled over on the rattles or pushed them into the throat, causing suffocation.

The last such incident occurred in 1975. Three of the four fatal cases involved rattles shaped like telephones, and the others implicated in accidents were in the form of barbells, hearts and clothespins.

The Canadian government recently moved against such rattles and the commission staff has been studying the question for some time.

Thursday the commissioners told their staff to give high priority to regulating rattles, an action which could lead to a ban on some specific products and safety standards for others.

The Toy Manufacturers of America told the commission earlier this year that manufacturers voluntarily stopped shipping the rattles in question in 1976, after the deaths were reported.

British projects continue

Energy from waves sought

EDINBURGH (CP) — Britons have been trying to extract energy from the waves that beat on their shores and now two scientists have begun to collaborate to improve the efficiency of the process.

Stephen Salter of University of Edinburgh has designed the Salter Duck which he claims works with better than 80-per-cent efficiency.

Dr. David Evans of the School of Mathematics at Bristol University hopes to improve on this by going beyond the principle of the simple-up-and-down motion, since that could never absorb all the power from the complex movement of waves.

Dr. Evans has based his calculations on the use of a cylindrical body oscillating in three modes, rolling as well as up and down and from side to side. He has found that 100-per-cent efficiency is theoretically possible.

To achieve maximum efficiency, it has been found necessary to "tune" the size, amplitude and position of the cylinder. The idea here is to make the most energy available to the power takeoff point instead of allowing the cylinder to waste energy making waves of its own.

The theory also shows it is possible for a cylinder to be suspended in such a way that each wave will make it move in exactly the combination of modes needed for total absorption of the wave's energy. In other words, it will move in complete sympathy with the wave, extracting power all the time.

Dr. Evans contends that by using a combination of vertical and horizontal linear springs and dampers in a submerged cylinder and tuning them to absorb all the power in a wave of given frequency, he could bring efficiency close to the theoretical 100 per cent.

Dr. Evans checked his theory experimentally with the help of the wave power project team headed by Salter. The team has developed a test rig which simulates the surge, heave and pitch of a body on waves, and on this equipment the predictions were found to be accurate.

Dr. Evans said he is satisfied that the approach will work, but the mechanical problems it poses have still to be solved. It will be necessary to equip the cylinder with a system of springs and pumps which will allow power conversion continuously throughout the motion.

This is a complicated engineering exercise, but when it is done the theory can be tested in practice for the first time.

He intends to carry out further tests on the Salter rig, particularly with simulated random waves as might be encountered at sea.

Some Tibetan glaciers now 'speeding along'

HONG KONG (UPI) — According to Chinese scientists, some glaciers in the Tibetan Highlands are speeding along at a quarter of a mile per year.

That may seem slow but it's actually fast for Tibetan glaciers, which usually move only a few hundred feet over several years, the scientists said.

The glaciers are rare type of oceanic, or "warm glaciers," the Chinese scientists said in a report carried by the New China News Agency Wednesday.

"After long years of slow movement, the glaciers showed a sudden burst of speed in their advance. The momentum was such that the middle moraines (debris) on the surface of the ice were twisted and the ice surface showed cracks like a spider's web," the scientists said.

PROVINCIAL COURT

Judge William Ostler wished a young man luck after giving him a suspended sentence Friday in Victoria provincial court.

Gregory Norman Evans, 24, of Mayne Island, pleaded guilty June 6 to three counts of threats by letter. The letters were sent May 4, 9 and 11 to three different Mayne Island residents and contained such phrases as "get off my back . . . or I'll make sure you have an unfortunate accident" and "how would you like to end up dead?"

Ostler, who ordered a presentence report in the case, urged Evans to find hobbies and friends.

"It's not good to be alone," Ostler said. "It's not good for any of us."

Besides the suspended sentence, Ostler placed Evans on a year's probation, ordered him to stay at the Salvation Army hostel unless otherwise directed by his probation officer, report to the Victoria Mental Health centre as required, not be in possession of any firearms, and not to contact the complainants in the charges.

"I wish you luck," Ostler said after passing sentence.

A 21-year-old cook in the Canadian armed forces was handed five concurrent sentences, the longest of which was three months.

Kenneth Brian McKee, of 477 Lampson, appeared before Ostler on Thursday and was denied bail at that time. McKee re-appeared in court Friday and changed his plea to guilty on two impaired driving charges and one count each of mischief causing wilful damage and theft over $200. He re-elected trial by magistrate on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon and pleaded guilty to that charge as well.

McKee was sentenced to three months for the second impaired charge, two months on the theft charge and 14 days each for carrying a concealed weapon, mischief and the first impaired charge, all sentences to be served concurrently.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court that McKee's period of criminal activity began May 17 when he was charged with carrying a knife inside his boot when he was being interrogated by Victoria city police about another matter.

On May 21, Esquimalt police, responding to a complaint about breaking glass at a parking lot at 464 Lampson, found McKee with a tire iron and flashlight. Police also found a number of vehicles with smashed windows and items taken from them.

On June 16, McKee was stopped by Esquimalt police on Esquimalt Road and subsequent breath test readings of .20 and .18 were obtained, Mulligan said.

A week later, McKee was stopped on Johnson Street and readings of .15 were obtained by Victoria city police, court was informed.

A young man who had been to a funeral that day and claimed he had been "nearly killed" by a B.C. Hydro bus which he said went through a red light was fined $35 and ordered to pay for the $300 damage he caused to the bus.

Kevin Chad McLeod, 21, of 1107 Colville, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Mulligan told the court that McLeod was a passenger in a car which had to brake suddenly for a bus on Esquimalt Road. He said the car then gave chase and stopped the bus.

The bus driver wouldn't admit McLeod and his companion to the bus and the two men then went around to the other side and attempted to get at the driver through the vent window, causing some damage there. The windshield of the bus was cracked and one headlight kicked out before police arrived.

McCleod told the judge he had just been to a funeral and had had a few drinks before the incident.

Besides the fine and order for compensation for $300 damage to the bus, Ostler placed McLeod on four months' probation.

"If everyone does it, we'd have nothing but fights all over the public streets," Ostler told McLeod.

Richard Arlend Smock, of 2321 Cook, was charged following a June 7 incident involving an 11-year-old girl at George Jay elementary school, 1118 Princess.

Releasing Smock on his own recognizance in the sum of $300, Ostler also ordered Smock not to be in the company of anyone 17 years of age or under or to be on any school grounds while the case was still before the courts.

Rose raiser wins cup

A widow whose hobby is rose growing has won the Naysmith challenge cup for aggregate-of-show in the Victoria Horticultural Society's show which continues today at First United Church Hall, 932 Balmoral.

Florence Eley, of 2550 Lansdowne, entered only roses in the competition. Two years ago she won the R.A. Nicholson bowl for the best rose in the show.

A hobby rose grower for four years, Mrs. Eley is one of four sisters who live together and tend their garden. Her favorite roses are yellow ones, especially the variety called Grandpa Dickson.

The Nicholson bowl in the current show, which continues from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. today, was won by Walter Dunford, who also entered the best novice rose and the best rose in the show.

Mrs. Eley also won the Dr. Gavin Chisholm challenge bowl for the aggregate in the rose section.

Attorney makes his deafness an asset

By GREG KRIKORIAN
Colonist - Copley Service

LOS ANGELES — Martin Liebert sites comfortably in his law office weaving one tale into another like a born storyteller.

However, unlike most storytellers, Liebert has been deaf since childhood.

Thriving on communication, the fledgling attorney has turned adversity into accomplishment.

He turned to law after a 20-year business career with several of the nation's largest corporations.

"In my case, deafness has been my greatest asset," Liebert, 46, says.

He contracted pneumonia when an infected kidney literally deteriorated to nothing.

The kidney infection wasn't detected until Liebert reached adulthood and his family thought he had passed through pneumonia with no permanent problems.

Family and friends were sure his slurred speech and inattentiveness were linked to a speech impediment.

Two years passed before Liebert entered school and was given a number of examinations to determine the source of his communication problem.

An audiometer examination showed the young boy could only hear the lower cycles of the average human hearing range of 60 to 20,000 frequencies.

This meant he could understand only vowels and would have to piece together consonants to comprehend words and sentences.

Liebert was clinically classified as 90 per cent deaf.

His widowed mother worked nights to pay for his educational needs and pressured him into attending Bronx High School of Science.

Liebert
. . .adversity defected

The early years were often trumatic for Liebert as he attended speech clinics with marginal success.

Things changed somewhat when he entered the Bronx school and, simultaneously, the New York League for the Hard of Hearing.

"I was beginning to realize how easy it is to give up in a hearing world when I entered the league and met the most dedicated group of therapists I've ever known," he says.

He was well on his way to academic achievement when he entered his teens and faced the new challenge of forming a social life.

"Rather than try to compete I developed other interests like drawing, making models and writing poetry and stories," Liebert explains.

"Writing was a tremendous outlet because I could communicate without a handicap.

"And though I was at first scared stiff to open my mouth, the debates gave me another lesson.

"I learned that by preparing and really believing in what I said people would listen . . . even if I couldn't speak well."

During the debates, Liebert was allowed one rule change.

"I was always permitted to sit in the audience so I could lip-read the other debaters," he explains.

He eventually became editor of the paper and captain of the championship debating team.

He was fast becoming acceptable to himself and his peers.

Embarrassed to dance because he couldn't hear the music, he found it equally impossible to talk with girls at a dance.

"The sound drowned out their voices and I was always too nervous to lip-read," he says.

"But because my voice makes many think I'm a foreigner, she asked if I was German . . . and I thought she asked if I was human."

Using the business ethics of his banker uncle, M. Lester Mendell, Liebert quickly scaled the executive ladder with such corporations as Xerox and IBM.

He worked in computer development, a program for the nation's early-warning missile system and in various personnel-management jobs.

Still, he wasn't satisfied.

So five years ago, his wife convinced him to enroll in law school and pursue his interest in the "lack of justice on the social and corporate levels."

In June, 1974, the honor graduate from City College of New York graduated from the South Bay (Los Angeles) University College of Law at the top of his class.

He has restricted his practice to estate planning and business law since his deafness prevents court litigation.

For the Ole Peapicker

Life's shaping up fine

By JOHN C. EAGAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — At 58, Tennessee Ernie Ford says life is shaping up just about the way he wants it.

The Ole Peapicker, as the mellow-voiced country and religious song stylist is known to fans, said he is playing now about as much as he is working.

"I'm working about six months out of the year," Ford said in an interview. "Sometimes there will be a couple of weeks when I won't do anything but what I want to do" —like "floating and fishing on the Arkansas River."

Ford's professional life now includes making commercials, television specials and talk shows, and appearing at state fairs and Nevada casinos. This summer he is planning a special to be taped aboard a Mississippi riverboat.

He has just signed a contract with Word Records, the biggest international distributor of religious music.

"I've picked 11 good, old, well-known Gospel hymns that will be our first album for Word," said Ford, who has cut 83 albums.

"My faith has always been very strong with me," said Ford, who was raised in Bristol, Tenn. "I've always loved religious music, and I've sung it since I was three years old.

"When I got into television, I had the opportunity to present this music in a way I thought people wanted to hear it. It is great music and you can smile when you sing it—you don't have to put on sackcloth and sit in a pile of ashes."

Ford
. . . he likes people

His biggest hit was 16 Tons, the tale of a hard-working, poor man who keeps sinking deeper in debt. It sold seven million single records.

In Portola Valley, the wealthy suburb 30 miles south of San Francisco where he moved after leaving his highly-rated TV series in 1961, Ford's personal life revolves mostly around neighbors, wife Betty and the Sharon Heights Golf and Country Club.

His two sons are grown and are making their own careers in Nashville, the unofficial headquarters for Ford's style of music. Brion, 27, is mar-

It's bums away at hoboes' bash

CINCINNATI — The annual hobo convention opened Friday, but legitimate tramps were given the bum's rush. "Our hoboes came to the convention in Cadillacs and planes," said convention host Ed Rauh. "Real bums can't get in."

The 300 self-styled hoboes assembled here belong to the "Hoboes of America, Inc.," with the "Inc." in the name enough to scare off any true tramp. "Our membership is a regular Who's Who in America," said Rauh. "Judges, lawyers, doctors belong to this thing."

Five car fires believed arson

An arsonist is believed responsible for five automobile fires within an hour Friday morning in Victoria.

The rampage started at about 3:52 a.m. when a 1967 Pontiac parker in front of 464 Moss and belonging to Mrs. D. Bennett was reported on fire.

At 5:54, Victoria firemen were dispatched to a car blaze at 1128 Ormond, about one block from the main firehall. A 1960 Envoy owned by Glen Thombrook was gutted in that incident.

Twelve minutes later, Oak Bay fireman responded to a car fire at 1054 Foul Bay Road, where a 1968 Rambler Rebel, which was in the process of being sold, was destroyed by fire.

There was an 18-minute gap before the next alarm, which sent Victoria firemen to 871 Richmond, where a 1966 Hillman owned by B. R. Greenhouse was ablaze.

The final alarm sent Victoria firemen btack to Moss Street at 4:43 a.m. to put out a fire in a 1966 Dodge owned by R. D. Pinfield of 129 Moss.

There wa another car fire at 3 a.m. Friday, but fire officials think it was not related to the others. A car owned by Betty Danzetta, of 3233 Bellevue, received about $800 damage after breaking out in flames. Saanich firemen responded to that call.

To make matters worse for Victoria firefighters, there were also four beach fires, three grass fires and a house fire at 3050 Jackson that night.

Alberta nurses vote to strike

EDMONTON (CP) — Fifty-nine Alberta hospitals are faced with the prospect of anurses' strike July 4, following release of strike vote results Friday.

Official notification of which institutions would be hit by a strike would be given to hospitals Monday morning, said Bob Donahue of the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses collective bargaining division.

Tht nurses were emphatic in their strike vote, with 2,511 nurses in 66 hospitals, nursing homes and auxiliary hospitals voting in favor. Only 497 voted against strike action.

Donahue said the nurses would honor their commitment to give institutions seven days warning of a strike.

But E. L. Rheault, employee relations director of the Alberta Hospital Association, said he hoped a meeting between AHA officials and Donahue Monday could get the two sides back to the bargaining table.

The nurses have said thty are the lowest paid in Western Canada and have asked for a wage increase that ranges from 36 per cent to 74 per cent plus shorter hours and extra benefits, Rheault told a news conference.

"But our nurses are not now, nor have they ever been, the lowest paid in Western Canada," he said.

According to 1976 figures, an Alberta nurse starts at $972 a month, rising to $1,161 after six years. Manitoba's rates are the same, he said, while nurses in Saskatchewan start $3 higher, at $975.

In B.C., nurses start at $1,122 and climb to $1,326 after six years.

Liberal bill seeks access to B.C. files

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson tabled a private member's bill in the Legislature Thursday which he said would "provide the public with an orderly access to government information."

Gibson said that without information "the public has no power at all to keep a government in check.

"Under the way the system is currently operated, we have nothing more than an elected dictatorship," Gibson said. "You can't call it a democracy if the public can't get basic information."

He said his access to Information Act may also be cited as the "open door in government act."

A private member's bill rarely becomes law.

Gibson said his proposed legislation would cover all government information, except items prohibited for a specific reason — such as confidentiality of personal medical records.

The Liberal leader said the Social Credit government was carrying government secrecy to ridiculous extremes. He said the finance ministry had refused to tell him the number of public service employees in the province.

B.C. farm view called shameful

Barbara Wallace (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) told Agriculture Minister James Hewitt Friday that the government's offhand approach "towards our third resource industry (agriculture) is nothing short of shameful.

She said there was no way the government, or the urban people of B.C., could divorce themselves from B.C. farmers.

"They are struggling to maintain their ability to produce food," she said. "And if that struggle is unsuccessful — if the boat sinks — then it doesn't matter if you're travelling first class or steerage, we all go down together," Mrs. Wallace said during debate on Hewitt's estimates.

Mrs. Wallace blamed multinational companies for most of the problems. She said that over the years more and more food was being brought into Canada while home farmers were going broke for want of markets.

She said 50 per cent of all canned tomatoes sold in Canada came from Taiwan and that Australia supplies 85 per cent of our (canned) peaches while Okanagan peach growers "languish in despair."

She said in 1965 there were 15 companies wholesaling fruit in B.C. today there were only five.

Clarke had stated that the health ministry had told him to shut up and stop fighting the 2,4-D weed spraying program in the Okanagan Valley. At that time McClelland was in Ottawa for dicsussions with the federal government.

McClelland said that he not only had never told Clarke to stop talking, but encouraged public health officers to speak out on matters affecting public health.

"It's their job to speak out," he said. "I want them to speak out. I am only surprised that Dr. Clarke could possibly interpret any thoughts on that subject from me in any other way."

McClelland said he would table a series of relevant documents related to the Clarke affair on Monday.

Officials probe Ashcroft fire

ASHCROFT (CP) — The provincial fire marshal was investigating an overnight fire that caused up to $500,000 damage to eight stores in a downtown block, Rod Craig, volunteer fire chief said Friday.

Craig said the fire started about 10:30 p.m. in a storage shed on Railway Street and, aided by 25-mile-an-hour winds, spread rapidly to other buildings along the block, some up to 90 years old.

Craig said he was not sure what the buildings were worth, but estimated the damage to be between $250,000 and $500,000.

About 30 volunteer firemen from this community and Cache Creek battled the blaze and had it under control by 3 a.m.

Craig said the firemen were hampered by an inadequate water system and "we're a little bit short on water also."

"We can't get enough water out of the mains to supply the trucks," he said. "It's a little bit inadequate, put it that way I guess."

Council last week called for tenders to improve the downtown water system.

Firemen used a forestry pumper truck to bring water from the Thompson River, 1,200 feet away. Craig said they asked for an aerial waterdrop on the fire, but it couldn't be done because of the darkness.

The storage shed, a cafe, a motorcycle shop, a dress store, a jewelry store, a boot and saddle store, a second-hand store, a drug store, a union office and three houses were damaged or destroyed.

The motorcycle shop was originally a stagecoach house built in 1890.

The drug store was the only one in Ashcroft and Mayor Mike Yewchin called its loss a heavy blow to the community.

Three dwellings above the stores were destroyed, but Craig said only one was occupied when the fire broke out and there were no injuries. The Red Cross found accommodation in Ashcroft for those who lost their homes.

One firefighter claimed arson was the cause of the fire but Craig said he didn't want to speculate.

Two years probation

Wayne Donald Morris was placed on two years' probation when sentence was suspended in Victoria County Court Friday on a charge of possessing a shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

Judge M. L. T. Drake, who heard the case at Courtenay earlier this month, made it a condition of probation that Morris abstain from alcohol.

Gun-toting pair jailed year apiece

Two men convicted earlier of illegally possessing a sawed-off shotgun were each sentenced to a year in prison Friday in Victoria county court.

Ossie William Barnes, 28, and Patrick Norman Witter, 20, both formerly of 252 Gorge Road East, had been acquitted before Judge E. J. C. Stewart of conspiracy to commit armed robbery at Coppens Jewellers in Shelbourne plaza March 15. They were also acquitted of attempting an armed robbery there.

Stewart took a serious view of the remaining charge because, he said, "these two men are very fortunate indeed they are not facing a charge of armed robbery," for which, he said, they would have received four to six years in jail.

David Wilson, counsel for Barnes, said since no harm had been done the offence rated at the lower end of seriousness, and described the accused men as "a couple of bunglers" putting on a "show of bravado" between themselves.

He said they took Dutch courage after a night of drinking: "You can almost see it, asking each other 'what shall we do? Let's make a score . . .,' each waiting for the other to go through with it."

He described them as two followers without a leader, likening them to two boys bragging to each other in the schoolyard about whose dad could beat whom.

"They were hopelessly incompetent," Wilson said.

He also said his client suffered severe headaches that caused him to depart from normal behavior, and was scheduled to see a neurosurgeon June 30.

Michael Hutchison, appearing for Witter, concurred with Wilson's description of "inept activities, at times bizarre situation leading up to the arrest of these two accused."

He said the weapon was at no time produced and the two abandoned their scheme before police arrived at the shopping centre.

Rehabilitation of the accused men, who had "done hard time" for three months in jail awaiting trial, was the only real protection for the public, counsel said.

"It is no protection to the community to put Patrick Witter in an institution . . . given the nature of those institutions it is a real threat to the community," Hutchison said.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said both should be treated equally, that their intention was clear, and but for the arrival of police there could have been the more serious charge of armed robbery.

He cited statistics for robberies and attempted robberies in Victoria from Jan. 1-April 30 of this year — a total of 70 compared with 45 in the same period a year ago, those involving guns rising from 11 to 30.

Stewart said he could picture the scene of two masked, hooded men poised outside the jewelry store, a liquor store, a bank, "or even Mac's Convenience Store" across the street. They were "armed with a very lethal weapon, a sawed-off shotgun."

To the suggestion that they had abandoned their scheme before police arrived, the judge said: "I would be naive indeed to accept that statement," and barring any mitigating factor, the offence would bear a sentence of two or three years.

He agreed the time in custody before trial was equal to about six months in jail after conviction, and consequently set the term at one year.

Juvenile detention

Capacity use 'unlikely' for centre

Hard-core juvenile offenders won't be contained for two-year stretches at the Cook Street detention home, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Friday.

In a letter to Victoria Ald. Helen Beirnes, Gardom said the Victoria centre would have facilities for holding up to 10 hard-core young offenders, but would "seldom be used to that capacity."

And even if it were used to capacity, occasionally, it would be for short periods only while the delinquents received their briefing or awaited moving to the Mainland or Lakeview Camp.

Gardom assured Mrs. Beirnes that was his ministry's intention to transfer the youths within "the shortest-possible time after disposition."

Mrs. Beirnes stated earlier that if the government tried to turn the Victoria centre into a young offenders' jail, she would press for eviction of the government from the building which is owned by the four core municipalities.

Mrs. Beirnes wasn't available for comment on Gardom's letter.

Maritime Museum in heritage plans

The list of commercial buildings recommended for heritage preservation in downtown Victoria includes three hotels, a museum, several office buildings and warehouses.

In all, 30 buildings west of Government and south of Johnson Street have been recommended for heritage status.

Among the buildings are the Kings Hotel, the Colonial Hotel and the Oriental Hotel. The Maritime Museum is also on the list, as are five other buildings in Bastion Square.

The owners of all buildings have been notified of the city's intention to designate the buildings for heritage preservation. If they object, they will be given an opportunity to state their case before the Heritage Advisory Committee and later before city council.

Here are the buildings slated for designation:

The Coach and Four, 19 Bastion Square; Burnes House, 18-26 Bastion Square; the Maritime Museum, 28 Bastion Square; the Board of Trade Building, 31 Bastion Square; the Law Chambers 45 Bastion Square, and an office building at 50-56 Bastion Square.

The N.C.I.A. Building, 506 Fort; the recreation and conservation department building, 512 Fort, and the Temple Building at 525 Fort.

The Simon Leiser Building, 524 Yates (Capital Region Board headquarters); the Smith Davidson and Lecky Building, 534 Yates; the Bastion Arcade, 535 Yates; the Carnaby Street Building, 536-38 Yates; the Oriental Hotel, 550-52 Yates; the Goodwill Annex, 560 Yates, and the Kings Hotel at 570 Yates.

Heritage status won't take effect until designation of the buildings has been approved by the provincial government. The process takes several months.

Once designated, the exterior of the buildings may not be altered without specific permission from the city. A similar program for residential heritage preservation is already in effect.

Two-pronged try launched to revive Victoria economy

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Greater Victoria was moving on two fronts Friday in an effort to breathe life into an ailing economy.

The Victoria Labor Council sought a meeting with Quadra Steel Ltd. president Jack Harrison in the hope that it might persuade him to abandon his plans to close the company's Esquimalt operation.

And the economic development committee held its final meeting before disbanding to make way for a full-time body that will create a new office for an economic development commissioner.

The commissioner will be hired and the office set up with the $63,000 the committee has been promised for this year by the province and four core area municipalities.

Those who got the program under way are banking their hopes on financial help next year from the Capital Region.

Meanwhile, the labor council went ahead with its plans even though there were hints that something else might happen to ease the pain if Quadra Steel pulls out.

Sources said that Yarrows shipyards might open a machine shop in the Quadra Steel building once the other company vacates the premises. This could not be confirmed Friday night.

"Yarrows and Quadra Steel have the same owners and I'm told Yarrows will put a machine shop in the building," a highly-placed source said. "If that happens, it will probably create more jobs than those lost by the departure of Quadra."

Yarrows has been hit by unemployment running as high as 70 per cent, but a refit job on a supply ship is under way and is expected to provide work for about 275 men.

However, it will do little for the plight of the boilermakers' union, by far the largest union at Yarrows. Most of the work will involve painting and scraping.

The boilermakers' Victoria local has a 36 per cent unemployment rate. Business agent Neil Hindle says another 10 per cent have gone to Alberta in search of jobs.

Hindle approached the Quadra Steel president on his own before the labor council moved into the picture.

Although there are only 15 employees at the company's Esquimalt plant, three unions are involved — the boilermakers, Office and Technical Employees Union and the operating engineers.

On behalf of those unions, the labor council has wired Harrison asking him to delay plans for a shutdown until its representatives have a chance to meet with him.

The council has also asked the core area mayors to take similar action and has sought support from Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips.

In its approach to Phillips, the council has written: "We can ill afford to lose another payroll in this city."

Continuing erosion of the Greater Victoria industrial base prompted the action by labor, as well as giving birth to the economic development committee.

Quadra Steel's reason for folding serves as a symptom of the area's economic ills. The company has said it intends to close within three months because other manufacturing companies are leaving the city and reducing the market for steel products.

The economic development committee, which held its final meeting in the office of Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) will be replaced by a new society that will have directors from the Chamber of Commerce, Victoria Information Centre, the arts community, labor, the Victoria Construction Association and municipal government.

Black swan which tried to clamber aboard a canoe at Esquimalt Lagoon Friday is believed to be one missing for couple of weeks from Vancouver's Stanley Park children's zoo. SPCA manager Don Adams, who collected the bird, says the year-old pen is extremely tame and undernourished, leading him to think it's the Stanley Park bird whose wings haven't been clipped. The black swan, a native of Western Australia, is being fed wheat and barley at SPCA pond before being returned to Vancouver.

Inn-area expansion draws planner's fire

A housing project adjacent to the Royal Oak Inn is in direct conflict with the recently-drafted Saanich community plan, according to municipal planner Gil Laurenson.

"I can't support it. It's in direct opposition to the plan as far as density and location is concerned," he told a meeting of the Broadmead Ratepayers' Association.

"There is a public benefit in the proposal," he said, "but I can't support it from a land-use planning position."

The Isherwood family, owners of the hotel, is proposing to build several four-storey frame apartment buildings, a convention centre, restaurant and a extension to the inn on 64 acres.

The apartments would be build on about 21 acres and there would be a four-acre recreation centre at the core of the residential development containing a pool, sauna, tennis courts, bowling greens and a barbecue area.

The conference area would be able to accommodate about 600 people and an 80-room addition to the inn is planned.

The entire acrerage is in the Agricultural Land Reserve, the hotel-motel being a permitted use on the property.

Isherwood has an appeal before the B.C. Land Commission for the 64 acres to be taken out of the reserve for residential use.

The entire property is zoned C-5 (tourist commercial use) and has been since 1965.

This zoning was granted on the basis of a recommendation of the original 1959 plan for the Capital Region District, Laurenson said.

Saanich has agreed that at the developer's expense, connection would be granted to the Broadmead trunk sewer to serve the commercial development.

Laurenson said, although the sewer would be capable of serving 700 people, the existing buildings already have a population equivalent of 350 persons.

"So, even if the project was given the green light, only two of the four proposed apartments could be serviced unless the Colquitz trunk was extended north to serve the area."

Laurenson said extension of the Colquitz sewer to serve the Royal Oak development would have to be a major council decision, as no capacity has been allowed for the area in downstream trunks and outfalls.

The developer, he said, was proposing to dedicate 23 acres to the municipality for recreatinal purposes.

"But, the public benefit derived from the dedication will have to be weighed against locating an inappropriate high density right out on the urban fringe, and the high cost of bringing services to the area," he said.

Munro warning

DUNCAN — Jack Munro, president of the International Woodworkers of America, warned Thursday "militants will take over the province" unless labor and business start to work together.

Hardliners will take advantage of moderates' apathy, Munro told a service club meeting.

Munro, recognized as a moderate among trade unionists, said resource-rich and technologically-advanced country as Canada should not have so many problems.

Most people don't have the political courage to tell the government it is wrong, added Munro.

UVic new-dorm future cloudy

Loan rate hike 'to push costs beyond students' reach'

Rising interest rates have clouded the future of new dormitories at the University of Victoria.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch told the university board of governors on Friday that the interest rates which the central Mortgage and Housing Corp. is offering for new dormitories would push the cost of accommodation beyond what students could afford.

The university was hoping to borrow the necessary money — about $3 million — from CMHC at eight per cent, the rate for low-income groups, Petch said. If not, it would have to borrow money at CMHC's standard rate of nine and three-eighths per cent interest.

New dormitories are a high priority for the university, because about 55 per cent of its students come from outside the Greater Victoria area, but on-campus accommodation is available to only about 10 per cent.

It was only through special representations to the federal government this winter, with backing from the provincial government, that the university managed to get CMHC to give student housing a high priority for mortgage money.

The interest rate is an important consideration, because the university's policy is to set residence fees at a level which will cover capital and maintenance costs.

High construction costs have already forced the university to plan wood-frame dormitories instead of the reinforced concrete dormitories which they now have, Petch said.

"We got the cost down to where, at eight per cent interest, students could manage the residence fees."

But the local office of CMHC, which referred the matter to its regional office, said the university would not only have to pay the standard rate, but that the rate had gone up to nine and seven-eighths per cent.

"That will put the dormitories beyond the reach of our students," Petch told the board.

"We are at the point of diminishing returns on the dormitories already. If we lower the building costs further, maintenance costs will go up to the point where they would offset the savings."

The other possibilities were for the university to subsidize the student housing, which would require permission from the Universities Council of B.C., or to appeal to Ottawa for lower interest rates, Petch said.

He said local CMHC officials had been very helpful to the university in planning the dormitories, but that they were bound by CMHC's lending regulations.

The board authorized Petch to negotiate with the federal government for a lower interest rate.

Strata bypass cut off

Although the amendments ending use of the loophole received only first reading in the Legislature, Curtis stressed that the new rules would be "retroactive until today, however long it takes to get them through to royal assent."

"From the date of the tabling of this bill no strata subdivision of land (support structure strata plans) regardless of the number of lots to be created, can be registered in the Land Registry offices unless approved by the approving officer as defined in the Land Registry Act," Curtis said.

He said, "This is the day it comes into effect to end the use, and I'm tempted to say abuse, of the act as it was."

Curtis said he couldn't guarantee what would happen in the case of support structure strata plans that had already been approved.

Use of the loophole enabling developers to ignore community plans, minimum lot sizes and other local regulations started in the Cariboo, then spread to the Okanagan, the south central coast and eventually Central Saanich.

Stirling performance

Dashing performance on skates won Kathy Stirling, 14, the 1977 Esquimalt Roller Queen contest Friday. Kathy competed against five other contestants for the title and the prizes that go with it.

Bus-pass chop under appeal by university

Cancellation of an innovative bus pass system for University of Victoria students is being appealed by the university.

Administration dean Trevor Matthews told the university's Board of Governors Friday that the university was asking B.C. Hydro to reconsider its recent decision to cancel the bus pass program.

"It has been a joint effort between the administration, the Alma Matter Society, and B.C. Hydro, and we think it was very successful. We are disappointed at the response we have received from B.C. Hydro."

The program enabled a student to buy a pass to ride on the buses for $30 for the fall session. The fee was raised to $36 for the spring session.

During the first term 964 students, nearly 20 per cent of the full-time enrolment at the university, took part in the program. During the second session, 800 bought passes. Matthews said the reduction was probably due to lower enrolment in the second term, and the price increase.

"B.C. Hydro rejected it because they felt there was insufficient support for it, but we felt there was enough support," Matthews said. "I really feel it is vital that we get it back."

The Society administered the program and paid for production of the passes, and the university contributed a subsidy for each pass, "while B.C. Hydro was only required to accept the passes as valid and receive a single lump sum, said Alma Mater Society president Brian Gardiner.

While saying on the one hand that the program did not attract sufficient patronage to carry on, Gardiner commented, B.C. Hydro also said that the program's success would lead to similar requests from other institutions.

"This issue concerns more than just students. If B.C. Hydro continues to discourage innovations in the area of public transit, people are going to remain with or return to driving their cars," Gardiner said in a letter.

Clayton Shold, a student representative on the board of governors, said he would compile statistics on the program and ask the board at its July meeting to support the students in their request to have the program continued next year.

Islanders close to B.C. Amateur leaders

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Defending-champion Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver shot a par 72 Friday to move within one stroke of leader Dick Zokol after the British Columbia Amateur golf championship's third round.

Roxburgh was tied with Frank Fritz of Kamloops, who had a 76-67-71 record. Lanny Sawchuck of Victoria and Sandy Harper of Nanaimo both had 215, each shooting 72 Friday.

Thirty-one golfers made the 54-hole cut of 223.

Both Roxburgh and Zokol said high winds and hard greens made play difficult in the third round.

"The wind made it a little tougher, it always does," said Zokol. "I was pleased with my game, except my chipping and a few of my putts.

"The greens were a lot harder and faster today, and my judgment was off. I didn't know how hard to hit the ball and I was confused on my chips.

Roxburgh said he had a good round, "considering the wind and hard greens.

"I think the wind dried them (the greens) out," he said. "It's a difficult course when the wind blows."

Sawchuck, a 16-year-old Uplands junior, had an opening round 72 and followed with a 71 Thursday to lead the Victoria golfers. Harper, a former B.C. junior champion, opened with a 73 and followed with 70.

A total of 10 Islanders are in the top 23 with Dave Donaldson and Dave Mick of Gorge Vale and Ken Floyd of Royal Colwood tied at 218.

Jim Rutledge of Uplands, who tied with Zokol for second in the B.C. junior last year, shot 72 and tied at 220 with Art Carey of Colwood. Reg Effa of Glen Meadows blew to a 77 Friday and also has 220 while Paul Harris of Victoria shot 74 for 221.

The tournament concludes today with the top players concluding action at 1:30 p.m.

Yankees, Dodgers win before packed houses

Major league baseball is offering something special this weekend in the way of attraction, and there was Friday night assurance of fan appreciation.

The top two clubs in three of the four divisions started weekend series Friday, and the three games attracted 128,261 fans.

Biggest crowds were in New York, where 54,940 fans jammed Yankee Stadium to watch the Yankees and Boston Red Sox have another go at each other, and in Cincinnati, where a sellout 51,864 fans came to Riverfront Stadium in the hope that the Reds could do something about the big lead held by Los Angeles Dodgers.

Things weren't quite as jammed in Chicago, but the crowd of 21,457 which came to watch the White Sox take on Minnesota Twins is considered excellent attendance at Comiskey Park.

Only in New York did the home team respond with victory. There, the Yankees pulled out a spectacular 6-5 decision which pulled them within four games of top spot in the American League East.

But it was just as close in Cincinnati, where the Dodgers wormed out a 3-2 verdict, and Chicago, where the Twins barely made it, 7-6.

The Red Sox, who set still another major league home run record by driving three balls into the stands to make it 33 four-basers in their last 10 games, were within one out of opening up a six-game lead. And they had ace-reliever Bill Campbell apparently set to mop up the Yankees.

But Willie Randolph, who had previously doubled and scored, kept the Yankees alive with a triple and veteran Roy White followed with a first-pitch home run to send the game into extra innings.

Nettles had drawn a base on balls, and when Ramon Hernandez put him on second base with a balk, the Red Sox issued an intentional base on balls to Mickey Rivers. Jackson, who stayed in the lineup after pinch-hitting in the ninth inning, lined the winning hit into the right-field corner.

In Cincinnati, the Dodgers got a big psychological lift as well as a nine-and-a-half game lead in the National League East by defeating Tom Seaver.

Seaver, now with a 2-8 career record in Riverfront Stadium, allowed seven hits, struck out four and walked two in the eight innings he pitched. The Reds got 10 hits off route-going Tommy John but four double plays held their scoring to the two runs produced by Joe Morgan's seventh-inning home run. John struck out six and didn't walk a batter in his eighth win in 12 decisions. It made his career record against the Reds 7-1.

Larry Hisle, Lyman Bostock and Tom Johnson took most of the laurels as the Twins again gained the lead in the American League West. Hisle, who leads the major leagues in runs batted in with 70, hit a three-run homer and a two-run double while Bostock broke the 6-6 tie with a leadoff home run in the eighth inning and Johnson snuffed out a sixth-inning rally and allowed only one run the rest of the way.

Meanwhile, Chicago Cubs, a club which rates up there in the amazing class with the White Sox and Twins, lengthened out again in the National League East.

Rick Reuschel, who lasted until two were out in the sixth inning and got credit for a win that gave him a 10-2 log for the season, and Willie Hernandez combined to pitch the Cubs to a 5-0 six-hit shutout of the New York Mets. Jerry Morales singled, doubled and tripled, scored two runs and batted in two others to provide most of the batting support.

Other Friday highlights included a bid for a perfect game by Montreal righthander Wayne Twitchell, a 10th-inning home run which broke an 0-0 tie and a league fielding record.

Twitchell started the eighth inning against Pittsburgh Pirates with a 5-0 lead and a perfect game. Then Bill Robinson led off with a sharp single, Al Oliver hit a home run and Ed Ott singled. That chased Twitchell, but the Pirates kept on against Will McEnaney to get a four-run inning, tied it in the ninth with three singles and won it, 6-5, in the 10th on a single by Robinson.

The 1-0 game was played in Anaheim, and Ken Henderson connected for the hit which gave Texas Rangers the win over California Angels and stopped Frank Tanana from becoming the major leagues's first 12-game winner this season.

Don Money, an ex-National League third-baseman now playing second base, tied a major league record and set an American League record for his position by recording 12 assists as Milwaukee Brewers eased by Seattle Mariners 7-1.

Ferguson, Hamilton card 66s to share Quebec Open lead

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Cec Ferguson of Victoria and Gar Hamilton of Weston Ont., each fired a four-under par 66 Friday for the first-round lead in the 54-hole Quebec Open golf championship on the 6205-yard Sherbrooke Country Club course.

Ferguson, 27, shot a two-under-par 33 on both the front and back nines, while Hamilton carded a 34-32.

A shot behind the co-leaders at 67 were Dave Barr of Kelowna, and Dan Talbot of Beloeil, Que. At two-under 68 were Greg Wagstaff of Weston and Mike Veilleux of Montreal.

Ferguson parred the first two holes before scoring an eagle three on the par-five, 470-yard third hole. He hit to the green close to the pin with a six-iron shot and then dropped an 18-inch putt.

Seven consecutive pars followed until he ran off three birdies in a row on the 11th, 12th and 13th holes.

He barely missed sole possession of first place when a putt for a birdie on the 16th hole failed to drop. "You could have blown on it," he said. "It just wouldn't go."

Ferguson said some greens were especially hazardous. He three-putted for a bogey four on the 14th.

"The greens are bumpy. You can hit it 10 feet and it won't go. You can't roll the ball — the ball hops. It could decide the tournament sometime this weekend."

Ferguson, seeking the $4,000 winner's prize of a total of $20,000, has been a professional only since late last year but said he has "played a lot of amateur golf, including for the national team," and can take the pressure that goes with a leading position. He won the British Columbia Open as an amateur last year.

Hamilton, also 27, said he had regained his confidence since returning from the United States tour and missing the cut at the Ontario Open at Guelph last weekend. "the only time in my life I've ever missed the cut."

He shot four birdies and parred everything else.

Tied at 69 for seventh place were low amateur Graham Cooke of Montreal, Tom Whittle of Richmond, B.C., Greg Pidlaski of Mississauga, Ont., Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, and Fred Cotton of Vancouver.

Seven golfers shot par 70. They were Nick Hahn of Kansas, Kelly Roberts of London, Ont., Rick Carmody of Poway, Calif., Mark Shushack of Thunder Bay, Ont., Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., Andre Harvey of St. Johns, Que., and Greg Olson of Ottawa.

John Kindred, playing out of Sarasota, Fla., was among a large group at one-over 71. Kindred is the two-time defending champion, having won last year at Sarel in a sudden-death playoff against Roger Klatt of Edmonton to retain his 1975 title. Klatt also was at 71.

The field will be trimmed to the low 60 and ties after the second round in preparation for the final round Sunday.

Bates, U.S. champs start series tonight

The Canadian champions host the Cardinals in a four-game series starting with a doubleheader at 7 p.m. tonight at Royal Athletic Park. The second doubleheader starts at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The Cardinals will likely be the toughest team Bates play this season and since Bates haven't had any real top flight competition in three weeks coach Joe Patterson held workouts each night this week to get the club sharp.

Bates have won 12 staight games and have a 20-3 record but the Cardinals pitching staff will be far tougher than the pitching Bates have seen so far this season.

Victoria won only one of four games in a similar series with Billard Sunners of Reading, Pa., the 1975 U.S. champions, last June but Bates are a better hitting team this year.

Bob Burrows, who was hampered by coaching duties through the first half of last season, is having a much better year in both power and percentage, newcomers Jim McMillan and Dave Williams have helped boost the team average to .294 and sophomore John Green is having a big season.

Burrows, who shares the catching with Norm McLeod and plays first base, leads the club with 10 home runs, 26 runs and 26 runs-batted-in. McMillan, a member of Vancouver Magicians last year, is hitting .333 and Williams, the team's only rookie, is batting .327 and leading the club with an on-base percentage of .530.

Green, who won the third-base starting assignment in his rookie season, leads the team with a .413 average and leads in triples with four and doubles with six.

The Bates pitching staff is the same one that faced Reading last season. Patterson says Andy Konopacki, 10-1, will probably start the first game and depending how the opener goes Dave Ruthowsky, 13-1, will likely start the second game.

Patterson says Stan Kern, plagued by back problems since the start of the season, appears to be in good shape for the weekend games.

Kern, 5-1, has allowed only 12 hits, has 71 strikeouts and the best earned-run-average of the staff, (0.28).

Al Lewis, 26-5, last season, is the No. 1 starter for Raybestos.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Race track and horse breeding associations clashed with off-track betting supporters Friday over a bill that would prohibit betting at state-operated gambling facilities on races run in other states.

National and state race track association representatives and thoroughbred breeders, who have long supported the measure, warned that interstate betting at off-track betting facilities would dry up track attendance and destroy a multi-billion dollar industry.

Off-track betting officials argued that the bill would cut into needed government revenue raised through off-track betting and make the federal government a regulator of the racing industry.

In testimony before the senate commerce committee, Mrs. Lennart Ringquist, president of the Thoroughbred Owners and Breeders Association, said that without the bill the $13 billion racing industry can be destroyed.

"If off-track betting on horse races is allowed to spread across state lines," Mrs. Ringquist said, "not only can persons in Connecticut — where currently there is no horse racing — bet on horse races run in New York, but persons in Pennsylvania, and Ohio, and Indiana, and Illinois, and all across the nation, also can place wagers on horse races run in New York."

"This would lead," she said, "to heavy wagering at the biggest tracks while the smaller tracks would soon close for want of patronage."

Former Sen. Thruston Morton, president of the American Horse Council and chairman of the board of Churchill Downs, warned that if interstate wagering proliferates, not only would the industry contract to a mere fraction of its present size, but the jobs and revenue which the race tracks provide to over 30 states would be lost.

However, John Dailey, New York's director of Off-Track Betting, said the prime justification for pari-mutuel betting on horse races is to raise a reasonable revenue for the states and that without pari-mutuel betting the racing industry would not exist.

"Federal prohibition of off-track betting on out-of-state races could well stop, if not destroy, the single most dramatic development in the growth of all horse racing, the ability of the general public to participate (for the public good) in wagering on high quality, nationally recognized horses and races," Dailey said.

A statement submitted by the National Association of Off-Track Betting noted that a report by the national gambling commission said the bill would be an unwarranted intrusion by the federal government into an area of regulation better left to the states.

Ron Butlin

Appointment confirmed

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf confirmed Friday a report on the appointment of Ron Butlin as managing director of B.C. Summer and Winter Games.

Butlin will be paid $37,500 a year.

Bawlf said Butlin's first responsibility would be to organize the 1978 games. But, said Bawlf, he will also assist in the general promotion of amateur sport in the province.

"The first B.C. Games will be held in August, 1978," Bawlf said. "By the end of July invitations will be extended to communities of over 10,000 population to bid to host the games."

The provincial government will provide $180,000 for the operation of the 1978 games plus a $70,000 legacy for the host community. The legacy must be used to promote amateur sport in the community.

Invitations for the winter games to be held in 1979 will go out before the end of this September. Bawlf said 1979 sounded a deceptive date. "It's the spring end of the 1978-79 winter," he said.

Financing of the winter games will follow the same formula as the summer games with $180,000 for the operation and a legacy to the host community of $70,000.

Bawlf said the summer games would include 25 sports and is expected to attract 3200 athletes between the ages of 13 and 80 years.

"Including regional competitions leading up to the games, we expect to have between 50,000 and 60,000 B.C. athletes participating in the summer and winter events," Bawlf said.

Butlin, who has built the Alberta Games from virtually nothing to the biggest provincial sports event in Canada, will commence his new duties Aug. 1.

NHL ready to include division of WHA clubs

CHICAGO (CP) — Barring some unforeseen difficulties, it appears the National Hockey League will swell its ranks for the 1977-78 season by at least six clubs from the World Hockey Association.

"The NHL board of governors this morning approved a resolution authorizing the fact-finding committee to pursue negotiations with the WHA seeking to lead to an expansion of the National Hockey League this coming season by not less than six teams," John A. Ziegler, Jr., president-elect of the NHL, announced Friday.

"The proposal would be to have those teams play in their own division for this coming season and on some form of integration over a period of the following two years.

"We have no further details. We have not met with the WHA to find out if this sort of program would be satisfactory. The committee has been given the authorization to proceed on that course."

The go-ahead was given despite the fact the league has not completed arrangements with the NHL Players' Association on a new collective bargaining agreement.

"We have agreed to continue those negotiations after we have a bit more definition on where we stand with respect to the attitude of the WHA."

Quebec, New England, Cincinnati and Edmonton are rated as definitely interested in joining the NHL with Winnipeg and Houston likely. Birmingham is another possibility.

The owners and players will meet again in Toronto on July 13 with the two groups meeting separately in the morning before getting together for an afternoon session.

"The position of the players has been clear from our meetings in Bermuda," said Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHLPA.

"Upon reasonable conditions applying to adjustment in the compensation of equalization clause, we were in favor of an expansion, merger or accommodation. The owners and the players have gone through some of the concepts that we would consider necessary before we would consent to any such merger.

"From the collective bargaining point of view, the owners are taking a position, which they are justified in taking, that they are not looking at a merger with the WHA but rather an expansion.

"That gets into some technical labor law and anti-trust law problems that we require time to study with our counsel in the States. We have agreed to meet with the owners on July 13 in Toronto. Hopefully by the 14th we will be in a position to finalize all of these aspects."

The NHL owners, by virtue of their constitution, need unanimity in order to change any aspects of the collective bargaining agreement.

Jack Kent Cooke, owner of Los Angeles Kings, was fingered Thursday as the man responsible for delaying any agreement on a new pact.

"Whether they can resolve that problem by the 13th remains to be seen," said Eagleson. "If they can't resolve it, I have indicated to the owners that we are not in a position to simply accept this constructive merger with the WHA unless certain concessions are granted to the players' association as far as player mobility is concerned.

"From our discussions in the past two days, it is conceivable those problems could be solved before we meet again."

Under the proposal to the WHA clubs, they will play a balanced 80-game schedule among themselves and four clubs from their division will likely qualify for the playoffs.

They will play some exhibition games against the established NHL clubs and in 1978-79, they will likely be able to participate in some form of interlocking schedule.

"Presumably after a three-year period, there would be a complete integration of all teams," Eagleson said and Ziegler added there would be a major realignment of the NHL after the three-year period but what form it would take was unknown.

"The concern of the players is resolved to some extent and the concern of the owners is resolved to some extent because of the separate division," Eagleson said. "The concern of the players and owners and fans was that we already have too many teams coming into too many buildings and it is difficult to know the players.

"On a gradual increase basis of participation between the two groups, so that there would be five divisions in the NHL, the players have said they are prepared to go along with that structure."

Ziegler said the cost to the WHA clubs to enter the NHL would be less than the widely-reported $3.3 million, but he would not divulge the figure mainly because members of the fact-finding committee were communicating it to the WHA clubs.

"At this point we have said not less than six teams for next year," Ziegler added. "It's up to them to determine, how many teams they will have. We don't know.

"They must meet the requirements of the constitution that each team must file a separate application and meet those requirements."

Ziegler added that WHA teams accepted into the NHL "would be full members except that their schedule would be different from the rest."

The distribution of money gained from the expansion will be decided by the players and the owners, he said.

"The concept that we are operating on is that we would seek to use that fund to clean up the obligations that may be existing within and outside the National Hockey League that affect the National Hockey League," Ziegler explained.

"This may be hoping to correct some mistakes with the amateur hockey bodies."

Cincinnati wants in CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Stingers plan to apply for membership in the National Hockey League, William O. DeWitt, Jr., executive vice-president of the World Hockey Association team, said Friday.

DeWitt's comments came in response to the news that the NHL had agreed to a proposed merger with the WHA.

"We're very optimistic about our chances," said DeWitt. "I imagine the first step will be to talk with NHL officials and find out exactly what is involved."

Griffin will try longer distance

One of Canada's top runners in the 800 and 1500 metres, Griffin is entered in the 5000 metres in the two-day meet which gets underway at 10 a.m. today at Centennial Stadium.

Griffin han been plagued with foot and ankle problems this year and hasn't been able to run competitively but he has to run in the Times meet in order to earn a spot on the B.C. team that will go to the Canada Games.

Griffin is no stranger to the longer distances. He won the B.C. high school cross-country championship two years ago.

Many of Victoria's other top competitors will be seeking Canada Games berths. Included among the hopefuls are Gail Gummer (200 and 400 metres), Ulla Hansen (800 metres), Debbie Scott (1500 and 3000 metres), Tim Page (100 and 200 metres), Judy Tobacco (400 metres) and Jill Pelland (100-metre hurdles), all members of Victoria Selects.

Nearly 1000 athletes are expected to compete in the meet which covers all the age categories from tyke to over-30. Clubs from Alberta, Washington and Oregon will be represented.

Colwood seniors top tournament

Royal Colwood golfers captured top honors in the Vancouver Island Seniors Golf Association tournament Friday at Gorge Vale Golf Club.

Gordon Millin of Colwood and clubmate Ken Hincks tied with Cliff Burton of Gorge Vale for low gross at 79 but Millin won out on the countback and Hincks was awarded runner-up honors because Burton was the winner of the six-12 handicap title.

Joe Zdan of Gorge Vale shot 89-24—65 to take the over-all handicap title while Robert George of Glen Meadows was low-net runner-up with 85-18—67.

Soccer slugger draws sanction

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The Argentine national soccer team's star forward, Daniel Bertoni, has been suspended for four international exhibition matches for slugging an English team player during a game two weeks ago, the Argentine Soccer Federation announced Friday.

The 23-year-old Bertoni punched England defender Trevor Cherry in the mouth, knocking out two of his front teeth, shortly after they collided during an England-Argentina exhibition game June 12. The match ended in a 1-1 tie.

The sanction against Bertoni went into effect last week. The first match he missed was last Sunday against Scotland which also ended in a 1-1 tie.

Next Sunday, Bertoni will have to sit out the game against France. The two other matches he will miss will be against Yugoslavia and East Germany.

Ballesteros grabs lead

LONDON (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros of Spain shot a five-under-par 67 Friday to take a one-stroke lead over England's Nick Faldo after three rounds of the $51,000 International Golf Championship at Moore Park.

The 20-year-old Spaniard had a nine-under-par 207 total on the 6642-yard, par-72 course. Faldo, 19, who led after the second round, three putted four times Friday and faded to 73 for a 208.

Australia's Greg Norman, who shot a second successive 70 to go with his opening 69, was alone in third at 209, followed at 210 by Britain's Peter Oosterhuis, 69, Australia's Graham Marsh, 68, and South Africa's Bobby Cole, 71.

Cricket match ends a draw

OXFORD, England (AP) — A second-wicket partnership of 115 between Peter Roebuck and Vic Marks put combined Universities back in the game against the Australian cricket team Friday and the match ended in a draw.

The English side was all out for 130 runs in its first innings Thursday, and in reply the Australians made 188 for four and declared. But Roebuck and Marks took the score to 129 from 14 for one before Marks was dismissed, leg before wicket, for 58.

Combined Universities declared at 240 for eight, leaving the Australian to make 183 in 105 minutes.

Canadian-bred colt favored

DUBLIN (AP) — The Minstrel, a Canadian-bred colt to be ridden by champion jockey Lester Piggott, was the favorite Friday in pre-race betting for today's rich Irish Sweeps Derby over 1½ miles at the Curragh track outside Dublin.

With the outsider Uncle Pokey regarded as a doubtful starter, 15 three-year-olds were expected to go to the post.

Piggott rode The Minstrel to victory in the English Derby early in June at Epsom Downs. It was the jockey's record eighth triumph in the Epsom classic. A win here would give him his fourth Sweeps victory and The Minstrel would follow in the steps of Santa Claus, Nijinsky and Grundy, winners of both the Epsom and Curragh events.

The race is worth $123,755 to the winner, the runner-up earns $35,441 and the third colt's owners get $17,811.

Holders of Irish Sweepstakes tickets who have drawn the winner will win $102,000.

Softball roundup

Sooke club gains on Colony

Sooke Merchants had a big night with their bats Friday as they climbed into third place in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Ron Fedosenko pitched a five-hitter and the Merchants nailed three Colony Inn pitchers for a total of 12 hits as they downed the Hotelmen, 8-1, at Central Park.

The win moved Sooke ahead of Ingraham Hotel and to within a point of Colony Inn which has played four more games.

Bob Harris held Merchants scoreless on one hit in the first two innings but he was tagged for six singles and a double before being relieved in the third inning.

Alden Govenlock had a double, a single and a base-on-balls in three appearances for Sooke while Norm Goudie drove in two runs and Bill Sinclaire hit a pair of singles and scored twice.

In the Heywood Avenue Men's League, Vic Gee and Marv Carver hit home runs and Carver pitched a five-hitter as Capital Builders downed Webb and Trace, 7-2.

Al McDonald, Dave McNeil and Gee had two hits each for Capital which closed to within two points of first-place Castle Properties.

Travelodge edged Tsawout, 6-5, in the Sidney Men's Association game at Sanscha Park while in the Macdonald's Men's League tournament opener at Macdonald Park Century Inn edged Mayfair Esso, 5-3. In the second game of the 12-team, double knockout tournament, which continues today starting at 8 a.m., Davidson Cement upset Strathcona Hotel, 4-2.

Keep eye on Northernette favorite's jockey advised

TORONTO (CP) — Jean-Louis Levesque, owner of early Queen's Plate favorite Giboulee, wants jockey Jean Cruguet to keep his eye on Northernette all the way in today's 1¼-mile race.

The Montreal millionaire, who won the 1975 Plate with L'Enjoleur, says Cruguet will have to make sure the daughter of Northern Dancer doesn't get too many lengths in front "or she's going to win it."

Levesque, who says the Plate is his major goal every year, will send his colt, a son of Northern Dancer — Victory Chant by Victoria Park, against five other colts, a gelding and two fillies. The total purse is $133,135 with $86,537.

Giboulee, with career earnings of $184,277, will leave from the No. 1 post position and is the early 6-to-5 favorite. Sound Reason, never worse than second in 14 starts in Ontario, is listed at 8 to 5 and will leave from post position No. 2.

Northernette, one of the fillies along with Levesque's Grand Luxe, is the third choice at 9 to 2. Winner of last week's Canadian Oaks on a sloppy track by 11 lengths, she will be ridden by Avelino Gomez, 48, who has won the Plate four times.

Others in the field are Crossword Puzzle, the gelding, Social Pleasure, Pro Consul, Plus de Rien and Regent Bird.

It's the 118th running of the Plate, the oldest continuously run stakes race, for Canadian-bred three-year-olds. It will be run at Woodbine racetrack with all the owners representing Ontario except for Levesque.

Today's running of the Queen's Plate will be telecast on channel 8 starting at 1 p.m.

Water safety clinic

Victoria boaters can take advantage of a safe boating and water ski clinic being offered free of charge by Labatt's Breweries and the Department of Recreation and Community Services.

The clinic is from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesday at Crystal Pool and will feature demonstrations on the use of boating equipment and safe boating procedures.

Spectators will be encouraged to participate in the use of the equipment following the demonstrations.

The clinic team is touring the province and will stop at other Vancouver Island spots: Island Hall Hotel, Parksville, on Thursday; Campbell River July 1; Shawnigan Lake July 2 and 3; and Courtenay July 4.

Nolan out

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Right-hander Gary Nolan, acquired from Cincinnati Reds just prior to the June 15 trading deadline, has been placed on the 21-day disabled list by the California Angels. Nolan, 29, has been bothered by a muscle irritation in his right shoulder.

Western Open

Watson, North lead as winds affect play

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — The wind blew and scores ballooned at Butler National Gold Club Friday and Tom Watson and Andy North, taking advantage of better playing conditions in the morning, moved into a tie for the lead in the Western Open at five-under-par 139 for 36 holes.

Watson had one of the three rounds in the 60s during the day, a 69, and North a 70. Along with 23-year-old Phil Hancock, making his first official tour start, tthey were the only players to better par of 72 on each of the first two rounds.

Gary McCord, who shared the first round lead with Bruce Lietzke, each five under par after 18 holes, played it safe to tally 73 and take third place with a 140 total, one stroke behind the leaders.

Mike McCullough had the best round of the day, a 66, six under par and one stroke higher than the course record, but he tallied 76 on his opening round. His super second round score moved him into fifth place with 142, two under par.

Lietzke shot himself out of contention when he went one over par on the ninth hole, posted double bogeys on the next two and then, after a par, added two bogeys. He wound up with an 80 for the day and a 147 total.

Tom Wiskopf had the other sub-70 round, a 69, which moved him into a five-day tie for eighth place at par 144. Bill Kratzert and Curtis Strange shared sixth place with 143.

It was a wild day, a strange day," he said. "The trees protect the fairways from the wind and the grass drops straight down and you look at the green and the flag twirling around and around the stick.

"I did everything. I had a double bogey. I hit in the water. I missed a lot of putts. I made a lot of putts. The consistency wasn't there. The wind was really swirling so you try not to make too many mistakes. I just tried to keep it in play."

McCullough said he played without worrying. "I wasn't concerned with making the cut. I knew I was playing well and I was fortunate to score well. I played just as well the day before and shot 76, but Thursday I was just missing the green and Friday I put the ball on the greens. I took 29 putts each day."

McCullough equalled a course record set in 1975 when he tallied a 31 on the back nine with an eagle and three birdies plus five pars.

Watson indicated he might have scored better.

"I had a lot of birdie opportunities," he said. "I putted well and I was pleased with the way I played."

He used his one-iron on five tees and said, "the course almost demands you play it short off some tees." He used his driver on only eight shots.

U.S. Open champion Hubert Geen fired a par 72 and survived the cut with 148 while Arnold Palmer also qualified for the final two rounds, firing a 73 for 150.

Little Tracy beaten by queen but steals Wimbledon show

LONDON (AP) Tracy Austin, at 14, the youngest competitor in 100 years of Wimbledon, stole the show Friday even though she could win only two games against the world's reigning tennis queen, Chris Evert.

More than 15,000 fans packed the stands around centre court and they went wild over Tracy, even though she lost her third-round match to Evert 6-1, 6-1 at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Stan Smith, Ilie Nastase, Dick Stockton and Vitas Gerulaitis won, but the personality of the day was the little girl from the United States with braces on her teeth and the pony tails.

Evert, the defending champion and top seed, had a harder time advancing to the round of 16 than the score indicated. Of the 12 games Tracy lost, seven went to deuce. She extended the champion in game after game.

Tracy's movements, court sense and beautifully hit backhands and volleys won the heart of the fans.

"A future champion," people were saying as they struggled through the crowds after the match.

Evert said she was nervous, but she looked cool enough as she recovered from a loss in the first game and won the next nine in row, even though the crowd roared for her young opponent.

The champion had too much experience and guile for the little girl. Tracy was never able to anticipate Evert's drop shots and was left standing wide-eyed on her baseline.

The crowd obviously enjoyed Tracy far more than 11th-seeded Stan Smith and New Zealand's Onny Parun, the previous act on the centre court. Smith won 6-3, 5-7, 9-8, 7-5 in three hours of serve-and-volley tennis that lulled spectators on the sultry afternoon.

For most of the match, Smith's first serve was as regular as clockwork. When he got his first serve in, he usually won the point. When he missed, he was often in trouble.

Sixth-seeded Ilie Nastase of Romania, meanwhile, was on his best behavior, keeping his court antics to a minimum as he defeated Eliot Teltscher of the U.S. 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Tim Gullikson, the right-hander of the American twins, edged Brian Fairlie of New Zealand 9-8, 6-3, 8-9, 6-3 in his second tough ordeal in two days.

Dick Stockton, seeded ninth, outplayed Fred McNair 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, Vitas Gerulaitis hit his way past Britain's Jonathan Smith 6-3, 8-6, 6-4 and Sandy Mayer defeated Jorge Andrew of Venezuela 6-4, 9-7, 6-4.

Competing the final 16 are Australians Kim Warwick and Phil Dent, defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden, Nastase, Tom Okker of the Netherlands, Wojtek Fibak of Poland, Mark Cox of Britain and Byron Bertram of South Africa.

South Africans upset two seeded players in the third round of the women's singles. Marise Kruger edged No. 10 Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 6-4, 6-4, and Linky Boshoff defeated France's Francoise Durr, the 11th seed, 6-3, 9-7.

Besides Evert, two other Americans, Rosie Casals and Kathy May, made the last 16.

The biggest upset of Friday's play came in men's doubles, where the top-seeded defending champions, Brian Gottfried and Paul Ramirez, were ousted by Sashi Menon and Jim Delaney 8-6, 7-5, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3 in a match that was carried over from Thursday.

Annual malady sweeping U.K.

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — Each summer, as June gives way to July, a mysterious malady sweeps this sceptered isle.

Influenza sweeps the countryside and medical science is baffled.

Absenteeism soars.

The only clue to this mid-summer madness is that it bears a striking resemblance to that which occurs in Canada in early spring—about the time of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

It has been noted, also, in the United States, when the crack of the bat signals the onset of the world series in the brown days of autumn.

Carriers spreading this strange complaint all seem to be tennis players—Jimmy Connors, Chris Evert, Billie-Jean King and Tracy Austin.

This sickness also has a marked effect upon the economic scene.

Champagne at Wimbledon suddenly becomes more expensive—about $2.30 a glass. Indulge in the strawberries and cream and it will cost you about 20 cents a strawberry.

Of course, you can save all this money by nipping home to watch the spectacle on the television set.

But, if you can't quite sneak the entire day, it's showing in full color at your club. No, you can't catch it in the local pub, because, in England, the publicans lock up and take a siesta for a couple of hours right in the middle of all the action.

Private clubs, however, are not bound by such strictures.

Ardern trade, three cuts reduce Lions to 45 limit

B.C. Lions released four players Friday and traded a veteran Canadian to cut their roster to the 45 players allowed Canadian Football League clubs before they play their third pre-schedule game.

Barry Ardern, who came to the Lions from Ottawa Rough Riders in 1973 in the trade which sent Jim Evenson to the Eastern Conference, was traded to the Saskatchewan Roughriders. In return for the 31-year-old defence back the Lions get the Riders' first-round selection in the 1978 draft of Canadian players.

Rookie-linebacker Don Ward was the only Canadian released by the Lions Friday. Also cut were linemen Paul Brock, Levi Stanley and Reg Brown.

Brock, 22, is a 250-pound offence tackle who joined the club last season; Stanley, a 250-pound 24-year-old defence tackle from the University of Hawaii, played for the Islanders in the World Football League until it disbanded in 1975, and Brown is one-time University of Washington star who was trying to win a spot as the tight end.

The Roughriders also made a trade with Toronto Argonauts, acquiring John Glassford, a rookie Canadian linebacker for a third-round draft choice in 1979. The Riders also released seven players to get their roster to the 45 allowed.

The Argos got down to 45 with a second trade, a retirement and two releases. Their second trade brought future considerations from Edmonton Eskimos in return for import-lineman Curtis Wester, a former member of the Lions. Veteran lineman John Trainor left training camp and was placed on the retired list.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers included Bob LaRose, veteran Canadian receiver, among the cuts they made in meeting the roster limit. And Calgary Stampeders included import quarterback Dave Buckey and Canadian defence-back Bob Hornes, an ex-B.C. Lion, among their cuts.

Equipment trouble hits Independence

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The 12-metre yacht Independence, one of three yachts racing in the America's Cup preliminary trials, twice had to withdraw from races Friday against Courageous on Rhode Island Sound because of equipment problems.

At the start of what was to have been a 13½-mile race at noon, Independence's halyard hook broke, making it impossible to keep her main sail up.

Independence was towed back to her berth in Newport and a loop of stainless steel wire was substituted for the hook.

But when the two yachts tried to start another race about three hours later, the wire also snapped, putting and end to racing for the day.

Independence skipper Ted hood said a heavier loop of wire would be substituted for the one which broke and that Independence would race today if possible.

The New York Yacht Club announced, however, that Courageous and Enterprise will be paired in the first race today, the final day of the preliminary trials.

The club said Independence will be given a chance to race one of the other two boats this afternoon, if her repairs have been satisfactorily completed by that time. Otherwise, Enterprise and Courageous will have a second race.

Courageous, the 1974 America's Cup defender, has a 5-1 record in these preliminary trials which began last Saturday on Rhode Island Sound. Enterprise is 4-4, and Independence, which has not raced since last Tuesday, is 1-5.

Trumpeter plans farewell recital

Trumpeter Boyde Hood, a performer with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and faculty member of the music department at the University of Victoria, will give a recital at 8 p.m. Wednesday in St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra.

He will be accompanied on the organ by Edward Norman, the church's music director.

Hood's recital will be a farewell concert as he and his family are leaving shortly for a year's sabbatical in the U.S.

The program will comprise works ranging from baroque to modern composers and there will be solo presentations by Norman.

Baptist summer programs

Summer programs for children and teenagers have been announced by the Victoria Baptist Chapel which meets in the Cedar Hill Community Centre, 3220 Cedar Hill Road.

Vacation Bible school for children aged four and up to Grade 7 will be held from 9 a.m. to noon July 11 to 15 at the centre with a parents' night at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, July 17.

The children will learn Bible stories and handcrafts and will take part in a recreation program. There is no charge for the Bible School.

Day camps for children who have completed Grade 1 or above will start July 19 for sessions of three days from 8:30 a.m. till 3:30 p.m. Other sessions will begin July 26, Aug. 2 and Aug. 9.

Children will be transferred by church bus from the community centre to the Saanich fair grounds for the daily programs.

Activities will include games, crafts, field trips, swimming, nature and craft activities and other recreation. Bible study will be a part of the programs.

Trips will be laid on to Willows Beach, Sealand, Buchart Gardens, East Sooke Park and on rainy days campers will be taken to the provincial museum, Oak Bay recreation centre, legislative buildings or the Haunted House.

Day camp costs $10 for two sessions of three days each.

The summer program for teenagers has already begun.

There are groups for those interested in learning how to share their faith, pray more effectively and grow spiritually and leadership groups for those interested in developing leadership traits and skills.

Information is available at the church office, 477-5474, regarding these groups and meetings from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday in the East-West lounge of the Student Union Building at the University of Victoria.

A series of action outings including hiking at Botanical Beach, canoeing, horseback riding, camping, drama and movies is being held up to Aug. 7. The church has information on them.

A youth camp will be held from Aug. 15 to 19 at the Indian Mission Camp on Thetis Island. Howard Ramsey of Portland, Ore., will be the camp pastor and Bible teacher. Cost is $35.

Wed lesbians, priest detained

BOGOTA — A Colombian Catholic priest who recently married two lesbians in a ceremony followed by an orgy has been detained by the authorities and will be excommunicated, the evening newspaper El Bogotand said. The Rev. Salomon Cortes is reported to have carried out the ceremony in an improvised chapel set up in a discotheque.

Richardson and the Spirit Spreaders

Pied Piper to play at St. Andrew's

A musical Pied Piper whose choirs have sung in the U.S., and the British Isles, will bring one of those choirs to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The Pied Piper is concert baritone Lyle Richardson, director of music at First Presbyterian Church, San Mateo, California, and director of that church's 30-voice Spirit Spreaders choir.

Monday's performance marks the return to St. Andre's of Richardon and tenor Steven Vario from their own popular European cathedral concert tour. They and the Spirit Spreaders last visited St. Andrew's in 1975.

Interfaith group re-elects leader

TORONTO (SPECIAL) — Rev. Murray Tardiff, a Roman Catholic clerio of Mattawa, Ont., has been elected for a second term as chairman of the Inter-Faith Committee on Chaplaincy in the Canadian Penitentiary Service.

The election took place at a recent meeting. The Pembroke-born priest is the first person to be chosen for a second term.

The committee was formed in 1968 in collaboration with the Canadian Penitentiary Service to give input to the major religious faith groups in Canada in the federal correctional field and to assist authorities in recruiting and selecting qualified chaplains.

Previous chairpersons of the committee were Maj. William Poulton of the Salvation Army; Rev. Robert McRae of the Anglican Church; Rev. Murray Tardiff (1972-74); Rev. Earl Kulbeck of The Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada; and Miss Phyllis Haslam, Anglican and senior executive of the Elizabeth Fry Association.

When Tardiff was unanimously elected for his second term, Rev. Douglas Perry, a Baptist, who moved his election said, "I moved Father Tardiff as chairman because of his unique gifts of leadership and his unusual expertise in the correctional setting with its many challenges."

In taking the chair, Tardiff first expressed the "deep appreciation" of the committee to the retiring chairperson, Phyllis Haslam, who has been a member of the committee since its inception in 1968. He noted not only the manner in which she had led the committee, but also that she had contributed "so much to its direction and creative involvement" in the many facets of corrections.

The committee officially expressed its thanks to Miss Haslam in a motion by Rev. Earl Kulbeck, seconded by Rev. Raymond-Marie Tardif, a Roman Catholic prison chaplain of Kingston, Ontario:

"That the Inter-Faith Committee express to Phyllis Haslam their deep appreciation for her years of service on the committee and particularly for her leadership as its chairman and for her openness in making her experience, skills, and dedication freely available to the important work we share in common."

Serving on the present executive of the Inter-Faith Committee are vice-chairman Rev. William Morlan, Guelph, Ont., a minister of the Christian Missionary and Alliance, a former military chaplain and now a chaplain in a mental hospital, and the secretary-treasurer since its conception in 1968, the Rev. Canon Maurice P. Wilkinson, rector of Trinity Anglican church, Parry Sound, Ont.

Groups represented on the Inter-Faith Committee are Anglican Church of Canada, Canadian Correctional Chaplains' Association, Canadian Jewish Congress, Christian and Missionary Alliance, The Canadian Penitentiary Service, Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, Roman Catholic Church, Salvation Army, United Church of Canada, the Church Council on Justice and Corrections and the Canadian Council of Churches.

The Inter-Faith Committee assists the federal government in 27 units of the federal facilities where there usually are two full-time chaplains, one Protestant and one Roman Catholic, and six other federal correctional institutions where there are part-time or visiting chaplains.

Sally Ann to mark 90th anniversary

The Salvation Army is celebrating 90 years of service in Victoria and General-elect and Mrs. Arnold Brown are in town to join in the weekend events.

The Browns will lead special anniversary services at the Citadel, 757 Pandora, starting at 6 p.m. today with a Memory Lane reception followed at 7:30 p.m. by Ninety Minutes of Praise provided by all the musical sections of the Victoria Citadel Corps.

The regularly scheduled Sunday services at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. will be supplemented by a Citizens' Rally at 3 p.m. when special guests will include Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen and Mrs. Owen, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, Mayor Michael Young and the chairman of the Victoria advisory board of the army, Dr. John Cruise.

"The general public is most cordially invited to share in these special meetings and meet the newly elected general of the army who assumes the international leadership early next month," says Capt. Stan Ratcliffe, public relations officer.

Rev. John Travis of Centennial United Church at Gorge Road and David Street is leaving the parish for Edmonton.

The regular service at 11 a.m. Sunday will be followed by communion.

At 12:15 the congregation is invited to attend a farewell luncheon for Travis, who has been at Centennial for nine years.

Victoria Knights of Columbus are promoting Canada Week and they've asked churches of all denominations in the area to ring their bells and chimes at noon July 1.

Gordon Cowan, public relations officer for Victoria Council 1256 of the Knights of Columbus, said this week that all churches had been contacted.

So far Anglican and United Churches have agreed to participate.

So far Anglican and United churches have agreed to participate in the ringing of bells to mark Canada's birthday, he said.

"We'd like to see individuals taking part, too," he added. "If they want to come out on the street and ring handbells, that would be great."

"We didn't have much time to prepare for it. The idea got started at two of our meetings and we found that our members were in favor of it. As a sign of unity it will be wonderful if church bells are rung all across Canada."

□

Emmanuel Baptist Church will begin its summer drive-in church at Hillside shopping centre at 8:30 p.m. July 3. The services will include a gospel message and music and will last 45 minutes. They will be held on the parking lot at the main entrance to the mall.

□

The second in the series of 12 Christian gospel services for the summer season, sponsored by Park Services Interdenominational, will be held at the Cameron bandshell in Beacon Hill Park at 7 p.m. Sunday.

First Christian Reformed Church and pastor Rev. Peter De Bruyne will be in charge.

The adult choir of the church, under the direction of William Olivier, and the youth choir, under Mrs. Jan Kamps and Dale Huberts, will take part. Rev. Gilbert Kamps will be master of ceremonies.

A pre-service orchestral concert will be given by a group of men from the church starting at 6:45 p.m.

□

Lloyd Hutton, chairman of the board of the United Church Renewal Fellowship based in Barrie, Ont., will address a public meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in James Bay United Church.

Who's finding what, writer asks church

All-out evangelistic campaigns such as the current "I Found It" crusade raise questions about whether Jesus is being "sold or sold out", a writer claims in the current issue of The United Church Observer.

The "I Found It" campaign, organized by Campus Crusade for Christ International, is being carried out in 40 U.S. and Canadian centres this year, using billboards, television programming and door-to-door and telephone calling.

David Hillen, of Stoney Creek, Ont., raised several questions about the campaign, the first theological.

"I always thought that the Christian doctrine of grace requires us to say, 'He found me'," he wrote. "'I found it' sounds like a treasure hunt, with instant salvation for the lucky ones and wailing and gnashing of teeth for the rest."

He also questioned the implications of advertising Jesus. "Is the same technique applicable to Jesus and cigarettes? Is the intent of the campaign to introduce a new product? Or to muscle in on some if the opposition's share? How long do you have to stay saved to be counted?"

The most agonizing question, he says, is whether Jesus is "being sold or sold out". He askes, "Is Jesus being brought into the service of an ideology of shirts and ties and upward mobility and the status quo? Does his command, 'Repent for the Kingdon of God is at hand' really jibe with the slogan 'I found it'?"

Church supports women priests

EDMONTON (CP) — The diocese has concurred with Edmonton Anglican archdiocese has concurred with the national church's decision two years ago to accept women into the priesthood. The decision was made recently at the archdiocesan synod, which meets every two years to consider matters affecting local church operations. Archdeacon Vincent Cole, secretary-treasurer of the synod, said the decision caused no great stir within the local church.

Religious items selling quickly

OTTAWA (CP) — Although many churches are worried about declining membership, it appears there is a revival in the sale of religious articles. Proprietors of several local stores report a boom in business, centred on statues, medals and pictures.

Sacraments by laymen

SACKVILLE, N.B. (CP) — The Maritime conference of the United Church of Canada has decided that its trained laymen, who serve on a full-time basis in pastoral charges, may administer the sacraments.

PERSPECTIVES and PREJUDICES

By J. A. DAVIDSON

In Albert Camus's novel, The Fall, the narrator who is the main character, offers this analysis in a discussion of our human proneness to sit in censorious judgment of one another: "People hasten to judge in order not to be judged themselves."

Then he gives this warning: "The judgment you are passing on others eventually snaps back in your face, causing some damage."

These statements from a distinguished modern novel reflect the significant insight of Jesus on such things: "Pass no judgment, and you will not be judged. For as you judge others, so you will yourselves be judged, and whatever measure you deal out to others will be dealt back to you" (Matthew 7:1,2). New English Bible.)

Yes, the measure we deal out to others is often dealt back to us. Much of our criticism of others is simply a coverup for our own failures and weaknesses and unacknowledged fears. Censorious judgment of others generally tells as much about the person doing the judging as about the person being judged. Studies of gossip have shown that malicious gossip generally reveals more about the persons doing the gossiping than about the persons being gossipped about.

A British psychiatrist, Dr. J. A. Hadfield, put the matter in this way in one of his books: "In judging others we trumpet abroad our secret faults. We personalize our unrecognized failings, and hate in others the very faults to which we are secretly addicted. Like the lark fluttering with agitation over her nest, we exhibit most flagrantly the very thing we would hide."

Moral concern, no matter how honest and sincere it may be, often engenders in us a mood of censorious self-righteousness. We do tend to take delight in the failures and follies of others, feeling that our own virtues, in contrast, shine so much the brighter. We are aware, of course, of the self-righteousness in the old-fashioned person who champions the old-fashioned virtues — but should also be aware that self-righteousness, and the arrogant censoriousness which nourishes it, is not a monopoly of conventional people but that it often afflicts proponents of the various new moral positions. I find more censorious self-righteousness in the writings of persons subscribing to what for convenience perhaps can be called the Playboy philosophy than I find in any modern books on Christian ethics.

You should always be suspicious of the person who is stridently critical and censorious of the moral inadequacies and failures of others. I do not suggest that we abandon all moral discrimination and assume that nothing is wrong as long as you don't get caught. But I do suggest that every time you feel moved to sit in judgment on another person you examine very carefully your own motives for wishing to do so. The measure you deal out to others is often dealt back to you.

JoAnne's putter hot

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — JoAnne Carner used a career-low 25 putts Friday to fire a four-under-par 68 and grab the first-round lead in the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Hoosier Classic at the Plymouth Country Club.

"I usually feel that if I have 30 putts I'll be able to shoot a 68," said the defending Hoosier Classic champion. "But the way I was putting today all I had to do was get it on the green."

One stroke behind Carner and tied for second were Chako Higuchi, Sandra Burns, Signa Quandt, Sally Little and Laura Baugh. Two shots off the pace with 70s were Debbie Austin, Karolyn Kertzman and Mickey Wright.

Carner, the last golfer to complete the par-73, 6225-yard course, recorded seven birdies for the afternoon.

"I always seem to make more birdies on this course than any other," she said.

No Canadians were in the tournament.

City bowlers win opener in B.C. event

The Burnside duo edged Kathy Finch and Stella Larochelle of Vancouver South, 16-15, and will play three matches in the six-team round-robin tournament today.

Ethel McFarlane and Jean Fullard of Victoria Lake Hill dropped an 18-14 decision to Dorothy Macey and Selina Silva of Vancouver South in their opening match.

Ethnic styles are simple for some sewers

By PHYLLIS FELDKAMP
Colonist - Monitor Service

The price of stylish peasantry often comes high. So, ways and means of acquiring the ethnic look without making too much of a dent in your fashion dollar are welcome.

If you are nimble with thimble, needle and thread — or simply able to operate a sewing machine — you are on your way to peasant chic with Folkwear Ethnic Patterns, an engaging series adapted from authentic rational styles from here, there, and everywhere.

The patterns are the brainchild of three visually oriented young Californians who figured that the growing interest in folk costumes was reason enough for them to set up business.

"We first considered kits," says Alexandra Jacopetti, a weaver and embroiderer, who researches and diagrams the needlework techniques that are part of some of the designs. "But that meant compromising on materials, so we ended up with patterns. With a paper pattern you can use either a cheap or expensive fabric, do a quick machine job or spend months on elaborate embroidery or quiling. It gives you total flexibility."

The shapes of the eight different patterns are all traditional ones that are currently very a la mode. There are Syrian, Gaza, Afghani nomad and desert dresses; Egyptian and Romanian blouses; a Turkish coat, A Black Forest Smock; and a French cheesemaker's smock patterned from the original type worn by shepherds who turn out le veritable Roquefort.

A Little Folk envelope contains eight separate patterns for infants through age four: a selection of Nepalese, Moroccan, Mexican, Turkish, and Japanese designs for the stroller set.

Customers in fabric, needlework, and museum shops across the country have been intrigued by the handsome looks of the patterns since they first came on the market a year ago. The sepia-toned cover graphics are by book-illustrator Gretchen Shields, and the patterns themselves are of heavy, reusable brown paper, and are printed with hand-lettered instructions worked out by Folkwear's Barbara Garvey, who was mer.

Ann Wainwright, the third partner, is a former fashion designer, adept at translating ethnic complexities into easy-to-make modern terms.

One of the best-sellers in the line is the Romanian blouse, with smocking and cross-stitch embroidery, a style that would cost up to $100 if you bought the hand-made import version of it in a store.

The fancy stitches — and the seams — may either be done completely by hand on pure silk crepe, if you choose, or made up in cotton voile on a sewing machine equipped with attachments for embroidery work.

Prices of the patterns are from $2.50 to $4.50. You may order them direct by writing to: Folkwear Ethnic Patterns, Box 98, Forestville, California 95436.

Color pushed in big way

OTTAWA (CP) — The old idea that black was best for over-sized women is undergoing an assault by modern fashion designers trying to attract big women to bright colors.

"Color makes them look younger and we are trying to re-educate the larger woman into wearing brighter colors," said Laura Harris Ottawa-area supervisor for Pennington's, whose business is to dress the "queen-size" woman.

Larger-sized women used to dress in black because they thought it made them look slimmer, Mrs. Harris said, but it only made them look old.

While color is the main thing, Mrs. Harris is convinced a large woman can wear anything she wants, including a full skirt, pants and even stripes, if the outfit is cut to her proportions

Larger women more versatile in fashion-buying selections

GLAMOROUS EVENING WEAR — Floor-length top and pant set is ideal for entertaining or an evening out on the town. Shoulder straps of the top — in a bold black and white polyester print — are wider than average to hide brassiere straps. There is a trend among larger women to be more versatile in selecting fashions. A Canadian chain store catering to the larger woman sold more string bikinis in 1975 than any other chain store in Canada.

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — A Canadian chain store catering to the larger woman sold more string bikinis in 1975 than any other chain store in Canada.

Jeanne Self of Toronto, a national buyer for Pennington's said in an interview here that this statistic reveals a trend among larger women to be more versatile in selecting fashions.

In keeping with this desire of larger women to be in fashion, the company's spring line is showing gaucho pants, sundresses and bibbed overalls.

Miss Self said all women are not interested in new fashion, but for those who are, they now have a choice.

"Much depends on the confidence of women . . . whether she will buy more trendy clothes," she said. "For example, she must have a certain inner feeling of confidence to show up on the beach in a bikini.

"But remember, there are a lot of women who have firm flesh and they can get away with it. Many will still choose to cover up, but they are no longer forced to."

The firm, which designs about 95 per cent of its own stock, offers a three-piece bathing suit ensemble. This includes a skimpy brief and top for the woman who wants to sun herself privately.

If she wants more coverage on the beach, she needs only to exchange tops and wear a blouson type.

The new look this summer is the sundress and Pennington's has adapted this style to suit the larger woman. For example, skinny shoulder straps have been widened to hide brassiere straps.

"Let's face it . . . our customers aren't going to go braless and most of them are too heavy even for a strapless bra," she said.

Standard sizes must be revamped regularly to consider such things as muscle measurement.

Darts at the bustline are lowered, jackets are lengthened to cover wide hips and fullness is added through the body, calf and ankle of hosiery.

Women unsure when seeking jobs

By ELAINE SMYTH
Colonist Copley Service

Uncertainty over what preliminary steps to take and lack of self-confidence ... these are the two greatest problems women face when attempting to return to the job market after a lengthy absence, says author Dr. Herbert A. Otto.

"Many women aren't sure what steps they should take to make the most of their background, education, experience and abilities in applying for a new job," Otto said in an interview.

He and Rosalind Loring are co-authors of a new book, New Life Options, The Working Woman's Resource Book.

The idea for the book came from Otto while he was in private practice as a psychologist and marriage and family counselor. He now is a lecturer at California State University's (San Diego) department of family studies and consumer sciences, as well as a consultant and author and lecturer.

"In working with women in groups, I found that certain sets of problems came up repeatedly," he said. "These related to taking care of children while pursuing a career, matters of getting along with a husband, and role changes due to the wife's new job."

Another pattern repeated itself in the sessions with the women, he added. "If they didn't have a job, they wanted to know how they could get started in a new career, to begin to apply for work, and to make the best use of experience and education they had at that time."

While Otto had the idea of putting together such a handbook to answer the recurring questions, he also felt "the senior editor had to be a woman and 90 per cent of the authors should be women. I believe women should be writing for women." Mrs. Loring is senior editor of the handbook.

Otto said he and Mrs. Loring, dean of continuing education at the University of Southern California, brought together knowledgeable people they knew to write on the areas they wanted the handbook to cover: Getting the Best From Your Career; Taking Good Care of Yourself; The Potential of Your Relationships; Managing Your Options; and Making a Political Impact as a Woman, an epilogue written by former Congresswoman Patsy Mink of Hawaii.

Topics include how to handle sexism at work, how to manage both a job and a home, family planning facts, mental health, coping with child care, living alone and the world of retirement.

Otto said other major areas of concern to women wanting to return to work is how to reassess their role in relation to their home. Here, many women ask the same questions including How many of a woman's former functions as a homemaker now should be equally shared among other household members?

"Many working women ask themselves that and many tend to overload themselves. It's very hard to relinquish some of the household tasks, even though they're now working.

"The tendency is for many women to be both physically and emotionally overloaded," Otto said.

Many husbands whose wives have returned to work find it difficult to carry some of the household load, he says.

"This is because many are comfortable with the status quo and there's a reluctance to change life-styles and habits they had for the last 15 years or more."

The La Jolla, Calif., author has observed another pattern during his years in private practice. "I find women are always more ready to change and grow as persons than men are.

"Women are more the risk-takers in relation to personality change and personality growth than men are."

He has found women more willing to look at themselves — see if a change is needed and, if it is, make that change — face those feelings — gain new insights into themselves and those around them.

Cucumber, avocado, bananas are creams, astringents

Refrigerator holds beauty aids

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Colonist-Copley News Service

Rejuvenation therapy, rather than cosmetics, will be the big beauty trend of the future, according to beauty expert and author Emily Wilkens.

"But not yet," she added. "They're trying out therapies all over the world, but rejuvenation is still a tomorrow thing.

"The theory behind rejuvenation is that injections or some sort of therapy is supposed to replace your diminishing cells as you grow older. You could say that as we grow older, we have less of what it takes to be younger. The idea is to stimulate your body to grow younger.

"Men are interested in rejuvenation because they think it's a sex stimulator, that it enhances," she said, "and women because they simply don't want to grow old."

Among the popular theories being tried abroad, not in this country, she lists in her book, Secrets from the Super Spa are cellular therapy with its injections of unborn lamb cells; chick-embryo, wherein chicken embryos are swallowed; organic diets; kinesotherapy; homeopathy; vitamin megadosages; and a buffered procaine injection (a special formula Novocain) coming into use in Romania.

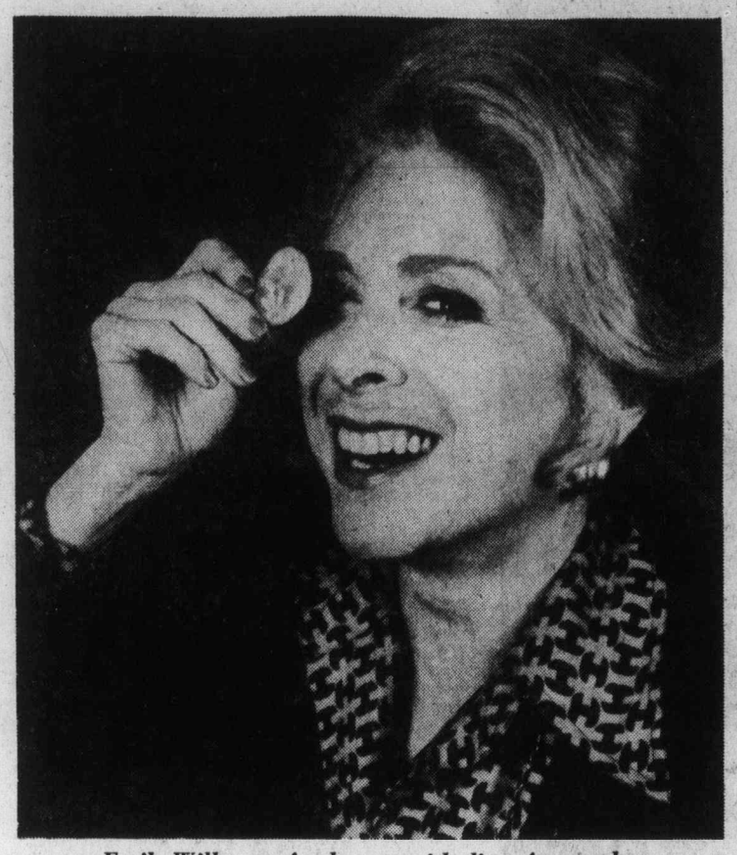
But those are all ready tomorrow topics, Mrs. Wilkens said.

Right now she's concentrating on low-cost, versatile cosmetic-type goodies from the kitchen cupboards and medicine cabinet and one commercial product, a nonaerosol hair spray which doesn't hurt the ecology, she said, and that's why she recommends it.

Mrs. Wilkens begins discussing beauty by laying out a supply of cooking, salad and first aid ingredients. Eggs, an avocado, a banana, lemon, cucumber, jars of oatmeal, skim milk powder, a crystal flask of castor oil, petroleum jelly, white iodine, mint-flavored milk of magnesia. She learned about these secrets from the refrigerator at an early age, she said, since her mother and father — he was a chemist — both believed in visiting spas.

First you eat half of the foods, avocado, cucumber, for instance, she said, establishing a good diet rule, then use the other half to help your skin.

Cucumber slices as astringents on the eyes. The avocado pulp, mixed with the skim milk, as a hand and body cream. Roll the avocado seed up and down the neck for massage.



Emily Wilkens refreshes eye with slice of cucumber

Twirl a lemon half on the point of the elbow. Use the egg white, slightly beaten, as a mask. Try the castor oil as an eye cream, to remove mascara, and lighten spots on the hands. Use castor oil and white iodine on your nail cuticle, and the petroleum jelly as a hand and foot cream. Rub it on eyelashes to encourage growth.

Mint-flavored milk of magnesia can be used on the oily areas of the face, usually nose and chin, to dry up extra oil, and it's fantastic for sunburn, she said. Mash the banana with skim milk for a moisturizing face mask, then use the inside of the banana skin to shine the shoes. Old-fashioned oatmeal makes a good rough skin cleanser.

But those are all superficial things, she said, while learning about your diet is a good key to getting all beauty routines working for you. Eat nonchemical foods, "something with life," she advised, and think twice before putting anything in your mouth. Make sure that what you do put in will be good for you.

Eat constructively, not excessively, and pay attention to your yearnings, because maybe that's what your body really needs, she said.

Mrs. Wilkens writes a triweekly beauty column for King Features Syndicate, and is the widow of New York Supreme Court Irving Levy. She is the mother of two children, both now graduated from college.

She began work as a fashion illustrator, then became a designer of children's clothes.

Later, designing clothes for teenagers and juniors, she won the Coty, Neiman-Marcus and Mademoiselle awards for achievement in fashion.

Today, Mrs. Wilkens said, when many American women are getting by on tight budgets, spending less for beauty products is simply good buymanship.

"These ideas I've passed along will save hundreds of dollars a year," she said. "But then I've always believed that fashion and beauty do not belong to the young and wealthy."

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing regarding your recent column Ten Rules For Raising Children. I would appreciate an explanation regarding Rule No. 1: "Remember that a child is a gift from God . . ."

Do you truly believe that the good Lord sends a gift to the abusive mother, the prostitute, the unwed teen-ager, not to mention the millions of disadvantaged who can't feed the children they already have and certainly don't need another gift?

Do you also believe that He deprives the multitude of individuals who so dearly want this gift.

Perhaps you should set your readers straight and tell them that Nature plays the greatest role in determining who is to have and who is not to have children. I feel confident that God would not waste His time sending gifts to those who do not want them.—One Who Has Been There

Dear One: I do not believe God gift-wraps babies and sends them via United Parcel to individuals whom He wishes to favor.

I do, believe, however, that the miracle of life in itself is proof that there is a God. Only a greater power could have dreamed up something so unique and so biologically perfect as Man and Woman.

Just imagine—of the billions of people who have been born since th ebeginning of time, no two humans were exactly alike!

When I say, Remember that a child is a gift of God, I mean there is the magic of God in every human—yes, even if his mother was a prostitute, or unwed or disadvantaged. People need to be reminded that every new life is a miracle.

Dear Ann Landers: Our school is rather small. We don't have a guidance counsellor. But we do have an English teacher who is one of the neatest ladies who ever lived.

Whenever I have a problem I ask her for a few minutes of her time. She has never failed me. I feel so close to her, almost like she is my older sister. She can tell if I'm upset or angry or down. Sometimes she even asks me to stay and tell her what's bugging me.

So maybe if those kids who don't like their counsellors (or don't have one) would go to a teacher they really like, it would accomplish the same thing.—Grateful

Dear B.B.G.: I intentionally left the city off your signature because the problem you describe is a common one in every city. It's also one of the most difficult to do anything about for the reason stated in your signature.

A wife can tell a husband, a husband can tell a wife, brothers and sisters can tell each other, parents and children, ditto, but a person with whom you work — especially if he or she happens to be in a superior position — well, it's darned near impossible.

I suggest you (and others who are faced with a problem of this nature) clip this column and send it, anonymously, to the person you want to help. I earnestly hope those who receive the clippings will consider it an act of kindness — not an insult. I'm certain if the offending parties new better they would do better.

Dear Ann Landers: I am getting married soon. The problem is my cousin — age 18. I asked her to be my maid of honor (this was six months ago). She was thrilled. Then I asked her, as a favor to me, to please lose some weight so she'd look nice. She said, Yes.

Well, the wedding is five weeks off and the moose hasn't lost an ounce. Do I have a right to tell her she didn't live up to her promise so I am asking someone else? — Let Down A Lot.

Dear L.D.: It's a wedding and not a style show, I presume. You invite people to be in your wedding party because they mean something to you, not because they make a great appearance. To exclude her now would be cruel. Don't do it.

Creamy a texture not flavor

By ARTHUR SCHWARTZ
Colonist - Newsday Service

Fat worries increase in direct proportion to the temperature, but so does my desire for cool and creamy foods. I've discovered, however, that it isn't necessary to load up a dish with cream or flour-butter thickening to achieve that velvety, mouth-coating feeling that soothes me so well. I can have cool and creamy without guilt now.

Creamy is a texture, not a flavor. And while it's true that fats such as butter certainly adds a note of elegance to the texture of any soup or sauce, and that a bit of flour thickening is hardly dangerous to your well being, there are saner, more nutritious alternatives to the high-fat enrichments and the flour thickenings traditionally used to achieve the comforting texture we call creamy.

Let's take the thickeners or binders first. Flour is added to a soup or sauce for two reasons — it binds the ingredients together and it thickens the liquid.

If used with discretion, and cooked properly in fat, the starchiness of flour can be undetectable, although the fat it must be cooked in is awfully caloric. Quite often, however, (and restaurants are the chief offenders here) flour is overused or undercooked and makes the soup or sauce a revolting, pasty glop.

Cornstarch and, less frequently, arrowroot are used as thickeners, but they're tricky and usually even less satisfactory than flour when improperly handled. Next time you are in a Chinese restaurant that overlooks the cornstarch, notice how sticky and artifically shiny the sauce looks after just a few seconds.

These thickeners are not always necessary for a thick texture, however. Vegetables cooked in the pan juices of a pot roast, then pureed, will thicken the liquid into an appetizing and nutritious sauce. Potatoes are a common natural soup thickener.

And in one recipe that follows, a combination of brown rice (much higher in calcium, phosphorous and potassium than white rice) and pureed whole asparagus (a good source of fiber), gives a rich but light thickening to a subtle cream soup. In the other recipe the almost magic thickening powder of eggs when they are moderately heated adds body to a refreshingly tart beet borscht. And eggs add high-quality protein along with their calories.

Creamy, as I said, is a texture not a flavor. Nevertheless, as the word implies, the milk products are creamy beyond any other quality they have. To enhance a soup's creamy sensation, however, the milk product doesn't have to be double thick, extra-high-fat sweet cream or cultured sour cream.

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

1 pound asparagus
3 scallions (white and light green only), chopped
2 tablespoons brown rice
2 cups water
½ teaspoon salt
fresh-ground pepper to taste
3 tablespoons plain yogurt or sour cream few drops lemon juice

Wash the asparagus well, then slice each spear on the diagonal into several pieces, reserving a few of the asparagus tips for a garnish.

In a saucepan, combine the asparagus, scallions, brown rice, water, salt and pepper. Bring to a simmer. Cover and simmer until asparagus and rice are very tender, 20 to 25 minutes.

In a blender or food processor, puree the asparagus mixture. (With a blender, this will have to be done in several batches.)

Pour the puree into a clean saucepan and heat through. Stir in the yogurt or sour cream and lemon juice. Chill thoroughly. Taste and correct seasoning. Garnish with raw asparagus tips. Makes 4 servings.

CREAMY BORSCHT

4 cups water
1 tablespoon salt
1 medium onion, peeled
1 large clove garlic, peeled
2 bunches beets, washed, peeled and shredded coarse juice of ½ lemon
2 eggs, lightly beaten
2 cups plain yogurt
12 steamed new potatoes (hot and freshly cooked)
1 tablesppon chopped fresh dill

In a saucepan, combine the water, salt, whole onion, whole clove of garlic, shredded beets and lemon juice. Over high heat, bring to a simmer and simmer for 45 minutes or until onion is soft.

Remove onion and garlic. In a small mixing bowl, beat some of the hot broth into the lightly beaten eggs. Pour egg mixture into remaining soup and stir well. Chill thoroughly.

Beat in yogurt. Taste and correct seasoning. Serve very cold with hot whole new potatoes; the contrasting temperatures add interest. Garnish with sprinkling of chopped fresh dill. Serves 4.

Radishes are low in calories

Radishes, the tangy member of the mustard family is a hardy biennial that grows under a variety of conditions in many regions of the world. Related to cabbages, cauliflowers, Brussels sprouts, brocoli, turnips, horseradish and watercress, the radish is a root, and the name radish is derived from the Latin word radix, unsurprisingly meaning root.

The radish seems to have originated in China, where it has been cultivated for thousands of years. From China, it spread into Middle Asia. In Egypt, radishes were a common food long before the pyramids were built.

So highly did the Greeks esteem the radish that they made small replicas in gold, and used them in the worship of Apollo.

Much later, radishes appeared in England in 1548, when they were either eaten raw with bread, or used as a sauce with meats.

Today, a small radish measures less than ¾ inch in diameter and a large radish, over 1-¼ inch. However, very large radishes have been mentioned throughout history.

The Roman writer Pliny (26-113 A.D.) told of long white radishes the size of a boy infant.

At the beginning of the Christian era in Rome, radishes were reported to grow several pounds in weight. In 1544, a German botanist reported radishes weighing up to 100 pounds each! Commodore Perry in 1852 reported seeing Lew Chew radishes in Japan measuring two and three feet in length and more than a foot in diameter. Even today, radishes weighing several pounds each are not uncommon in Japan.

In Egypt, a radish is cultivated for its edible leaves only. In both China and Japan, radishes are pickled in brine — like cucumbers.

In North America, radishes are generally eaten raw out of the hand, or as a basic ingredient in salads.

When shopping for radishes, choose only those that are fresh and bright-looking, smooth and firm, well-formed in appearance, tender, crisp and with a reasonably mild flavour.

Radishes contain only about 2 calories each, but they're more than just a low-calorie food. Radish slices — and particularly radish roses — add a decorative touch to just about anything . . . from salads to party sandwiches.

Pleasure boat towed to port

The Pacific Rescue Centre got another mission under its belt Thursday after the Queen of Saanich reported a pleasure craft in difficulty off Salt Spring Island.

A rescue centre spokesman said a rescue boat from Ganges was sent out at 5:02 p.m., took the troubled boat in tow and brought it and its three occupants to Tsehum Harbor near Sidney.

Colonist - Copley Service

The American Heart Association Cookbook explains that more careful planning is required to get adequate nutrition from a vegetarian diet than from a diet that includes meat. The difficulty is getting enough of the right kind of protein.

Protein is made up of 22 amino acids, eight of which must be acquired from food; our bodies cannot make them. If one of the eight is missing in the correct quantity from the food we eat, then all of the others are useless. Without the missing link, they are powerless to build a single protein molecule, a situation that can lead to a deficiency in this vital body-building element.

Some vegetable sources, such as beans, seeds and grains, contain high-quality protein, but are better eaten in combination rather than alone because they can supplement one another to make far more of it available for body use. The key word here is available.

Vegetable protein does not contain fat and is less costly than animal protein; but to get sufficient amounts of it, one must consume vegetables in greater bulk than is necessary with animal products. Eggs and low-fat dairy products have all the necessary amino acids, making them high-quality sources and therefore excellent dietary supplements. Unfortunately, the high-colesterol content of the egg yolk makes it unacceptable for regular daily consumption, but no such limitation applies to the egg white - and the egg white is protein.

The vegetarian (vegan) who does not eat animal products must combine plant products very carefully to obtain enough usable protein, matching vegetables that lack certain amino acids with others that supply them. For example, wheat and beans supplement each other it eaten together, as do peanuts and sunflower seeds, and rice and beans.

The American Heart Association Cookbook has a guide in meal planning to obtain proper protein supply from vegetable sources.

These recipes contain skim milk products and eggs in small amounts. They are balanced to give you the right combinations of amino acids and still be low in cholesterol and saturated fats.

ENCHILADA BAKE

½ c. dry beans, cooked
1 onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
5 or 6 mushrooms, sliced
1 green pepper, chopped
1½ c. stewed tomatoes
1 tbsp. chili powder
1 tsp. cumin seed, ground
Salt to taste
1½ c. dry red wine
8 corn tortillas
One-fourth cup grated Mozzarella cheese (made from partially skimmed milk)
½ c. ricotta cheese (made from partially skimmed milk)
One-fourth cup low-fat yogurt
6 black olives, sliced

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

Saute onion, garlic, mushrooms and pepper.

Add the beans, tomatoes, spices, salt and wine. Simmer gently for about 30 minutes.

Mix ricotta cheese and yogurt.

In an oiled one and one-half quart casserole, put a layer of tortillas, a layer of sauce, one and one-half tablespoons of grated cheese and four tablespoons of cheese yogurt mixture. Repeat until all ingredients are used, ending with a layer of sauce. Top with cheese-yogurt mixture and black olives.

Bake for 15 to 20 minutes. Yield: six servings. Approximate calories per serving: 195.

COTTAGE CHEESE-NUT LOAF

One-fourth cup polyunsaturated margarine
1 medium onion, chopped
1 pkg. light broth
2 eggs, well beaten or one-half cup liquid egg substitute
2 cups low-fat cottage cheese
½ c. chopped walnuts
2 cups fortified flake-type cereal

Preheat oven to 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

Saute onions in margarine.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Picking fruit of any kind is a job involving considerable knowledge, as I think anyone who has ever gone out to a berry farm with a harvesting gang can testify. The old timers and professionals can pick rings around the raw amateur; moreover, they seem to get the job done with a lot less wear and tear on the human frame.

If you have much fruit to pick in your home garden, a few simple and inexpensive pieces of equipment can go a long way to increase speed, efficiency and comfort on the job.

With strawberries, for instance, you must get down to it, and to make this chore a bit easier, the wisest investment I ever made was to buy myself a pair of sponge rubber strap-on knee pads. Mine are six years old now and as good as the new, and every year during the berry season I bless the day I saw these pads in a garden shop and bought them.

For the bush fruits — currants, gooseberries, raspberries and the like — my Lazy Gardener's equipment is simply an ancient wooden soap box to sit on, end up for the taller stuff and sideways for the berries closer to the ground, which brings me to just the right height to work in comfort.

Another valued piece of equipment for picking is a plastic bucket to hold the fruit. It doesn't bruise the fruit as hard metal might and it doesn't chip like enamel, yet it can be sterilized with boiling water at the end of each day's picking to prevent spores and moulds from spreading through the harvested crop. We have several sizes of these plastic pails, including a one-quart ice cream container fitted with a string to hang around my neck, leaving both hands free for picking.

Ideally, strawberries should be picked in the morning while they are still cool. Take about half an inch of stem with each berry, cutting the stem with the thumbnail pressed against the forefinger, and handle the berry itself as little as possible.

With gooseberries, the first pickings should be made when the berries are still quite small and green, and this is more of a thinning operation than a harvesting of a crop. Pick individual berries, thinning them out to permit the survivors to plump themselves up. The green berries you pick are delicious when stewed with a few elderberry blossoms, and I think they have a better flavor when preserved than the big fellows that come along later, although they DO need more sugar.

If you sell your raspberries, pick them in the pink stage, for they travel better when a bit on the firm side. For immediate use and for a real taste treat, leave them on the canes until ripe enough for the plug to be left behind when you pull off the berry, and pick in the cool of the morning. Very ripe berrits can be used for jam.

Red and white currants are picked in bunches, but for these crops, early morning picking doesn't work out so well. Dew on the berries can ruin the harvested crop, so it is just as well to leave them until they are dry.

Black currants can be picked in the same way, but don't forget you have to prune the bushes right after the harvest. My Lazy Gardener's method is to combine picking and pruning in one operation.

When the berries are dead ripe, I cut out whole branches and toss them into a clothes basket. These are taken to a cool, shaded patio where the family gathers around, comfortably seated, to pick off the berries.

The trick with grapes is not to become impatient, but leave them on the vine, eating a few from time to time until your taste buds tell you they are just right. A light autumn frost won't hurt them — in fact, a very gentle kiss of frost will make them all the sweeter.

Jack Smith

As I have often said here, it is hard to write a single sentence that does not offend someone, and lately my batting average seems to have been worse than usual.

I have a letter from a reader, for example, enclosing a sermon delivered recently in South Pasadena in which my name is mentioned, rather unfavorably, 15 itmes.

Actually, the minister was knd. There was more sorrow in his tone than reproach. His message. I believe was that I was hopeless. But those in his presence could yet be saved.

No one likes to be condemned from the pulpit, yet it is a form of attention, and I am gratified. I only wish my father had been alive to wear it.

The minister was Dr. Edwin Roberts, of the Dneonta Congregational Church, and his point was that my melancholy on Sunday afternoon was the result of not having gone to church that morning. On the contrary, I thought it was the result of having gone to church every Sunday when I was a boy.

As I say, though, Dr. Roberts was kind. Though he said I had "absolutely no sense of the reality of God'" he went on to say some complimentary things: "Of course Jack Smith is bright. He has many connections. He has a pleasant and interesting job. He works in a world of ideas. He has a knack for expressing ideas with great precision and clarity. You could say that Jack Smith gets along very well. We don't have to send him any sympathycards . . ."

Though I have made no arrangements for my eulogy, I could not wish for a better one than that, and I hope that Dr. Roberts survives me to deliver it.

I'm afraid I don't have the same warm feeling, though, for a gentleman who wrote, not to me, not to my employers, as follows:

"After reading Jack Smith's column. I was answered and dismayed. Accordingly, I refer the matter to you for proper consideration and action.

"I am not Baptist. Nonetheless, even quoting Poor Rigney does not give Smith licence to flaunt their irreligiosity and its implied attack upon his many Christian readers."

"When you could be a steadying influence in this period of declining morality," writes Monica Bodine. "You have joined the unstable by purchasing and preserving and passing on, instead of burning, those magazines you mentioned. Shame on you!"

Ms. Bodine was referring to my collection of Playboys, Vivas and Ouis, which I gave to the Ladies of Mt. Washington for their annual benefit sale. I won't try to defend myself for collecting Playboy and the others, but maybe I will be forgiven, having donated them to a good cause.

I have also received some complaints over a remark I made, rather inconsiderately, about San Bernadino. I was trying to explain that New Yorkers ridicule Los Angeles because everybody has to have somebody to feel superior to and Los Angeles felt superior to San Bernardino.

Of the several complaints I received on that point, certainly the most succinct was from Sue Diblin, of Highland, which is close to San Bernardino. It reads as follows:

"I am sure that your gratuitous remarks about San Bernardino were made just to find out it we were paying attention.

"We are."

"How in the world," wrote Marilyn Glick, "could anyone living in L.A. feel superior to us here? What do you possibly have that we don't have, or aren't within 30 minutes of having? We are surrounded by beautiful mountains and are only a short drive from both desert and ocean . . . No longer must we battle traffic jams, stand in long lines, and pay high prices for theater tickets. In addition, the citizens of this lovely city are charming, intelligent, friendly and, above all, not possessed with the need to feel superior to other towns."

"San Bernardino has its act together," writers Edgar Dollar, of San Bernardino, "so can look with tolerant — even fond — amusement at the efforts of its big neighbor to achive a stature commensureate with its size. It is fortunate that San Bernardino has no need to look down on another city because if it did it would be unable to see the logical candidate some 60 miles to the west because of the physical manifestation of defuscation which is Los Angeles's primary product and export."

To tell the truth, when I was in the Civilian Conservation Corps and stationed at March Field Air Force Base, I used to hang out in San Bernardino. Frankly I liked it. But perhaps I didn't known any better. I was only twenty.

Arthur Hoppe

The women's magazines are filled these days with advice on how to save your marriage. But does such advice work? The answer is a resounding, "you're darned tooting!"

The proof is an article in the current issue of Ladies Home Companion by Millicent (Muffie) Frisbee entitled, How Advice on Saving My Marriage Saved My Marriage. The text follows:

I guess it was reading Has That Special Glint Gone Out of Your Hubby's Eye? that started it. I realized then that for ten years Fred's come home with open arms which he uses to get two beers out of the refrigerator before sitting down to read his paper.

So I followed the advice in the article. Every night for a week I threw my arms around him at the door while wearing nothing but whipped cream. This made both the dry cleaners and the milkman happy. Not Fred, though, for some reason.

I could see more drastic steps were needed. Having read, Take an Interest in Your Husband's Work, I took an interest in his work. "What do you do for a living, Fred?" I asked him straight out. "I work," he said, rattling his paper. I felt it was a start.

So in order to Make Yourself a More Interesting Person, I took an adult education course in urban redevelopment and a tab of LSD before dinner. Fred didn't seem too interested in urban redevelopment but he did say, "Come down off that chandelier before you break it."

I was making progress. Taking to heart the advice Never Bother Hubby with Household Problems, I didn't mention the dry rot in the kitchen floor. and I think I may have seen that special glint in his eye as he dropped in on the Swinging Singles Bar in our basement holding two cans of beer. He wasn't badly hurt, though.

Did I mention installing that bar? It was while reading, To Save Your Marriage, Have an Affair, that I resolved to make the supreme sacrifice.

I broke the news to him as gently as possible. (Be honest! the article said.) "To be honest, Fred," I said, "I am running off to Duluth to have an affair with an unemployed left-handed glove salesman!" I must say he took this thunderbolt very well. He even managed a smile.

For six weeks in the Bide-an-Hour Motel in Duluth I did my best to make Fred happy. And it worked! "It was only to make you happy, Fred," I explained nervously when I returned, "that I ran off with another man for six weeks."

And there, at long last, was the special glint in his eye. "To be honest," he said, "I've never been happier."

So that's how advice on how to save your marriage saved my marriage. The only question I have now — and I think this must run through the minds of many wives — is what the hell am I going to do with it?

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — "You've caught me on a bad day," says Ursula Andress, age 40. "I hate myself today. I'm getting old — decaying. Why can't we all stop at 30? I love old people but I don't like getting old."

The Swiss actress was in town for a few days recently to plug Behind the Iron Mask for Sacha-Wein films before returning to Rome to star in a movie with Marcello Mastroianni and Peter Ustinov.

Even at age 40, Ursula, sometimes known as Ursula Undress, can peel off her clothes for a scene and make heads wrench up and down a soundstage.

Told that most women would like to look like her at age 40, Ursula said:

"That doesn't help. Not right now. I'm on my own. Quite lonely and living like a saint.

"Life without love in not worth living. What else is there? To me, love is the most important thing in the world."

Prior to that, she has numbered among htr beaux Jean-Paul Belmondo, Ryan O'Neal and Mastroianni, all of whom still love her dearly. As does her former husband, John Derek.

Derek, an actor and prophotographer, taught her how to shoot pictures.

"I'm getting bored with acting," says Ursula. "I only accept film occasionally because I'm afraid I may not get another offer. But I like to take photos. I'm quite good. I've already sold some to Elle and Paris Match.

Ursula should have been a star much sooner. I first knew her when she arrived her at age 18 under contract to Paramount. She sat around the lot for years without working.

Living Quarters

What a terrific location. Just about ½ from what is to become downtown Saanich. On a major thoroughfare. Present owners must go to Winnipeg. Beautiful living quarters with two bedrooms on main, extra one in basement plus area in attic for more. Store is for take out only, but can be made into a terrific business. Presently only operated for 3 hours a day, 6 days a week. A family should buy this and put the children to work. Dad can keep his job. This is ideal. Adjacent to park, and Saanich is granting a 20' wide area for extra parking adjacent to your building. Must be sold. This won't last. Trade your home in on this business and commercial zoned property. Asking $79,900. Call:

MONEY

Monetary Obligations Negotiate Efficient Yields". A laymans translation being: "Now is the TIME to prove your Dollar VALUE.".
Match your dollars to any of these fine offerings:
UNDER $20,000.
A small older cabin on about 1-3 of an acre on the east Shawnigan Road with good lake view. The lot is nicely treed and has about 58' road frontage, has a well and septic facilities. Asking $19,500.

UNDER $40,000
1. A handyman special on 1 Ac., 3 bdrms., outbuildings, close to schools and store. Offers on $37,500.
2. Seaview, ¾ Ac., now has 2 bdrm, mobile. Creek. A lot of potential for the reasonable asking price of $39,500.

Under $50,000
1. A neat older 2 bdrm. home on a lovely secluded 2 AC parcel. First time offered on the market! Asking $44,500.
2. A new (1 yr.) 3 bdrm. full bsmt. home at end of cul-de-sac in area of new homes. Lots of trees give a natural rural atmosphere to this Shawnigan Lake Sub. Vendor has plans which urge her to entertain offers on $49,900.

Under $60,000
1. Vendor says SELL "Now". A bargain at this uncompleted stage. It's LOG, It's Unique and it's beautiful! He has artistically blended "log and plaster" decor. A lovely rock fireplace, 3 bdrms. up, 1 down, sliding glass doors to 2 decks. Lg. rumpus room, ¾ Ac. that needs some landscaping and your efforts will be well rewarded on an "offer" on $59,500.

Under $70,000
1. SEAVIEW, Approx. 20 yrs., well built "homey" dwelling on an exceptionally well landscaped approx. half lot. "The view is commanding"! Unique things like the glassed "garden room" make this a property to really consider for its asking price of $67,500. On the vendor, well he's building the house next door!

REVENUE
1. A Country home 3 or 4 bdrm., but has the equivalent of a full suite in the basement, with a sep. entrance. On ½ Ac. on paved road. Tenants now but Vendor anxious to sell. Offers on $62,500.

Under $80,000
1. An exceptionally well built 3 bdrm. home. New and a difficult one to replace! Cedar siding exterior, gyp. and wood int., 1st quality w-w and imported tiles. Lg feature rock fireplace. Thermopane windows. On 2 Ac. within 1 mi. of Shawnigan Beach. Serious buyers look at this at $79,500.
2. 1800 sq. ft. home, plus enclosed garage, 4 stall barn green house, dog kennell, swimming pool, on 2.57 acres. The driveway is paved; the landscaping is done; and it's waiting for the anxious family to get on with "living", in the Mill Bay area. As vendors sadly have to move to Duncan for business reasons! They have reluctantly lowered their "appraised" asking price of $82,500 and would consider a "solid" $75,000 offer!
3. A brand new listing, 2 yr. old, 2800 sq. ft. of living, 4 bdrm., elec. ht. in area of fine homes, on Shawnigan Lake area. Close to all amenities. Nicely landscaped. Try an offer on the asking price $72,500.

REVENUE
1. An opportunist could use this! It's 3 bdrm. up, 2 ensuite, and a master bath. Plus a 3 bdrm. full suite in bsmt. with separate entrance. Share a utility. Dble carport plus dbl. attached garage, ideal for "home occupation". Sunken gas fuel tank for private use. Distant views. Close to schools and stores, yet secluded. Tenant occupied presently. Offers on $79,500.

Hawaii's state bird dealt setback

By ROY NICKERSON
Colonist - Monitor News Service

LAHAINA, Maui, Hawaii — The slow recovery of the Hawaiian goose or nene (pronounced nay-nay) from the brink of extinction appears to have been dealt a setback by the peculiar weather pattern which has plagued the world for more than a year.

The nene, which is the Hawaiian word for goose, is the official state bird. It exists in the wild only in Hawaii and is the object of a concerted effort to breed it back from what some feared were hopelessly depleted numbers.

Most of Hawaii has suffered from what is known as a drought, as strange as it may seem to those who know only that the state is a group of islands in the middle of a vast expanse of ocean. The prevailing weather pattern is from west to east. Kaui, the first major Hawaiian island in the west, has received the lion's share of the rain.

By the time weather reaches the islands at the southeast end of the chain, Maui and Hawaii, little precipitation is left. Fields of pineapple and sugar cane have been sustained by irrigation systems, and the island's booming construction industry has seen a slowdown because government planners feel the water supply has reached the limit in some areas.

Maui is one of these areas. Near the top of Haleakala, the 10,000-foot dormant volcano which dominates the island, is one of the natural habitats of the nene. The crater area is Haleakala National Park, and near park headquarters there is an enclosure where three pairs of nene have been kept — not the same ones — since 1972. Park scientists wanted to monitor the reproductive pattern of the goose and see if they could breed successfully.

On Christmas Day 1972 five nene goslings were hatched, and survived. On December 26, 1973, three goslings hatched and survived and the pattern continued in 1974 and 1975.

The vigil started again at Christmas, 1976. The days slipped into January, and by the time February had arrived, it was obvious the nesting trio would not have young. The hatching period is normally 31 to 34 days.

Park Superintendent Hugo Huntzinger had the eggs collected and candled. Each of the three mother geese had laid five eggs. It was found that seven of the 15 eggs had started to develop and then stopped.

"This is just my guess," Huntzinger says, "but I think it was the drought condition which killed them. The normal moisture in the ground was not present where they were nesting."

Ever optimistic, Huntzinger adds, "I hope these geese will go back and nest again. They have in past years, when we've taken unhatched eggs from them."

Some centuries ago — long before there was written history in Hawaii — a flock of wild geese either lost its "radar" or, more probably was blown far off course during a migration.

These geese finally came to land on the Hawaiian Islands, and they have remained there. Over the years, what was apparently a single wild flock multiplied to the point where there may have been 25,000 of them.

In the past, Hawaiians found them tasty and hunted them relentlessly. In the late 1700s Yankee traders started plying the islands, and in 1820, the missionaries arrived. These outsiders brought dogs and cats with them.

Finally, about 100 years ago, the Indian mongoose was imported to control the rat population. But as the mongoose prowls mostly in the daytime, and the rats come out at night, the two rarely met. The mongoose discovered that goose eggs were delicious and the cats found the goslings easy prey.

A nene census of 1923 estimated that only between 20 and 30 of the birds remained on Maui and the Big Island (the Island of Hawaii.)

In 1949 Colin Lennox, administrator of what was then the Territory of Hawaii Department of Agriculture and Forestry, commissioned a study of the nene.

At that time, the nene was being reared in captivity in two places: on a Big Island ranch owned by the late Herbert Shipman; and at a preserve in England called Slimbridge, by conservationist Sir Peter Scott. Sir Peter obtained three nene from Shipman and he later estimated that he had released about 1,000 back to nature.

Hotel Vancouver shuts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The strike-bound Hotel Vancouver, owned by Canadian National and operated by the Hilton hotel chain, closed its doors indefinitely Friday as the strike entered its third week.

Denis Buchanan, general manager of the hotel, told a news conference at the hotel Friday that the move was being taken because of violence on the picket line and the lack of police protection.

About 700 members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 275, began their strike June 9 after hotel management refused to provide a wage increase in the new contract. The hotel had offered a dental plan and improved working conditions but said the slump in the hotel business prevented an increase in wages.

Buchanan said a security guard at the hotel was pushed through a glass door early Friday and was injured. He said police were asked to provide protection but did not respond.

He told the news conference the hotel was closing to prevent further violence on the picket line and "possible death."

On Thursday, hundreds of trade unionists participated in a mass picket demonstration at the hotel in support of the strikers.

Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor which organized the mass picket, said it was a demonstration that labor in B.C. was supporting the strike and would not tolerate strike-breaking by the hotel.

Shortly after the strike began the hotel began hiring outside help to keep the business in operatons.

Pickets appeared early Friday at a southside Canada Manpower office to protest the forwarding of job applicants to Hotel Vancouver. About 60 Manpower employees were unable to enter the building until the pickets left later in the morning.

Vietnam resisters

Senate denies Carter funds for pardoning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rejecting appeals to "heal the wounds" of war, the Senate Friday refused to give President Carter money to implement the blanket pardon he bestowed on Vietnam draft resisters.

Senator Mark Hatfield, a Democrat, attempted to strike the pardon restriction, which the House had added earlier to a $7.7 billion measure financing several government departments.

But the Senate refused, on a 44-38 vote, to eliminate the restrictions, and it later approved the $7.7 billion money bill 70 to 9.

The entire package goes to a House-Senate conference committee where minor differences in the two measures will be ironed out.

Hatfield said the restriction "would effectively gut President Carter's pardon program for Vietnam-era draft resisters."

But a spokesman for the justice department said it would probably affect only those who have taken up foreign citizenship and wish to return home because the U.S. government would not be able to pay for processing their cases.

The spokesman said 283 of the estimated 2,200 draft resisters who fled to other countries have returned to the U.S. so far, and it was not known how many men have taken up foreign citizenship or how many wished to return home.

Carter cannot veto the restriction without also knocking out the money for all the agencies in the $7.7 billion appropriation bill, but the administration could appeal the pardon provision in the courts.

'No strike' guess in forest dispute

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Forest industry negotiators go back to the bargaining table in Vancouver today faced with a threatened shutdown throughout the B.C. coast and southern interior, but the guessing Friday night was that there would be no strike.

"I have a feeling the industry will start to move Saturday," Roger Lewis, president of the 1,700-member Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America said in a telephone interview from Vancouver.

The union took a strike vote from 35,000 members and served 72-hour strike notice Friday because of what it said was a failure by Forest Industrial Relations to make a serious offer in three months of bargaining.

Members from 12 coastal and southern interior locals supported strike action by an 85 per cent margin.

Officially, a strike could begin by early next week. But because of labor's problems with the Anti-Inflation Board, such a development was viewed as highly unlikely.

Sources say it would be futile to lose time and money through a strike only to have the AIB roll back any substantial gain. The anti-inflation program has had a deterrent effect on strikes.

Even so, IWA regional president Jack Munro ins't prepared to have the strike notice treated as a bluff. He said that unless F.I.R. (bargaining arm for the industry) budges on the union's demands, a strike was inevitable.

The union is seeking a $1 an hour increase. Another major stumbling block is the length of the contract. The indusrty wants a two-year agreement and the IWA is demanding that it be limited to one year.

Sources say AIB restrictions have made the union unreceptive to a two-year package. It would mean that members would be faced with a four per cent increase ceiling in the second year and wouldn't be in a position to bargain for something better if the anti-inflation program is abandoned in the meantime.

The AIB ceiling for the first year is six per cent.

There are a number of other areas of disagreement between the IWA and F.I.R., including a pension plan.

The Victoria local president said he felt the industry would make some concrete move at the bargaining table today because of the fact it made an offer to the pulp unions in negotiations Friday.

UIC payout up 11% over 1976

OTTAWA (CP) — Net unemployment insurance benefits paid in the first four months of 1977 totalled $1.553 billion, up 11 per cent over the amount paid in the same period of 1976, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

Higher average weekly benefits, up nine per cent over last year to $101.01, accounted for most of the increase.

During April, the net payout was $354 million, down 17 per cent from March but 13 per cent more than in April, 1976.

The number of persons receiving benefits in the survey week ending April 16 was 859,000, four per cent less than in March but six per cent more than a year ago. Unemployment rates in the early part of the year have hovered near eight per cent, substantially higher than a year ago.

About 10 per cent of beneficiaries received special sickness or maternity benefits.

It's Hubbub Canada

Bavarians will be dancing in Quebec, and Ukrainians kicking heels everywhere

By GERARD McNEIL
Canadian Press

Why are they having a Bavarian dance in Cap-Chat, Que., next Friday? For the same reason they're having a hubbub along the Codiac in New Brunswick. It's July 1 and Canada is 110 years old.

A year ago July 1—or Canada, or Dominion Day—was celebrated as usual: Mostly everyone went to the beaches, lakes or mountains for a long weekend. But the Nov. 15 election result in Quebec inspired a 1967-style attempt to unify the country.

Just about every Ukrainian in Canada will be dancing someplace. And where there aren't Ukrainians, there'll be highland dancers or drum and bugle bands.

It's a week-long celebration that began Friday with relay runners carrying torches across the country to Ottawa for a special flame-lighting on the big day. At the same time a Canada Week Caravan left Winnipeg for Bozeman, Montana, and a hands-across-the-border ceremony. The hands on our side will be Scots, Irish, Polish, Ukrainian, Italian, French and Canadian Indian.

The big cities all have gala events scheduled. Toronto, for instance, will have things like chime rings and rose presentations and a mass square dance.

Ottawa has commandeered the television networks to give the country a dazzling $3.5-million display of how great it is to be a Canadian.

They're going to run a 145-foot flag up the Peace Tower to see if anyone salutes.

A parade led by the RCMP musical ride will feature a giant styrofoam birthday cake. A star-studded show, including the National Ballet's lovely Karen Kain, will be held on Parliament Hill, where more than 100,000 onlookers are expected for the show and an hour of fireworks.

Actor Bruno Gerussi of Beachcombers fame will present birthday cakes to kids who were born July 1, 1967, when Canada was 100 years old. Andre Sarazin of Ottawa, one of four birthday boys found so far, says he is happy the country is celebrating his birthday.

And how is it celebrating?

Over in Prince Edward Island, Acadians will hold a "French picnic" at Port Lajoie. Celebrants are expected to speak French, but things being what they are there, organizers will distribute as gifts French-English dictionaries to help conversation.

At Privateer's Wharf in Halifax, the crew of the Bluenose II will renact something that didn't happen by trading tobacco and clay pipes for Micmac Indian gifts.

Just about everything happening in Quebec next week has been identified with the celebration: Horse races, parachute jumps, Etienne Bouchard and his group, hoisting the flag, horseshoes, bingos, dancing for adults,

We're going nowhere with S.A.L.T.—Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a pessimistic statement Friday on nuclear arms talks with the Soviet Union, President Carter said he had made basic changes in Gerald Ford's policies but "we have not made any additional steps forward toward a S.A.L.T. agreement."

Carter, in a White House interview, also said he could not guarantee success in the talks.

"I think we have made some basic changes in the previous policies that might bear fruit, but we have not made any additional steps forward" toward a strategic arms limitation agreement, Carter said.

"We hope we can. I think we are taking a much more bold approach to that question . . ."

Carter noted his administration was seeking limitations on future construction of arms as well as a freeze on deployment and development of nuclear weapons.

"We are asking the Soviets to join us in a comprehensive test ban that would prevent any nuclear explosives being tested," he said.

"This has never been done before. Demilitorization of the Indian Ocean has never been attempted before."

Carter said he was not criticizing his predecessor's administration and he held out no promises of success for his own program.

Carter also said there had been "a surprisingly adverse reaction in the Soviet Union to our stand on human rights." He said his administration did not single out the Kremlin and "I think I have been quite reticent in trying to publicly condemn the Soviets."

Fewer deaths

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A new neutron bomb designed for use in Europe would be less dangerous to civilian populations than regular nuclear bombs, the White House said Friday.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said the neutron bomb would cause fewer casualties among civilians and friendly troops than conventional nuclear bombs.

He said the neutron bomb, on which President Carter will make a final decision later this year, was designed to inflict casualties on enemy soldiers in a specific area and has 10 times less fire, blast and fallout than conventional atomic devices.

No-tax Jim makes offer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter owed no income tax for 1976 but offered Friday to pay $6,000 anyway as a matter of principle, according to documents released by the White House.

The president and Mrs. Carter had a net taxable income of $39,366, but it was offset by $20,864 in expenses connected with the family peanut warehouse.

Garage fit for a king

HONG KONG (UPI) — According to Peking Radio, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's garage looks like the royal stables of French King Louis XVI. And if he's not careful, he may end up like him.

In its second attack in two months on the "bourgeoise" life style of the Soviet leader, the Chinese said Brezhnev's expensive tastes were affecting others around the Kremlin.

"The Moscow bureaucratic monopoly bourgeois consider that honor and glory lie in the ownership of a private car, and they go positively crazy over Western models," Peking Radio said in a Russian-language broadcast beamed to the Soviet Union.

The broadcast, a commentary, entitled Man and the Automobile was made last week and a monitored translation was obtained Friday.

"Brezhnev," the broadcast said, "is an inveterate collector of Western automobiles and one can find nearly every known brand of high-class English, West German and U.S. cars in his personal garage," the broadcast said.

Brezhnev was given two cars by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing during his state visit to France earlier this week. However, he did not like the color of one of them and asked that it be repainted.

Noting that Louis XVI had 1,800 horses and 218 carriages in his royal stables, Peking Radio said, "If Brezhnev hasn't pursued his hobby quite as expansively as Louis XVI did, he nonetheless (has kept up with) the representatives of the monopoly bourgeoise in the West."

Just as Louis XVI, Brezhnev keeps his stable of cars "for his hunting, various junkets, entertaining excursions and other amusements," it said.

"In those days splendid carriages and thoroughbred horses not only served as a means of transportation but were also considered symbols of wealth and power.

". . . The situation in which men are judged not by their abilities but by their wealth has not only been completely preserved in today's capitalist society, but is growing stronger in the Soviet Union."

Nevertheless, the day of reckoning is coming for Brezhnev just as it did for Louis XVI, Peking Radio says.

"The turmoil of the great French revolution forced Louis XVI to flee in his carriage in the dead of night and to go into hiding. He was nonetheless captured by the revolutionary people and was guillotined.

"The bureaucratic monopoly bourgeoise in the Soviet Union who amuse themselves by speeding on the roads of capitalism and social-imperialism are only driving along the old road of all parasites and adventurers of history," it said.

Transport and General Workers local, said Friday that security officers at the hotel sprayed mace on the pickets, sending two of them to hospital because of eye irritation.

A spokesman at Vancouver General hospital said only one of the pickets was treated and it was not because of mace. The spokesman said it is not hospital policy to give the reason for treatment.

Buchanan denied that mace had been used.

Union spokesman Dick Henham said the pickets were becoming angry because the hotel has been employing students and other workers to fill the jobs held by those on strike. He said the hotel should file charges with the police over incidents of violence.

Gordon Hubley, acting director general for manpower's B.C. region, said if the manpower offices are picketed again Monday the 60 staff members will be sent home.

George Johnston, president of the labor federation, said the Manpower picket line was a "tangible reply" to an earlier statement by Bud Cullen, federal minister of manpower and immigration, that Manpower must remain neutral in labor disputes.

Gammie said about 60 non-union workers have been sent to the hotel by Manpower. He said the law stipulates Manpower must fill job vacancies but said workers shouldn't be sent to operations that are on strike.

Workers at the hotel had been asking for a six-per-cent wage increase.

Bill Apps, the union's regional representative, had said the pickets would starve the hotel into surrender by cutting off its supplies.

The labor federation had applied a hot edict to the hotel stopping all unionized shops from supplying any goods or services.

Apps said the International Federation of Transport Workers had put the Hilton organization on its "we-do-not-patronize" list for hiring non-union workers.

dancing for Bavarians. The list is endless.

In Newfoundland, meanwhile, the citizenry will remember the gallant Royal Newfoundland Regiment that was nearly wiped out July 1, 1916, at the battle of Beaumont-Hamel in France. Of 801 Newfoundlanders who went into that battle, 233 were killed and 386 were wounded.

But Newfoundland will celebrate after it mourns.

While ballerina Karen Kain will dance in Ottawa's big show, the rest of Ontario will have plenty of dancers as well.

The Translyvanian Dancers from Kitchener will do their thing in Sault Ste. Marie. Highland, Chippawa, Filipino and German dancers will entertain in Sarnia.

A fish fry at Phantom Lake, with an 80-voice choir, will be held in Fiin Flon, Man. At Miami, Man., a mule derby will take place.

The Lions will have a "funanza" (something like the Codiac Hubbub) in Avonlea, Sask. And a merchant in Grenfell has organized an essay, poetry and song contest. The Legion will supply prizes.

Many Saskatchewan communities are having a sports day but Meadow Lake will have a stampede, in which men will be flung from wild horses.

The restaurant association of Saskatoon will try to get people to eat Canadian food.

In Alberta, former language commissioner Keith Spicer will tour Calgary and surrounding communities. Alberta will celebrate with rodeos and multicultural festivals.

British Columbia will resound with tributes to Queen Elizabeth II. Its citizens will also sign a "togetherness petition" to present to Quebec.

And if it rains, fling a canvas over the beer garden and watch it on TV.

Panther plans stop in Canada, but door's closed say officials

HAVANA (Reuter) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton, who disappeared from the U.S. in 1974 after being charged with murder, said Friday he planned to return home to stand trial.

Newton told an interviewer he had been living in Cuba for the last three years. He was going back to the U.S. because he believed he had gathered information to disprove charges against him. He also said he felt a new political climate in the U.S. meant he had a better chance of receiving a fair trial.

He said he planned to leave Havana tonight on a flight to Canada.

Newton, 35, a co-founder of the Black Panthers in the 1960s, had hoped originally to spend 10 days in Canada to consult lawyers.

However, he said he learned Friday that Canada would not grant him a visa to do this and he expected to be arrested as soon as he landed there. The Canadian embassy here refused comment on this statement.

"I charge that this Canadian decision follows a covert action by some people who don't want me to go back to the United States because of the revelations I can make there," Newton said.

Newton
. . . I'll stand trial

He said he had evidence showing that the charges were part of a conspiracy against Black Panther leaders by the Central Intelligence Agency.

Newton said the U.S. justice department already had given him permission to stay in another country on his way back to the United States. He added that he had a valid travel document.

"I find the Canadian decision inexplicable," he said. "I have offered and still offer to stand by any conditions Canada imposes on me."

Newton said he hoped that by flying to Canada today Canadian authorities might relent and allow him to remain quietly in the country for a few days before going on to the U.S.

Newton, whose presence in Cuba had not been confirmed until Friday, said he had been here as a "very welcome guest of the Cuban government."

He made his way here in 1974 after jumping bail on a number of charges, including murder and assault with a deadly weapon, laid against him in Oakland, Calif.

"I've had hospitality from the Cuban people wherever I've been," he said. "I've stayed in every province in Cuba and the lack of racism here is one of the very imporessive things about the country.

"I've spent much of the time in preparing for my defence and getting the information I need. I've always intended to go back."

Newton, who spoke to the interviewer at the hotel in central Havana where he is staying, said recent legal actions in the U.S. and government investigations there were helping to establish that a CIA conspiracy exists against Black Panther leaders.

After founding the Black Panther movement, Newton was for many years its "minister of defence" before formally becoming its leader.

He said he hoped to fight for black rights through political action in the U.S.

"We've got growing political support after some years of stagnation," he said.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for the immigration department said Newton was "prohibited" in Canada.

"If he attempts to come he will be detained with no consideration to be given to his being released under bond."

Lebanon villagers fleeing fiery fields

HASBAYA, Lebanon (UPI) — Villagers fled from the burning wheat fields and shell-devastated towns near the southeastern border Friday, the seventh day of clashes between Israeli-supported Christian rightists and Palestinian guerrillas.

One person was reported killed and seven injured in Palestinian and leftist-held villages of the southeast as the rightists waged running artillery and machine gun duels with guerrillas and leftists.

However, no report was immediately available from the embattled Christian villages, cut off in a small frontier enclave accessible only from Israel.

"The fields are burning because of incendiary shells," a resident of Hasbaya said.

The resident of Hasbaya, the capital of the Arqoub area called "Fatahland," had visited nearby Ebel es Saqi — now a border ghost town except for the guerrillas and leftist fighters there who fight on a daily basis with the Christian forces in Marjayoun and Kleia.

'78 FORD COURIER
A tough new way to go truckin'

XLT with Free Wheeling Package.
Certain items illustrated are optional at extra cost and some are dealer installed.

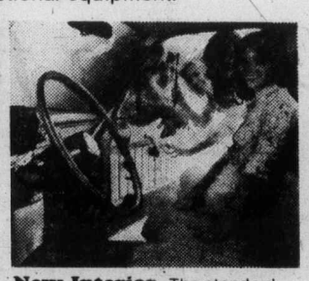
46/32 mpg!
Based on Transport Canada approved test methods no other pickup in Canada currently has better gas mileage ratings than Courier. With the 1.8 litre engine and standard 4-spd. trans., the Courier was rated at 46 mpg highway and 32 mpg city. Your mileage may vary depending on how and where you drive, truck's condition, and optional equipment.

More XLT Refinements and instrumentation include: woodgrain vinyl applique on steering wheel and instrument panel • bright instrument cluster surround • temperature gauge and ammeter.

5-Speed Overdrive. Economical 5-speed option has a smooth throw for fast, easy shifting.

Biggest Engine. Courier's optional 2.3 litre engine is the largest available in any compact pickup. Efficient OHC design.



New Interior. The standard Courier is remarkably well-appointed and comfortable with surprising stretch-out space. Smooth, long wheelbase riding comfort.

New 7-ft. Box. Now Ford Courier gives you a choice of the standard 6-or optional 7-ft. box. Both with longer wheelbases than last year.

Trailer Towing Tough. The new Courier is now rated to haul popular Class I trailers (up to 21 sq. ft. frontal area) with optional 2.3 litre engine and standard GVWR.

Your Good Health

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why does there seem to be such a difference of opinion among doctors as to the treatment of shingles? Is there nothing that will help the situation and the pain, etc., after the blisters and scabs have healed? — O.K.O.

There's no difference of opinion. Most physicians are of the opinion (unpleasant as it may be) that there is precious little to be done about this pesky problem.

Doctors are continually seeking and trying out new ways to ease the pain you mention, which is about as far as they go. A method for ending the problem will pop up now and then, but it is usually of limited effect and then only for a selected group of patients.

There is no point in going into all of the various methods that have been tried. I've known of patients who have gone from doctor to doctor for years in hopes of finding one who might have the answer. There are certain combinations of drugs that can be tried. These have helped some. Surgery involving the virus-infected nerve itself has been tried. Judging by reports it has helped, but only when done rather early in the attack.

Medical research could provide an immense blessing if it could someday come up with a vaccine to disarm this troublesome virus.

All-out tourism effort

Welcome sign in Nanaimo

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — This city is welcoming tourists with special information services, concerts and crumpets, in the hopes that this summer's tourist season will be as good as 1975.

Manager of the Tourist Bureau, Alice Hutchins, says figures from May visits at the bureau show that visitors are up over last year's dismal tourist season, and almost as good as the year before last.

A summer service the bureau has provided for about five years now is the dial-in information service on activities in Nanaimo.

The number, 753-8811, has already been heavily used in its first days of service, says Mrs. Hutchins.

It includes information about the sights in and around Nanaimo, as well as special activities.

Local businesses are making a special effort to greet the visitors from the Fairsea, the cruise ship which visits Nanaimo every second Wednesday during the summer.

Mrs. Hutchins says that when informed that the Fairsea visitors wanted tea and crumpets, a Nanaimo hotel arranged to offer them on their menu.

Also arranged for the Fairsea visitors: A special taxi tour of the city, at special rates; a welcoming concert and entertainment at the tourist bureau, and cruises in local waters.

But the city is welcoming more than just the Fairsea visitors. Starting this week, "surprise tourists" will be named and treated to meals and events in town.

The tourist bureau is expanding operations this year, to include a new location. A trailer will be set up at Northbrook Mall, to provide information services to tourists who come off the ferries at Departure Bay and head north.

Also being planned is a city-wide participation in the provincial government's tourist promotion, We Have a Special Smile for You.

Second look suggested

Saanich Ald. Ian Cass wants Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis to take a second look at controversial legislation which would eliminate land-use contracts and replace them with a system of development permits.

Adjustments to amendments of Bill 42 (the Municipal Amendment Act) were introduced by Curtis in the Legislature Thursday.

The adjustments, Curtis said, were the results of suggestions advanced by municipal organizations.

Among the adjustments was one which "will allow municipal councils to initiate development permits in special development areas created by two-third votes of council after public hearings."

Cass said the changes would represent a 180-degree swing away from the direction in which municipal government should be headed.

Cass said the changes represented "a dilution in the role of municipalities to deal adequately and effectively with problems such as land use and planning."

Rather than moving toward correcting obvious deficiencies, the minister was continuing to dilute the effectiveness of municipalities in planning their own destiny, he said.

Rental $3,000 for 15 years

N-shelter ready soon, property owners only

MONTREAL (CP) — Telephones ring throughout an eastend suburb and 400 residents learn by way of a prerecorded message that a nuclear missile is heading for the Montreal area.

The residents don special protective suits which will keep them safe from minimal amounts of nuclear contamination, and drive to the munication, and drive to the municipal fallout shelter.

There they are asked to produce a small metal identity card proving they have paid for space inside.

They remove the suits, enter the shelter and settle in for a 30-day period during which they hope they will be safe from the holocaust raging outside and the ensuing nuclear fallout.

However improbable, a group of Montreal businessmen and investors believe it might happen. They are building what they say is the first public emergency shelter of its kind in Canada, in suburban Pointeaux-Trembles.

Emergency Shelters AFAU Canada Ltd. is investing nearly $1 million in the project and hopes to build similar projects elsewhere.

A company spokesman said Thursday the shelter, with room for 400 "tenants," is capable of withstanding a nuclear explosion 1½ miles away. It can also be used during epidemics, civil disturbances or earthquakes.

Pierre Chapel said digging has begun on the 7,500-squarefoot project and 72 families have already rented space in the shelter.

The cost of reserving space is $3,000 for a 15-year period and only property owners in the east-end community are eligible.

Chapel said the shelter will be ready for use early next year and will contain an infirmary, a movie theatre and smoking room. It will be equipped with its own electrical and air supply.

Chapel said rooms in the emergency shelter will be rented to doctors, dentists and pharmacists or anyone wishing to use its halls until the time it is needed.

The floor of the shelter will be about 20 feet underground and the 24-inch-thick concrete ceiling will be covered with about two feet of earth. It will be stocked with enough food and water for 30 days.

TRIUMF

Story and Pictures
BY PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist Reporter

On the University of British Columbia stands a large building. Inside are huge concrete blocks weighing thousands of tons. They shield a gigantic set of sickle-shaped magnets arranged on either side of a vacuum chamber.

Each magnet (there are 12) weighs 670 tons.

One might expect the product of this facility to be massive. But the products of TRIUMF, a nuclear accelerator, are invisible, virtually weightless, and frequently survive for only a billionth of a second. Some exist only on paper — theoretically they are there, but have never been detected.

TRIUMF (Tri-University Meson Facility) is the world's newest, and in many ways most exciting, nuclear accelerator. It is the world's third meson facility, and produces a thousand times more mesons than any other unit.

MESONS, According to Dr. George Beer, one of 24 UVic scientists who work regularly at TRIUMF, are "nuclear glue," sub-atomic particles that hold the atomic nucleus together. Lighter than an electron, they come in a wide variety of forms and charges.

The raw material of TRIUMF is negatively charged hydrogen atoms, consisting of one positively-charged proton, and two, rather than the usual one, negatively-charged electrons. Produced in a special room high above the magnets, the charged atoms, called ions because of their unusual charge, are guided by a magnetic pathway into the heart of the accelerator.

Held by magnetic forces in vacuum chamber, about 55 feet in diameter and 18 inches high, the hydrogen ions begin to spiral around as the magnets, their magnetic fields pulsing with the rhythm of a radio frequency, alternately push and pull the ions along.

THE IONS GAIN speed moving outward by centrifugal force at the same time, until they are moving at a speed measured in miles per second. Finally they strike a thin piece of foil inserted in their path, which strips off the electrons.

With its charge suddenly altered from negative to positive, the hydrogen atom, now just a bare proton, veers sharply out of the magnetic field, and is guided down a magnetic "beam-line" to a target.

This same thing has been done with other accelerators, but TRIUMF has several advantages. It is the first accelerator designed to use the negatively-charged hydrogen ion, which enables it to extract the proton from the accelerator much more easily than before.

In addition, several different beams of protons, of different velocities (measured in millions of electron volts) can be extracted from the accelerator simultaneously.

TO THE LAYMAN, the world of nuclear physics, with its Greek letters and a confusing terminology which mixes electricity with physics, chemistry, engineering, and even philosophy on occasion, seems highly theoretical.

It is that, certainly. The eccentric collector bent over an exotic insect, or peering into a powerful microscope or a massive telescope, is at least looking at something he can see, while the nuclear physicist can only guess at the existence of particles that "exist" because of their effects on other particles, which may not be visible themselves.

But TRIUMF holds out the promise for significant advances in fields such as cancer treatment and production of "bomb-proof" fuel for nuclear reactors.

WHEN THE PROTON strikes a second target it produces, among other things, a negatively-charged "pi meson," or pion. This particle lasts only about ten-billionths of a second, but that is long enough to guide it out of the accelerator and toward a target.

When the pion decays, it bursts into a small "star" of radiation, and it is this characteristic that makes it so valuable for cancer treatment.

The usual radiation treatment for cancer consists of gamma rays produced by a radioactive form of cobalt. But gamma rays affect everything they hit, including healthy tissue, Dr. Mark Henkelman, a cancer researcher at TRIUMF, said.

This means that with the radiation focused on the tumor, the patient must be rotated to prevent the radiation from building up too intensely at any one point on the skin. The high doses of radiation necessary to kill deep tumors will also injure healthy tissue; doses safe for healthy tissue may not kill the tumor.

BECAUSE THEY are most destructive when they decay, the pions, at the Batho Biomedical Facility at TRIUMF are focused at the tumor site, where they wreak their radioactive damage. Tissue between the tumor and the surface of the skin however, receives much less radiation, meaning that deep tumors can be treated at high radiation levels without healthy tissue being injured.

Another promising product at TRIUMF is isotopes—variants of elements with unusual properties because of their atomic configuration. Iodine 131, for instance is commonly used in X-ray analysis, and the treatment of thyroid gland disorders.

The drawback to iodine 131 is its high radioactivity. By focusing a beam of protons at a sample of iodine, TRIUMF can produce large quantities of a different type of iodine, iodine 123, which gives better results with one-hundredth the radioactivity.

THE SALE of isotopes like iodine 123 ($10 million was spent on iodine 131 in the United States last year) will benefit medical science and help TRIUMF pay its way.

One problem with nuclear reactors is that plutonium in the spent fuel rods can be used to produce nuclear bombs. By producing a special version of thorium in fuel rods, TRIUMF can prevent this—the bomb materials will be impossible to separate from the other waste, except in extremely sophisticated laboratories.

These are only some of the uses for TRIUMF. Scientists from around the world are now working with the accelerator, which operates 24 hours a day for most of the week. Much of their research is aimed at learning how the atom, the basic building block of the universe, functions.

AT THE MOMENT, TRIUMF is only working at one-tenth of its design power. The reason is the enormous radioactivity that the machine produces. To go to higher power, more concrete is needed to shield the accelerator Dr. Karl Erdman, TRIUMF director, said.

Concrete is one of the most costly components of the $36 million facility. Some $6 million has been spent on concrete so far. Erdman said that by next summer enough concrete blocks should be in place to permit use of the accelerator at full power.

Even when working at a fraction of its power, TRIUMF throws enough stray radiation through 15 feet of concrete to make the huge vault which contains the machine strictly off limits to any person while it is operating.

Instead, a battery of computers control every operation in the machine. The main control room contains no fewer than five large computers, and altogether the facility contains 16 different computers.

THIS EMPHASIS on space-age electronics at TRIUMF, combined with research on the frontiers of knowledge, means that very few of the electronic devices used there can be taken "off the shelf."

Many of them are designed and built in TRIUMF's own laboratories. Others are produced outside TRIUMF, a practice which is responsible for the establishment of several new electronics firms in the Vancouver area.

Canadian products and manufacturers were used as much as possible on the construction of TRIUMF, Beer said. The facility itself is run by UBC, Simon Fraser, the University of Victoria (which put more than one-third of the university's own research funds into TRIUMF last year) and the University of Alberta.

The beneficiaries, however, are likely to be all people of the world, as TRIUMF opens the door of knowledge that much further.

Accused goes to trial in firebombing case

NANAIMO — Rodney G. Berry, 21, of Nanaimo, was committed to trial Thursday by Judge Stanley Wardill in provincial court here.

Berry is charged with the attempted murder of Elizabeth Nordlund, in the firebombing of the Robert Nordlund home April 20, 1977. He is also charged with mischief by wilfully damaging property and endangering the lives of the occupants of the house.

A trial date was not set.

Region's looking ahead to metrics

By JACK FOSSUM
Colonist Correspondent

COURTENAY — The distance between Campbell River and Courtenay is four and a half miles — metric miles that is — or if you like, 45 kilometres. But next month is will no longer be 30 miles as heretofore.

For Comox-Strathcona Regional District is going metric in July, as are all other local levels of government along with the rest of the country.

Vern Hurley, building inspectr and waterworks supervisor for C-SRD, predicts a transition period lasting into 1980. A new National Building Code is published. It includes both metric and English dimensions, but in the 1980 Building Code, only metric measures will be shown, says Hurley.

C-SRD has been requested by the municipal affairs ministry to complete its conversion to metric by July, 1977. Accordingly, C-SRD has initiated the process of changing zoning bylaws with public hearings and by giving third readings to the necessary amendments.

Maps and mapping are the other major areas affected and the C-SRD has begun changing its mapping to the metric system, while the subdivision maps received from the land registry in Victoria are beginning to come with metric dimensions. The regional plan recently adopted by the regional board was figured in metric form.

Munro warning

DUNCAN — Jack Munro, president of the International Woodworkers of America, warned Thursday "militants will take over the province" unless labor and business start to work together.

Hardliners will take advantage of moderates' apathy, Munro told a service club meeting.

Munro, recognized as a moderate among trade unionists, said resource-rich and technologically-advanced country as Canada should not have so many problems.

Most people don't have the political courage to tell the government it is wrong, added Munro.

Junk food addiction is growing

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO Dental decay is rampant, junk food addiction is growing and increasing numbers of children are overweight.

That's what a nutrition study group of the Nanaimo University Women's Club told the School District 68 board here this week in support of a request to the school district to hire a nutrition education consultant.

The group said that their volunteer efforts to increase awareness of good nutrition had gone as far as they could, and that it was time to organize a long-range approach to nutrition education.

Attending the meeting with the group was Jean Thompson, nutrition education consultant in the North Vancouver schools.

The proposal was not dealt with specifically by the board this week, but will be discussed at future committee meetings.

The study group said that a nutrition education consultant, hired by the board, should be responsible mainly for development of programs and integration of them into the curriculum in grades Kindergarten through Grade 7.

Schools, through the classroom, and through their outside activities, have many ways to demonstrate good nutrition, the group said. Cited as examples were school sports days, where soft drinks and sweet foods are often served.

Several trustees who discussed the brief with group representatives, however, said that they were not convinced that the hiring of a nutrition consultant was the right way to tackle the problem.

Trustee Guiseppe Multari said that educating the child in good nutrition would not be effective unless the person responsible at home — the parent — could also learn good nutrition. He suggested the provincial government should be approached to provide such services.

It was pointed out that a nutritionist will be working at the local health unit in September, and that perhaps the school district could take advantage of that person's services.

Bridging the 'band-aid' gap

After years of band-aid maintenance, Black Creek bridge on the Island Highway between Courtenay and Campbell River is finally being replaced. According to a highways department spokesman, target date for completion is mid-October. In the meantime uninterrupted traffic flow is ensured by temporary two-lane bridge at left in photo.

Little Tracy beaten by queen but steals Wimbledon show

LONDON (AP) — Tracy Austin, at 14, the youngest competitor in 100 years of Wimbledon, stole the show Friday even though she could win only two games against the world's reigning tennis queen, Chris Evert.

More than 15,000 fans packed the stands around centre court and they went wild over Tracy, even though she lost her third-round match to Evert 6-1, 6-1 at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Stan Smith, Ilie Nastase, Dick Stockton and Vitas Gerulaitis won, but the personality of the day was the little girl from the United States with braces on her teeth and the pony tails.

Evert, the defending champion and top seed, had a harder time advancing to the round of 16 than the score indicated. Of the 12 games Tracy lost, seven went to deuce. She extended the champion in game after game.

Tracy's movements, court sense and beautifully hit backhands and volleys won the heart of the fans.

"A future champion," people were saying as they struggled through the crowds after the match.

Evert said she was nervous, but she looked cool enough as she recovered from a loss in the first game and won the next nine in row, even though the crowd roared for her young opponent.

The champion had too much experience and guile for the little girl. Tracy was never able to anticipate Evert's drop shots and was left standing wide-eyed on her baseline.

The crowd obviously enjoyed Tracy far more than 11th-seeded Stan Smith and New Zealand's Onny Parun, the previous act on the centre court. Smith won 6-3, 5-7, 9-8, 7-5 in three hours of serve-and-volley tennis that lulled spectators on the sultry afternoon.

For most of the match, Smith's first serve was as regular as clockwork. When he got his first serve in, he usually won the point. When he missed, he was often in trouble.

Sixth-seeded Ilie Nastase of Romania, meanwhile, was on his best behavior, keeping his court antics to a minimum as he defeated Eliot Teltscher of the U.S. 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Tim Gullikson, the right-hander of the American twins, edged Brian Fairlie of New Zealand 9-8, 6-3, 8-9, 6-3 in his second tough ordeal in two days.

Gullikson appeared tired after Thursday's four-hour, five-set triumph over seventh-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico, but he had enough left to overcome Fairlie.

Dick Stockton, seeded ninth, outplayed Fred McNair 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, Vitas Gerulaitis hit his way past Britain's Jonathan Smith 6-3, 8-6, 6-4 and Sandy Mayer defeated Jorge Andrew of Venezuela 6-4, 9-7, 6-4.

Competing the final 16 are Australians Kim Warwick and Phil Dent, defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden, Nastase, Tom Okker of the Netherlands, Wojtek Fibak of Poland, Mark Cox of Britain and Byron Bertram of South Africa.

South Africans upset two seeded players in the third round of the women's singles. Marise Kruger edged No. 10 Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 6-4, 6-4, and Linky Boshoff defeated France's Francoise Durr, the 11th seed, 6-3, 9-7.

Besides Evert, two other Americans, Rosie Casals and Kathy May, made the last 16.

The biggest upset of Friday's play came in men's doubles, where the top-seeded defending champions, Brian Gottfried and Paul Ramirez, were ousted by Sashi Menon and Jim Delaney 8-6, 7-5, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3 in a match that was carried over from Thursday.

Annual malady sweeping U.K.

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — Each summer, as June gives way to July, a mysterious malady sweeps this sceptered isle.

Influenza sweeps the countryside and medical science is baffled.

Absenteeism soars.

The only clue to this mid-summer madness is that it bears a striking resemblance to that which occurs in Canada in early spring—about the time of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

It has been noted, also, in the United States, when the crack of the bat signals the onset of the world series in the brown days of autumn.

Carriers spreading this strange complaint all seem to be tennis players—Jimmy Connors, Chris Evert, Billie-Jean King and Tracy Austin.

This sickness also has a marked effect upon the economic scene.

Champagne at Wimbledon suddenly becomes more expensive—about $2.30 a glass. Indulge in the strawberries and cream and it will cost you about 20 cents a strawberry.

Of course, you can save all this money by nipping home to watch the spectacle on the television set.

But, if you can't quite sneak the entire day, it's showing in full color at your club. No, you can't catch it in the local pub, because, in England, the publicans lock up and take a siesta for a couple of hours right in the middle of all the action.

Private clubs, however, are not bound by such strictures.

Sorry to hear about grandma.

Ardern trade, three cuts reduce Lions to 45 limit

B.C. Lions released four players Friday and traded a veteran Canadian to cut their roster to the 45 players allowed Canadian Football League clubs before they play their third pre-schedule game.

Barry Ardern, who came to the Lions from Ottawa Rough Riders in 1973 in the trade which sent Jim Evenson to the Eastern Conference, was traded to the Saskatchewan Roughriders. In return for the 31-year-old defence back the Lions get the Riders' first-round selection in the 1978 draft of Canadian players.

Rookie-linebacker Don Ward was the only Canadian released by the Lions Friday. Also cut were linemen Paul Brock, Levi Stanley and Reg Brown.

Brock, 22, is a 250-pound offence tackle who joined the club last season; Stanley, a 253-pound 24-year-old defence tackle from the University of Hawaii, played for the Islanders in the World Football League until it disbanded in 1975, and Brown is one-time University of Washington star who was trying to win a spot as the tight end.

The Roughriders also made a trade with Toronto Argonauts, acquiring John Glassford, a rookie Canadian linebacker for a third-round draft choice in 1979. The Riders also released seven players to get their roster to the 45 allowed.

The Argos got down to 45 with a second trade, a retirement and two releases. Their second trade brought future considerations from Edmonton Eskimos in return for import-lineman Curtis Wester, a former member of the Lions. Veteran lineman John Trainor left training camp and was placed on the retired list.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers included Bob LaRose, veteran Canadian receiver, among the cuts they made in meeting the roster limit. And Calgary Stampeders included import quarterback Dave Buckey and Canadian defence-back Bob Hornes, an ex-B.C. Lion, among their cuts.

Equipment trouble hits Independance

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The 12-metre yacht Independence, one of three yachts racing in the America's Cup preliminary trials, twice had to withdraw from races Friday against Courageous on Rhode Island Sound because of equipment problems.

At the start of what was to have been a 13½-mile race at noon, Independence's halyard hook broke, making it impossible to keep her main sail up.

Independence was towed back to her berth in Newport and a loop of stainless steel wire was substituted for the hook.

But when the two yachts tried to start another race about three hours later, the wire also snapped, putting and end to racing for the day.

Independence skipper Ted Hood said a heavier loop of wire would be substituted for the one which broke and that Independence would race today if possible.

The New York Yacht Club announced, however, that Courageous and Enterprise will be paired in the first race today, the final day of the preliminary trials.

The club said Independence will be given a chance to race one of the other two boats this afternoon, if her repairs have been satisfactorily completed by that time. Otherwise, Enterprise and Courageous will have a second race.

Courageous, the 1974 America's Cup defender, has a 5-1 record in these preliminary trials which began last Saturday on Rhode Island Sound. Enterprise is 4-4, and Independence, which has not raced since last Tuesday, is 1-5.

Western Open

Watson, North lead as winds affect play

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — The wind blew and scores ballooned at Butler National Gold Club Friday and Tom Watson and Andy North, taking advantage of better playing conditions in the morning, moved into a tie for the lead in the Western Open at five-under-par 139 for 36 holes.

Watson had one of the three rounds in the 60s during the day, a 69, and North a 70. Along with 23-year-old Phil Hancock, making his first official tour start, tthey were the only players to better par of 72 on each of the first two rounds.

Hancock fired a 70, which combined with his first round 71 put him in fourth place with 141.

Gary McCord, who shared the first round lead with Bruce Lietzke, each five under par after 18 holes, played it safe to tally 73 and take third place with a 140 total, one stroke behind the leaders.

Mike McCullough had the best round of the day, a 66, six under par and one stroke higher than the course record, but he tallied 76 on his opening round. His super second round score moved him into fifth place with 142, two under par.

Lietzke shot himself out of contention when he went one over par on the ninth hole, posted double bogeys on the next two and then, after a par, added two bogeys. He wound up with an 80 for the day and a 147 total.

Tom Wiskopf had the other sub-70 round, a 69, which moved him into a five-day tie for eighth place at par 144. Bill Kratzert and Curtis Strange shared sixth place with 143.

McCord best described Friday's round on the 7023-yard course.

It was a wild day, a strange day," he said. "The trees protect the fairways from the wind and the grass drops straight down and you look at the green and the flag twirling around and around the stick.

"I did everything. I had a double bogey. I hit in the water. I missed a lot of putts. I made a lot of putts. The consistency wasn't there. The wind was really swirling so you try not to make too many mistakes. I just tried to keep it in play."

McCullough said he played without worrying. "I wasn't concerned with making the cut. I knew I was playing well and I was fortunate to score well. I played just as well the day before and shot 76, but Thursday I was just missing the green and Friday I put the ball on the greens. I took 29 putts each day."

McCullough equalled a course record set in 1975 when he tallied a 31 on the back nine with an eagle and three birdies plus five pars.

Watson indicated he might have scored better.

"I had a lot of birdie opportunities," he said. "I putted well and I was pleased with the way I played."

He used his one-iron on five tees and said, "the course almost demands you play it short off some tees." He used his driver on only eight shots.

U.S. Open champion Hubert Geen fired a par 72 and survived the cut with 148 while Arnold Palmer also qualified for the final two rounds, firing a 73 for 150.

Boxers sue network

NEW YORK (AP) — Five boxers have filed a $25-million suit against the ABC-TV network for suspending the Don King-promoted United States Boxing Championships, an elimination tournament designed to produce titlists in several classes.

Lightweight Edwin Viruet, junior middleweight Alvin Anderson and light-heavyweights Bobby Cassidy, Ray Elson and Richie Kates are seeking $5 million apiece.

The suit claims each fighter had advanced to semi-final status and suffered "economic suffering" by the suspension since it prevented them from getting a chance to become champions.

City bowlers win opener in B.C. event

The Burnside duo edged Kathy Finch and Stella Larochelle of Vancouver South, 16-15, and will play three matches in the six-team round-robin tournament today.

Ethel McFarlane and Jean Fullard of Victoria Lake Hill dropped an 18-14 decision to Dorothy Macey and Selina Silva of Vancouver South in their opening match.

JoAnne's putter hot

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — JoAnne Carner used a career-low 25 putts Friday to fire a four-under-par 68 and grab the first-round lead in the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Hoosier Classic at the Plymouth Country Club.

"I usually feel that if I have 30 putts I'll be able to shoot a 68," said the defending Hoosier Classic champion. "But the way I was putting today all I had to do was get it on the green."

One stroke behind Carner and tied for second were Chako Higuchi, Sandra Burns, Signa Quandt, Sally Little and Laura Baugh. Two shots off the pace with 70s were Debbie Austin, Karolyn Kertzman and Mickey Wright.

Carner, the last golfer to complete the par-73, 6225-yard course, recorded seven birdies for the afternoon.

"I always seem to make more birdies on this course than any other," she said.

No Canadians were in the tournament.

Hotel Vancouver shuts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The strike-bound Hotel Vancouver, owned by Canadian National and operated by the Hilton hotel chain, closed its doors indefinitely Friday as the strike entered its third week.

Denis Buchanan, general manager of the hotel, told a news conference at the hotel Friday that the move was being taken because of violence on the picket line and the lack of police protection.

About 700 members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 275, began their strike June 9 after hotel management refused to provide a wage increase in the new contract. The hotel had offered a dental plan and improved working conditions but said the slump in the hotel business prevented an increase in wages.

Buchanan said a security guard at the hotel was pushed through a glass door early Friday and was injured. He said police were asked to provide protection but did not respond.

He told the news conference the hotel was closing to prevent further violence on the picket line and "possible death."

On Thursday, hundreds of trade unionists participated in a mass picket demonstration at the hotel in support of the strikers.

Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor which organized the mass picket, said it was a demonstration that labor in B.C. was supporting the strike and would not tolerate strike-breaking by the hotel.

Shortly after the strike began the hotel began hiring outside help to keep the business in operatons.

Pickets appeared early Friday at a southside Canada Manpower office to protest the forwarding of job applicants to Hotel Vancouver. About 60 Manpower employees were unable to enter the building until the pickets left later in the morning.

Vietnam resisters

Senate denies Carter funds for pardoning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rejecting appeals to "heal the wounds" of war, the Senate Friday refused to give President Carter money to implement the blanket pardon he bestowed on Vietnam draft resisters.

Senator Mark Hatfield, a Democrat, attempted to strike the pardon restriction, which the House had added earlier to a $7.7 billion measure financing several government departments.

But the Senate refused, on a 44-38 vote, to eliminate the restrictions, and it later approved the $7.7 billion money bill 70 to 9.

The entire package goes to a House-Senate conference committee where minor differences in the two measures will be ironed out.

Hatfield said the restriction "would effectively gut President Carter's pardon program for Vietnam-era draft resisters."

But a spokesman for the justice department said it would probably affect only those who have taken up foreign citizenship and wish to return home because the U.S. government would not be able to pay for processing their cases.

The spokesman said 283 of the estimated 2,200 draft resisters who fled to other countries have returned to the U.S. so far, and it was not known how many men have taken up foreign citizenship or how many wished to return home.

Carter cannot veto the restriction without also knocking out the money for all the agencies in the $7.7 billion appropriation bill, but the administration could appeal the pardon provision in the courts.

'No strike' guess in forest dispute

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Forest industry negotiators go back to the bargaining table in Vancouver today faced with a threatened shutdown throughout the B.C. coast and southern interior, but the guessing Friday night was that there would be no strike.

"I have a feeling the industry will start to move Saturday," Roger Lewis, president of the 1,700-member Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America said in a telephone interview from Vancouver.

The union took a strike vote from 35,000 members and served 72-hour strike notice Friday because of what it said was a failure by Forest Industrial Relations to make a serious offer in three months of bargaining.

Members from 12 coastal and southern interior locals supported strike action by an 85 per cent margin.

Officially, a strike could begin by early next week. But because of labor's problems with the Anti-Inflation Board, such a development was viewed as highly unlikely.

Sources say it would be futile to lose time and money through a strike only to have the AIB roll back any substantial gain. The anti-inflation program has had a deterrent effect on strikes.

Even so, IWA regional president Jack Munro isn't prepared to have the strike notice treated as a bluff. He said that unless F.I.R. (bargaining arm for the industry) budges on the union's demands, a strike was inevitable.

The union is seeking a $1 an hour increase. Another major stumbling block is the length of the contract. The industry wants a two-year agreement and the IWA is demanding that it be limited to one year.

Sources say AIB restrictions have made the union unreceptive to a two-year package. It would mean that members would be faced with a four per cent increase ceiling in the second year and wouldn't be in a position to bargain for something better if the anti-inflation program is abandoned in the meantime.

The AIB ceiling for the first year is six per cent.

There are a number of other areas of disagreement between the IWA and F.I.R., including a pension plan.

The Victoria local president said he felt the industry would make some concrete move at the bargaining table today because of the fact it made an offer to the pulp unions in negotiations Friday.

UIC payout up 11% over 1976

OTTAWA (CP) — Net unemployment insurance benefits paid in the first four months of 1977 totalled $1.553 billion, up 11 per cent over the amount paid in the same period of 1976, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

Higher average weekly benefits, up nine per cent over last year to $101.01, accounted for most of the increase.

During April, the net payout was $354 million, down 17 per cent from March but 13 per cent more than in April, 1976.

The number of persons receiving benefits in the survey week ending April 16 was 859,000, four per cent less than in March but six per cent more than a year ago. Unemployment rates in the early part of the year have hovered near eight per cent, substantially higher than a year ago.

About 10 per cent of beneficiaries received special sickness or maternity benefits.

It's Hubbub Canada

Bavarians will be dancing in Quebec, and Ukrainians kicking heels everywhere

By GERARD McNEIL
Canadian Press

Why are they having a Bavarian dance in Cap-Chat, Que., next Friday? For the same reason they're having a hubbub along the Codiac in New Brunswick. It's July 1 and Canada is 110 years old.

A year ago July 1—or Canada, or Dominion Day—was celebrated as usual: Mostly everyone went to the beaches, lakes or mountains for a long weekend. But the Nov. 15 election result in Quebec inspired a 1967-style attempt to unify the country.

Just about every Ukrainian in Canada will be dancing someplace. And where there aren't Ukrainians, there'll be highland dancers or drum and bugle bands.

It's a week-long celebration that began Friday with relay runners carrying torches across the country to Ottawa for a special flame-lighting on the big day. At the same time a Canada Week Caravan left Winnipeg for Bozeman, Montana, and a hands-across-the-border ceremony. The hands on our side will be Scots, Irish, Polish, Ukrainian, Italian, French and Canadian Indian.

The big cities all have gala events scheduled. Toronto, for instance, will have things like chime rings and rose presentations and a mass square dance.

Ottawa has commandeered the television networks to give the country a dazzling $3.5-million display of how great it is to be a Canadian.

They're going to run a 145-foot flag up the Peace Tower to see if anyone salutes.

A parade led by the RCMP musical ride will feature a giant styrofoam birthday cake. A star-studded show, including the National Ballet's lovely Karen Kain, will be held on Parliament Hill, where more than 100,000 onlookers are expected for the show and an hour of fireworks.

Actor Bruno Gerussi of Beachcombers fame will present birthday cakes to kids who were born July 1, 1967, when Canada was 100 years old. Andre Sarazin of Ottawa, one of four birthday boys found so far, says he is happy the country is celebrating his birthday.

And how is it celebrating?

Over in Prince Edward Island, Acadians will hold a "French picnic" at Port Lajoie. Celeorants are expected to speak French, but things being what they are there, organizers will distribute as gifts French-English dictionaries to help conversation.

At Privateer's Wharf in Halifax, the crew of the Bluenose II will renact something that didn't happen by trading tobacco and clay pipes for Micmac Indian gifts.

Just about everything happening in Quebec next week has been identified with the celebration: Horse races, parachute jumps, Etienne Bouchard and his group, hoisting the flag, horseshoes, bingos, dancing for adults,

We're going nowhere with S.A.L.T.—Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a pessimistic statement Friday on nuclear arms talks with the Soviet Union, President Carter said he had made basic changes in Gerald Ford's policies but "we have not made any additional steps forward toward a S.A.L.T. agreement."

Carter, in a White House interview, also said he could not guarantee success in the talks.

"I think we have made some basic changes in the previous policies that might bear fruit, but we have not made any additional steps forward" toward a strategic arms limitation agreement, Carter said.

"We hope we can. I think we are taking a much more bold approach to that question . . ."

Carter noted his administration was seeking limitations on future construction of arms as well as a freeze on deployment and development of nuclear weapons.

"We are asking the Soviets to join us in a comprehensive test ban that would prevent any nuclear explosives being tested," he said.

"This has never been done before. Demilitarization of the Indian Ocean has never been attempted before."

Carter said he was not criticizing his predecessor's administration and he held out no promises of success for his own program.

Carter also said there had been "a surprisingly adverse reaction in the Soviet Union to our stand on human rights." He said his administration did not single out the Kremlin and "I think I have been quite reticent in trying to publicly condemn the Soviets."

Fewer deaths

Neutron bomb 'safer'

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A new neutron bomb designed for use in Europe would be less dangerous to civilian populations than regular nuclear bombs, the White House said Friday.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said the neutron bomb would cause fewer casualties among civilians and friendly troops than conventional nuclear bombs.

He said the neutron bomb, on which President Carter will make a final decision later this year, was designed to inflict casualties on enemy soldiers in a specific area and has 10 times less fire, blast and fallout than conventional atomic devices.

No-tax Jim makes offer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter owed no income tax for 1976 but offered Friday to pay $6,000 anyway as a matter of principle, according to documents released by the White House.

The president and Mrs. Carter had a net taxable income of $39,366, but it was offset by $20,864 in expenses connected with the family peanut warehouse.

Garage fit for a king

HONG KONG (UPI) — According to Peking Radio, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's garage looks like the royal stables of French King Louis XVI. And if he's not careful, he may end up like him.

In its second attack in two months on the "bourgeoise" life style of the Soviet leader, the Chinese said Brezhnev's expensive tastes were affecting others around the Kremlin.

"The Moscow bureaucratic monopoly bourgeois consider that honor and glory lie in the ownership of a private car, and they go positively crazy over Western models," Peking Radio said in a Russian-language broadcast beamed to the Soviet Union.

The broadcast, a commentary, entitled Man and the Automobile was made last week and a monitored translation was obtained Friday.

"Brezhnev," the broadcast said, "is an inveterate collector of Western automobiles and one can find nearly every known brand of high-class English, West German and U.S. cars in his personal garage," the broadcast said.

Brezhnev was given two cars by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing during his state visit to France earlier this week. However, he did not like the color of one of them and asked that it be repainted.

Noting that Louis XVI had 1,800 horses and 218 carriages in his royal stables, Peking Radio said, "If Brezhnev hasn't pursued his hobby quite as expansively as Louis XVI did, he nonetheless (has kept up with) the representatives of the monopoly bourgeoise in the West."

Just as Louis XVI, Brezhnev keeps his stable of cars "for his hunting, various junkets, entertaining excursions and other amusements," it said.

"In those days splendid carriages and thoroughbred horses not only served as a means of transportation but were also considered symbols of wealth and power.

Brezhnev
. . . 'like Louis XVI'

". . . The situation in which men are judged not by their abilities buf by their wealth has not only been completely preserved in today's capitalist society, but is growing stronger in the Soviet Union."

Nevertheless, the day of reckoning is coming for Brezhnev just as it did for Louis XVI, Peking Radio says.

"The turmoil of the great French revolution forced Louis XVI to flee in his carriage in the dead of night and to go into hiding. He was nonetheless captured by the revolutionary people and was guillotined.

"The bureaucratic monopoly bourgeoise in the Soviet Union who amuse themselves by speeding on the roads of capitalism and social-imperialism are only driving along the old road of all parasites and adventurers of history," it said.

Juvenile detention

Capacity use 'unlikely' for centre

Hard-core juvenile offenders won't be contained for two-year stretches at the Cook Street detention home, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Friday.

In a letter to Victoria Ald. Helen Beirnes, Gardom said the Victoria centre would have facilities for holding up to 10 hard-core young offenders, but would "seldom be used to that capacity."

And even if it were used to capacity, occasionally, it would be for short periods only while the delinquents received their briefing or awaited moving to the Mainland or Lakeview Camp.

Gardom assured Mrs. Beirnes that was his ministry's intention to transfer the youths within "the shortest-possible time after disposition."

Mrs. Beirnes stated earlier that if the government tried to turn the Victoria centre into a young offenders' jail, she would press for eviction of the government from the building which is owned by the four core municipalities.

Mrs. Beirnes wasn't available for comment on Gardom's letter.

Maritime Museum in heritage plans

The list of commercial buildings recommended for heritage preservation in downtown Victoria includes three hotels, a museum, several office buildings and warehouses.

In all, 30 buildings west of Government and south of Johnson Street have been recommended for heritage status.

Among the buildings are the Kings Hotel, the Colonial Hotel and the Oriental Hotel. The Maritime Museum is also on the list, as are five other buildings in Bastion Square.

The owners of all buildings have been notified of the city's intention to designate the buildings for heritage preservation. If they object, they will be given an opportunity to state their case before the Heritage Advisory Committee and later before city council.

Here are the buildings slated for designation:

The Coach and Four, 19 Bastion Square; Burnes House, 18-26 Bastion Square; the Maritime Museum, 28 Bastion Square; the Board of Trade Building, 31 Bastion Square; the Law Chambers 45 Bastion Square, and an office building at 50-56 Bastion Square.

The N.C.I.A. Building, 506 Fort; the recreation and conservation department building, 512 Fort, and the Temple Building at 525 Fort.

The Simon Leiser Building, 524 Yates (Capital Region Board headquarters); the Smith Davidson and Lecky Building, 534 Yates; the Bastion Arcade, 535 Yates; the Carnaby Street Building, 536-38 Yates; the Oriental Hotel, 550-52 Yates; the Goodwill Annex, 560 Yates, and the Kings Hotel at 570 Yates.

The last one is a warehouse at 1315-17 Waddington Alley.

Heritage status won't take effect until designation of the buildings has been approved by the provincial government. The process takes several months.

Once designated, the exterior of the buildings may not be altered without specific permission from the city. A similar program for residential heritage preservation is already in effect.

Two-pronged try launched to revive Victoria economy

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Greater Victoria was moving on two fronts Friday in an effort to breathe life into an ailing economy.

The Victoria Labor Council sought a meeting with Quadra Steel Ltd. president Jack Harrison in the hope that it might persuade him to abandon his plans to close the company's Esquimalt operation.

And the economic development committee held its final meeting before disbanding to make way for a full-time body that will create a new office for an economic development commissioner.

The commissioner will be hired and the office set up with the $63,000 the committee has been promised for this year by the province and four core area municipalities.

Those who got the program under way are banking their hopes on financial help next year from the Capital Region.

Meanwhile, the labor council went ahead with its plans even though there were hints that something else might happen to ease the pain if Quadra Steel pulls out.

Sources said that Yarrows shipyards might open a machine shop in the Quadra Steel building once the other company vacates the premises. This could not be confirmed Friday night.

"Yarrows and Quadra Steel have the same owners and I'm told Yarrows will put a machine shop in the building," a highly-placed source said. "If that happens, it will probably create more jobs than those lost by the departure of Quadra."

Yarrows has been hit by unemployment running as high as 70 per cent, but a refit job on a supply ship is under way and is expected to provide work for about 275 men.

However, it will do little for the plight of the boilermakers' union, by far the largest union at Yarrows. Most of the work will involve painting and scraping.

The boilermakers' Victoria local has a 36 per cent unemployment rate. Business agent Neil Hindle says another 10 per cent have gone to Alberta in search of jobs.

Hindle approached the Quadra Steel president on his own before the labor council moved into the picture.

Although there are only 15 employees at the company's Esquimalt plant, three unions are involved — the boilermakers, Office and Technical Employees Union and the operating engineers.

On behalf of those unions, the labor council has wired Harrison asking him to delay plans for a shutdown until its representatives have a chance to meet with him.

The council has also asked the core area mayors to take similar action and has sought support from Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips.

In its approach to Phillips, the council has written: "We can ill afford to lose another payroll in this city."

Continuing erosion of the Greater Victoria industrial base prompted the action by labor, as well as giving birth to the economic development committee.

Quadra Steel's reason for folding serves as a symptom of the area's economic ills. The company has said it intends to close within three months because other manufacturing companies are leaving the city and reducing the market for steel products.

The economic development committee, which held its final meeting in the office of Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) will be replaced by a new society that will have directors from the Chamber of Commerce, Victoria Information Centre, the arts community, labor, the Victoria Construction Association and municipal government.

Black swan which tried to clamber aboard a canoe at Esquimalt Lagoon Friday is believed to be one missing for couple of weeks from Vancouver's Stanley Park children's zoo. SPCA manager Don Adams, who collected the bird, says the year-old pen is extremely tame and undernourished, leading him to think it's the Stanley Park bird whose wings haven't been clipped. The black swan, a native of Western Australia, is being fed wheat and barley at SPCA pond before being returned to Vancouver.

Inn-area expansion draws planner's fire

A housing project adjacent to the Royal Oak Inn is in direct conflict with the recently-drafted Saanich community plan, according to municipal planner Gil Laurenson.

"I can't support it. It's in direct opposition to the plan as far as density and location is concerned," he told a meeting of the Broadmead Ratepayers' Association.

"There is a public benefit in the proposal," he said, "but I can't support it from a land-use planning position."

The Isherwood family, owners of the hotel, is proposing to build several four-storey frame apartment buildings, a convention centre, restaurant and a extension to the inn on 64 acres.

The apartments would be build on about 21 acres and there would be a four-acre recreation centre at the core of the residential development containing a pool, sauna, tennis courts, bowling greens and a barbecue area.

The conference area would be able to accommodate about 600 people and an 80-room addition to the inn is planned.

Isherwood has an appeal before the B.C. Land Commission for the 64 acres to be taken out of the reserve for residential use.

The entire property is zoned C-5 (tourist commercial use) and has been since 1965.

This zoning was granted on the basis of a recommendation of the original 1959 plan for the Capital Region District, Laurenson said.

Saanich has agreed that at the developer's expense, connection would be granted to the Broadmead trunk sewer to serve the commercial development.

Laurenson said, although the sewer would be capable of serving 700 people, the existing buildings already have a population equivalent of 350 persons.

"So, even if the project was given the green light, only two of the four proposed apartments could be serviced unless the Colquitz trunk was extended north to serve the area."

Laurenson said extension of the Colquitz sewer to serve the Royal Oak development would have to be a major council decision, as no capacity has been allowed for the area in downstream trunks and outfalls.

The developer, he said, was proposing to dedicate 23 acres to the municipality for recreational purposes.

"But, the public benefit derived from the dedication will have to be weighed against locating an inappropriate high density right out on the urban fringe, and the high cost of bringing services to the area," he said.

Munro warning

DUNCAN — Jack Munro, president of the International Woodworkers of America, warned Thursday "militants will take over the province" unless labor and business start to work together.

Hardliners will take advantage of moderates' apathy, Munro told a service club meeting.

Munro, recognized as a moderate among trade unionists, said resource-rich and technologically-advanced country as Canada should not have so many problems.

Most people don't have the political courage to tell the government it is wrong, added Munro.

UVic new-dorm future cloudy

Loan rate hike 'to push costs beyond students' reach'

Rising interest rates have clouded the future of new dormitories at the University of Victoria.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch told the university board of governors on Friday that the interest rates which the central Mortgage and Housing Corp. is offering for new dormitories would push the cost of accommodation beyond what students could afford.

The university was hoping to borrow the necessary money — about $3 million — from CMHC at eight per cent, the rate for low-income groups, Petch said. If not, it would have to borrow money at CMHC's standard rate of nine and three-eighths per cent interest.

New dormitories are a high priority for the university, because about 55 per cent of its students come from outside the Greater Victoria area, but on-campus accommodation is available to only about 10 per cent.

It was only through special representations to the federal government this winter, with backing from the provincial government, that the university managed to get CMHC to give student housing a high priority for mortgage money.

The interest rate is an important consideration, because the university's policy is to set residence fees at a level which will cover capital and maintenance costs.

High construction costs have already forced the university to plan wood-frame dormitories instead of the reinforced concrete dormitories which they now have, Petch said.

"We got the cost down to where, at eight per cent interest, students could manage the residence fees."

But the local office of CMHC, which referred the matter to its regional office, said the university would not only have to pay the standard rate, but that the rate had gone up to nine and seven-eighths per cent.

"That will put the dormitories beyond the reach of our students," Petch told the board.

"We are at the point of diminishing returns on the dormitories already. If we lower the building costs further, maintenance costs will go up to the point where they would offset the savings."

The other possibilities were for the university to subsidize the student housing, which would require permission from the Universities Council of B.C., or to appeal to Ottawa for lower interest rates, Petch said.

He said local CMHC officials had been very helpful to the university in planning the dormitories, but that they were bound by CMHC's lending regulations.

The board authorized Petch to negotiate with the federal government for a lower interest rate.

Strata bypass cut off

Although the amendments ending use of the loophole received only first reading in the Legislature, Curtis stressed that the new rules would be "retroactive until today, however long it takes to get them through to royal assent."

"From the date of the tabling of this bill no strata subdivision of land (support structure strata plans) regardless of the number of lots to be created, can be registered in the Land Registry offices unless approved by the approving officer as defined in the Land Registry Act," Curtis said.

He said, "This is the day it comes into effect to end the use, and I'm tempted to say abuse, of the act as it was."

Curtis said he couldn't guarantee what would happen in the case of support structure strata plans that had already been approved.

Use of the loophole enabling developers to ignore community plans, minimum lot sizes and other local regulations started in the Cariboo, then spread to the Okanagan, the south central coast and eventually Central Saanich.

Stirling performance

Dashing performance on skates won Kathy Stirling, 14, the 1977 Esquimalt Roller Queen contest Friday. Kathy competed against five other contestants for the title and the prizes that go with it.

Bus-pass chop under appeal by university

Cancellation of an innovative bus pass system for University of Victoria students is being appealed by the university.

Administration dean Trevor Matthews told the university's Board of Governors Friday that the university was asking B.C. Hydro to reconsider its recent decision to cancel the bus pass program.

"It has been a joint effort between the administration, the Alma Matter Society, and B.C. Hydro, and we think it was very successful. We are disappointed at the response we have received from B.C. Hydro."

The program enabled a student to buy a pass to ride on the buses for $30 for the fall session. The fee was raised to $36 for the spring session.

During the first term 964 students, nearly 20 per cent of the full-time enrolment at the university, took part in the program. During the second session, 800 bought passes. Matthews said the reduction was probably due to lower enrolment in the second term, and the price increase.

"B.C. Hydro rejected it because they felt there was insufficient support for it, but we felt there was enough support," Matthews said. "I really feel it is vital that we get it back."

The Society administered the program and paid for production of the passes, and the university contributed a subsidy for each pass, "while B.C. Hydro was only required to accept the passes as valid and receive a single lump sum, said Alma Mater Society president Brian Gardiner.

While saying on the one hand that the program did not attract sufficient patronage to carry on, Gardiner commented, B.C. Hydro also said that the program's success would lead to similar requests from other institutions.

"This issue concerns more than just students. If B.C. Hydro continues to discourage innovations in the area of public transit, people are going to remain with or return to driving their cars," Gardiner said in a letter.

Clayton Shold, a student representative on the board of governors, said he would compile statistics on the program and ask the board at its July meeting to support the students in their request to have the program continued next year.

Canada Day Spectacular

CBC-TV will celebrate Canada Day Friday, July 1, with a live three-hour show featuring Anne Murray, Buffy Ste. Marie, John Allan Cameron, Bobby Gimby, Salome Bey, Ginette Reno and Rene Simard. The show, which celebrates Canada's 110th birthday, will air at 5 p.m. on channels 2, 6 and 3.

Viewer Real Winner In Networks Battle

By LES BROWN

NEW YORK — "This is the year of the jugular," says Irwin Segelstein, the executive vice president of programs for NBC-TV. "We'll be scrapping for every time period every single night.

"No network can bear the disgrace of running third now. It's a matter of pride and company morale," asserts Frederick S. Pierce, president of ABC Television.

"It's going to be a confusing season for the networks, but a good one for viewers because there'll be a greater range of program choices," says Robert J. Wussler, president of CBS-TV.

As these statements attest, ABC, CBS and NBC are girding for what they expect will be the greatest battle for ratings among the giant networks since commercial television began. The three are spending record amounts for prime-time programming next fall — nearly $1 billion among them, according to industry estimates — each with the aim of gaining the lion's share of an estimated $2.9 billion that advertisers are pouring into television this year.

Paradoxically, the competition has heightened at a time when all three networks have reached Easy Street. Rates for commercial spots have soared to an average of around $100,000 a minute, and the nearly $3 billion in total advertising revenues for the year will represent a 50 per cent growth over three or four years ago.

All three networks had record revenues and profits last year, including NBC, despite its having finished behind ABC and CBS in the poorest competitive season in its history. Moreover, records are in view for all three this year, no matter how the ratings race turns out.

So bullish is the network television economy that low-rated programs do not lose money; they merely lose the network's potential for making more money in those time periods.

Why, then, when even failure succeeds, has the ratings rivalry grown so fierce this year?

Executives of all three networks say the cause chiefly was ABC's liberation from third place last year. That broke a pattern of network rankings in prime time that had existed for more than two decades — CBS first, NBC second and ABC last — and opened third place to the networks that had never occupied it before.

Running third is an embarrassment that the top managements of NBC and CBS have said they will not abide, and the prospect of last place imperils the present administrations of those networks. With high-paying and powerful jobs at stake, the networks are striving, executives such as Pierce say, not to finish last.

Coinciding with ABC's emergence has been a striking change in the forms of television programming, a reflection of the changing tastes of viewers. Where the networks had relied primarily on the appeal of fixed weekly series in the bast, they now frequently derive top ratings from "blockbuster" programs that pre-empt the regular series.

As a result, each netowrk is assembling an arsenal of miniseries and specials that include the following:

• Serial adaptions of novels. These will include John Hersey's "The Wall" and Thomas Thompson's "Blood and Money" on CBS; John Ehrilichman's "The Company" (to be retitled "Washington: Behind Closed Doors") on ABC and Arthur Hailey's "Wheels," Burt Hirschfield's "Aspen" and James F. Farrell's "Studs Lonigan" on NBC.

• Serials or two-part movies dramatizing histories, biographies or other nonfiction. In this mode ABC is preparing programs on Dwight D. Eisenhower and Lee Harvey Oswald and is producing an adaptation of Gail Sheehy's book, "Passages." CBS will have multipart programs on Hitler and Aristotle Onassis and an adaption of John Dean's "Blind Ambition." NBC is producing a five-hour biography of the Rev Dr Martin Luther King Jr.

• Sports specials are series. These will not only include the World Series and championship boxing matches, but also various events packaged especially for television. For the first time, the Super Bowl game will be played in the evening, a coup scored by CBS with the payment of an extra $500,000 for the rights.

• Dramatic specials, including "First You Cry" with Mary Tyler Moore on CBS and new versions of "Captains Courageous" on ABC and "Four Fathers" on NBC.

• Variety specials featuring stars who appear infrequently on television. NBC's roster will include Bette Midler, Paul Simon and Doug Henning; CBS will offer Elvis Presley, Lily Tomlin and Goldie Hawn, and ABC will headline Ben Vereen, Dorothy Hamill and John Denver, among others.

• Movies. This category would include "The Godfather Saga," a miniseries on NBC created by the director Francis Ford Coppola by merging his two "Godfather" motion pictures and adding a number of scenes that had been cut from those films.

Such is the prosperity of the networks that all are producing, in addition, several extra weekly series to have in reserve when the season begins in September. This is analogous to a baseball team having two or three pitchers warming up in the bullpen from the first inning.

"Right from the start of the season we'll be trying to improve every weak spot we find in the schedule, pulling out shows when we're sure they don't work and replacing them with new ones," said Pierce of ABC. "The other networks will be doing the same."

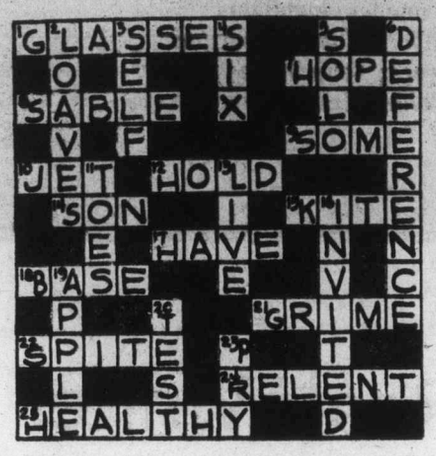
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

1. GLASSES not classes. GLASSES might tend to make the wearer "look studious"; but, in classes, why should students only look studious?
7. HOPE not dope. The idea of certain people having up-and-down moods of HOPEfulness and despair, is quite apt. The withdrawal symptoms suffered by dope addicts are liable to be more physical, or dramatic, than "misery and despair."
8. SABLE not table. The clue tends to assume that "this" has considerable value in the first place, favoring SABLE rather than table.
9. SOME not home. There are always SOME improvements the owner can carry out; but, if he doesn't live in the house, it is not a question of his carrying out "home improvements," so regarded.
10. JET not pet. A JET, e.g., from a fire hose, is fully apt; but a large dog, for instance, is not considered as a "pet" in connection with the idea of knocking a man down.
12. HOLD not fold. He might write something down and HOLD it up, of course ("it" being the something he had written down). Strictly speaking, however, the clue makes no mention of anything foldable, such as a piece of paper. (For instance, he could reasonably be said to HOLD up a number he had written for the audience to see, but he doesn't fold up a number.)
15. KITE not site. A box KITE is rectangular in the sense that a box is rectangular (i.e., in section). The clue's phrase "like a box" is not required for site.
17. HAVE not save. In the context of the clue, "may prove greater than you foresaw" has a note of disappointment, favoring HAVE. Costs you save may be even greater than you hoped, say.
21. GRIME not crime. The clue's concern with grubbiness is more directly connected with GRIME.
22. SPITE not spike. To SPITE an opponent is unsporting, but one may injure a player, with spikes, by accident.
24. RELENT not repent. The clue suggests something a man can agree to do in response to urging. Repentance, however, is a matter of conscience.
25. HEALTHY not wealthy. Advertising links up with HEALTHY activity in business. It isn't so much a question of a wealthy firm lavishing its resources on advertising, simply because it has a lot of money.

CLUES DOWN:

2. LOAVES not leaves. As hinged sections of table-tops, leaves are parts of tables, or if they are the type to make a table longer they are "put in."
5. SOLO not polo. As opposed to playing in the body of a band of musicians, SOLO playing is suitably special. Polo is merely a game like many others (exacting, perhaps, but why especially so?)
6. DEFERENCE not reference. Since he may be asked to show a reference, it is not necessarily open to him to "make a point" of doing so. He can, certainly, make a special effort to show DEFERENCE.
16. INVITED not incited. In the clue, the moderating worlds "certain" and "sometimes" have more point for INVITED. Generally, one should refuse to be "incited" (a word used in a bad sense).
19. APPLE not ample. An APPLE is well known to be liable to cause indigestion in certain cases (e.g., if unripe). Ample eliminates itself. "After eating amply" would be smoother.

John Hearn's Collectibles

I promised last week to tell you why it is so difficult to obtain information on all the bits and pieces of antiques which present themselves for identification. I have a vivid example as a result of moving recently to a place where I am surrounded by trees all full of birds. I, a non-bird-watcher am trying to identify some of them. I do have a bird book. The book tells me that a Canadian Warbler is a greyish bird with a striped yellow breast — but does that mean that any greyish bird with a striped yellow breast is a Canadian Warbler? By no means. There are pages and pages of birds with that color scheme but only one of them is a Canadian Warbler. The others are different in subtle ways which are only apparent to someone who is already an expert — but an expert would not need to consult the book.

So I am asked questions — about Limoges chinaware, for example. There were maybe dozens of Limoges factories turning out hundreds of different patterns employing hundreds of different artists. To catalogue them would be a lifetime's work and even if it were done you would need a great deal of familiarity with Limoges even to be able to use the catalogue. The same applies to all the great potteries and all the great furniture makers. There are fine books on furniture available but if you own an unidentified chair, there is no book which carries photographs of hundreds and hundreds of chairs which you can thumb through until you find yours. And even if there was such a book, many of the chairs would be as much alike as greyish birds with striped yellow breasts and so you would be no further ahead. This is the reason why I am so suspicious of "experts" unless they have devoted a lifetime to a specific field.

Beyond the chinaware, the glass and the furniture there is another gigantic field from which most of my readers' questions originate. We know that an item should be over 100 years old to qualify as an antique but in practice that figure is shrinking to about 50 years. That means that everything made before 1927 is potentially an antique, potentially interesting and potentially collectible — fountain pens, walking sticks, feeding bottles, corsets, wringer washers, can openers, shoe stetchers, cash boxes, business cards, lawn mowers and absolutely everything in print.

As far as I know, no one has yet collected enough old fountain pens to be able to catalogue them as to maker, style, nib shape and date of manufacture. That is the job for the collector enthusiast. If and when this information is ever put together and made available, all the other fountain pen collectors will want a copy. But how many can there be in the whole world? At $50 a copy, no one would ever be able to afford to publish it.

Yet this is what collecting is really about — not an investment, certainly not a way of making money, but a piece of original research as specialized in its way as nuclear chemistry — understandable only to other experts but infinitely rewarding.

Readers' letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o your newspaper, R.R. 1, Lowbanks, Ont. N0A 1K0.

Klugman in Love with Quincy Role

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The highest compliment a critic can pay Jack Klugman is that when he played a sloppy sportswriter on "The Odd Couple," it was impossible to think of him as anything else —certainly not a coroner.

But Klugman has turned "Quincy," NBC's series on a medical examiner, into a forensic medicine detective story at a time when cops and killers are on their way out on television.

One edge the show has is the topics it undertakes — the latest is rape. According to Klugman, what makes the show interesting is its angle. Instead of worrying about what makes a man rape, or how distraught the rape victim might be, the show concentrates on the problems of proving this crime in order to convict the criminal.

"We don't go into the psyche of the rapist or the victim," Klugman said in an interview, "Beyond making the point that a little extra training on the part of authorities — particularly medical authorities — will get that louse behind bars.

"We touch on the indignities the poor victim has to go through and the rationalization of why the rapist becomes a rapist, but basically we are only looking at the legal aspects. That's what forensic medicine is all about. We show how society can catch these people. The purpose is to capture the guilty."

Klugman's enthusiasm for his role certainly contributes to his success.

"I've fallen in love with this whole character," he said, referring to Quincy. "In his job, he can show how the dead person can point a finger at the killer even better than an eyewitness could."

Klugman said that before he began the series, he hadn't seen more than two dead bodies in his whole life. Now he has seen about 40 corpses in the morgue and he added: "I'm ready to watch my first autopsy. It takes some conditioning."

As for the character of Quincy, he said:

"When I was first approached on the part, I liked the gimmick of being both a doctor and a detective, but I didn't realize the potential of it. I didn't know about the progress being made in this kind of medicine and how interesting it was."

Clues are provided . . . even a word list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

CLUES ACROSS:

3. Being — on the hand just as one was dozing off could well give one quite a start.
6. Obviously it shouldn't be unreasonably long.
8. You may well be a bit vague about just what sort of tracks this animal would leave.
9. Realizing he's hooked a big one, an angler will be anxious that the — between him and the fish should not be broken.
12. Can disappoint by being less musical than had been hoped.
13. To see a man — out of a passing car aiming a gun at you would be terrifying.
14. One can think of it in terms of a great burning fire.
15. Playing tennis doubles, for instance, you don't — your partner if you can possibly help it!
16. Not fat.
18. Most young girls have an avid interest in being this.
21. Used in baseball.
22. One big — may be more generous than another, of course.
24. From which to drive, at golf.

CLUES DOWN:

1. In the production of —, there are technical considerations, of course.
2. A sticky situation.
4. Products of poets.
5. A much needed cure is worth a course of treatment, — though it may be.
6. Annual get-togethers.
7. Spinning toy.
10. In desperation, a crook might — a cop trying to nail him.
11. Where a well-known local sneak thief is concerned, a policeman hardly needs to be told what his — is.
17. If you don't — to take foolish risks, nobody can blame you.
19. A snare of some kind.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. My favorite actor is James Garner on "The Rockford Files." Can you give me any information on him and does he receive fan mail? — B.B., Rolling Meadows, Ill.

A. James Garner was born James Scott Bumgarner on April 7, 1928, in Norman, Okla., of Cherokee and German descent. His mother died when he was 5 and his father remarried.

By the time he was 8, he was earning his own spending money mowing lawns and working other odd jobs. At 16, he joined the merchant marine. Working out of New Orleans, Garner resumed school under a marine program and earned his high school diploma while a sailor.

After the Korean War in which he served as an infantryman, Garner went to work for his father laying carpet in Los Angeles. He "discovered" show business and his acting career took seed.

"An old friend of mine, Paul Gregory, was producing a stage version of "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial.' He hired me to read cues to Lloyd Nolan during rehearsals. Then, later, he gave me a small part of one of the six judges in the play," Garner said.

Upon returning to Los Angeles in 1955, Garner won a part in Warner Bros. "Cheyanne" television series and a contract followed. He was then cast as the star of "Maverick," which ran four years. During that time, he also appeared in numerous movies, including "Support Your Local Sheriff" and "The Americanization of Emily." He subsequently was cast for the lead role in "Rockford."

Garner is married to the former Lois Clarke and they have two daughters, Kimberly and Greta Scott.

You may write to Garner in care of Universal Studios, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Q. In a discussion with a friend about Kirk Douglas, she said he is Jewish. I saw him on a television program and understood him to say he is Polish. Which is right? — M. S., Westmont, N. J.

A. You both are right. Douglas is Jewish of Polish descent.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Today's Highlights

Alan Hamel — Variety, on 8 at 2:30 p.m. Among the guests will be Bobby Curtola, Carol Lawrence and critic Cleveland Amory and comedienne Susan Walker.

This Far by Faith — Documentary, on 9 at 8 p.m. The program features the evolution of the black church in America with music, dance and poetry.

Beyond Reason: Game, on 2 and 6 at 9 p.m. Debut: A 13 week occult-game show with Toronto astrologer Allen Spranggett. The panel tries to identify two celebrities using only birth dates, palm prints and personal possessions as clues. Tonight's hidden guests are Gordon Sinclair and illusionist Peter Reveen.

Age of Uncertainty — Documentary, on 9 at 9 p.m. Lenin and the Great Ungluing examines how the Soviet premier (1917-24) adapted Marxism theories to post-war Russia.

Celebrity Roast — Special, on 2 and 6 at 10 p.m. Scheduled to be roasted is former Newfoundland premier and controversial politician Joey Smallwood.

CBC will bring the occult to the screen with its new psychic panel show which starts Monday, June 27 at 9 p.m. on channels 2 and 6. The series, to run 13 weeks, was originated by Allen Spraggett (above) well-known Toronto astrologer, radio and television personality and best-selling author of numerous books on psychic phenomena. Spraggett will be the resident expert on Beyond Reason with Winnipeg CBC-Radio personality Bill Guest as moderator. Each week, a panel of three — an astrologer, palmist and clairvoyant — will be asked to determine the identity or what is "interesting" about two guests. Their only "clues" will be the guest's exact date and place of birth, palmprint and a personal object.

Spotlight on Movies

Lost Treasures of the Aztecs (x), on 8 at 1 p.m. Italian-made adventure about a dangerous treasure hunt. Alan Steel. (1959)

Point Of Terror (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Crime drama about an ambitious rock singer caught up in a web of illicit affairs and murder. Peter Carpenter. (1972)

An Ideal Husband (xx), on 5 at 3 p.m. British-made, based on Oscar Wild's comedy of manners and morals in Victorian England. Stuffy and dull. Paulette Goddard, Michael Wilding and Glynis Johns. (1948)

A Touch of Class (xx), on 5 at 9 p.m. Glenda Jackson won an Oscar for her performance as a divorced fashion designer who agrees to have an affair with a married businessman — as long as there were no complications. George Segal plays the businessman. (1973)

The Maltese Falcon (xxxx), on 7 at 9 p.m. Mystery starring Humphrey Bogart as a private eye after the mysterious black bird and avenging the death of his partner. An outstanding detective drama, also starring Mary Astor and Peter Lorre. (1941)

A Run for Your Money (xxx), on 9 at 9 p.m. British-made comedy starring Alec Guiness and Donald Houston. The story is about two coal miners and their misadventures on a trip to London. Well acted. (1949)

Hamlet (xxxx), on 2 at 11:45 p.m. An excellent version of the Shakespeare play with Laurence Olivier, Jean Simmons and Basil Sydney. Olivier won a Best Actor Oscar for his role. (1948)

Four Queens for an Ace (xx), on 13 at midnight. French-made melodrama about a secret-service agent in Lalaga tracking a criminal whose face has been altered. Roger Hanin. (1966)

Smoke Signal (x), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. Adventure movie about a cavalry unit's efforts to escape warring Indians. Dana Andrews, Piper Laurie and Rex Reason. (1955)

Blood Mania (x), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Slow-moving thriller about blackmail, seduction and murder. (1971)

The Spy With My Face, on 7 and 12 at 12:40 a.m. An expanded episode from the UNCLE TV series. (1966)

The War Lovers (xx), on 7 at 2:30 p.m. Second World War drama based on John Hersey's novel about American pilots in Britain. While it stays in the air, this story of reckless and unlikable hotshot pilots is graphically absorbing. On the ground, however, the trite love story involving a pilot, a co-pilot and an English girl is for the birds. Steve McQueen, Robert Wagner and Anne Field. (1962)

MUSICAL EXCITEMENT not to be missed — on CBC-TV's Special Thursday, June 30, at 8 p.m. with Maynard Ferguson at the Canadian Stage Band Festival '77, featuring the distinctive jazz great, his trumpet and orchestra in concert. Produced by Jack Budgel and directed by Jim Shaw.

Blue Steel, on 11 at 1 p.m. Western starring John Wayne and Eleanor Hunt. (1934.)

The Secret of Monte Cristo (xx), on 5 at 3 p.m. English-made adventure in which Roy Calhoun seeks the key to the Monte Cristo treasure. (1961.)

The Quinns, on 4 at 8 p.m. Drama made for televsion about four generations of close-knit family of Irish New Yorkers, whose careers, romances and growing pains make up the plot. (1977.)

Hawaii (xxx), on 7 at 8 p.m. Epic film based on James Michener's rambling narrative about the early (1820) settlers of Hawaii. Julie Andrews and Richar Harris. (1966.)

That Swinging City (xx), on 12 at 9 p.m. English-made comedy about a day in the life of an amiable pigeon-fancier and the London eccentrics he meets. Terry-Thomas and Michael Bentine. (1966.)

Gold (xx), on 13 at 9 p.m. English-made adventure about an illicit romance and a plot to flood a big South African mine. Roger Moore, Ray Milland and Susannah York. (1974.)

Brother John (xxx), on 4 at 9:30 p.m. Drama starring Sidney Poitier, Will Geer and Bradford Dillman. Highly entertaining tale of the Messiah's return—only no one knows that he has come, and that he's black. (1972.)

Long Ago, Tomorrow, on 13 at 11 p.m. English-made drama — a study of two paralytics who find love. Malcolm McDowell and Nanette Newman. (1971.)

The Ghost of Frankenstein (xx), on 7 at 11:30 p.m. Bela Lugosi plays Ygor, who forces the second son of Dr. Frankenstein to transplant the brain of the monster. Sir Cedrick Hardwicke, Lon Chaney and Evelyn Ankers. (1942.)

Mary, Queen of Scots (xxx), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. The script does not show much concern for historical accuracy, but the fine performance by Venessa Redgrave earned her an Oscar nomination. This is the second filming of the legendary confrontation between two domineering women. Trevor Howard, Glenda Jackson and Nigel Davenport. (1971.)

A Streetcar Named Desire (xxxx), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Superb adult drama, well directed by Elia Kazan, based on Tenneessee William's play about a neurotic woman who stays with her sister and her brute of a husband. There are some explosively potent scenes. Vivien Leigh, Marlon Brando, Kim Hunter and Karl Malden. (1951.)

Singapore, Singapore (xx), on 13 at 12:30 a.m. French-made adventure about a CIA agent who investigates the disappearance of 17 marines in the Far East. Sean Flynn. (1967.)

SATURDAY
AM Network

1:30 p.m. Queen's Plate — Bill Paul and Fred Sgambati describe the 118th running of North America's oldest, continuously run stakes race, from Toronto's Woodbine Race Track. This mile-and-a-quarter classic is for three-year-olds. This is the first event in the Canadian Triple Crown: The Prince of Wales Stakes (Sept. 3) and the Breeders' Stakes (Oct. 1) will also be carried live on CBC Radio.

2:04 p.m. Opera by Request — Featured opera: Prince Igo (Borodin). Requested by Mrs. Lynda M. Steers, Jasper, Alberta.

7:05 p.m. CBC Stage — "Keepers of the Cranes," by Frances Itani, a short story writer now living in New Brunswick. A dramatic work for voice and music set against a background of a mental home in which four members of the staff reflect the moods, textures and process of the relationships with each other and the delicate balance with the patients in their care. (Final program in the current CBC Stage series.)

FM Network

2:05 p.m. Jazz Radio Canada — Part I — Lee Major presents a one-hour musical documentary on what many consider the "best jazz big band in the world."

8:05 p.m. International Concert — Host: Harry Mannis. Tonight: Overture in G minor (Bruckner) (BBC Northern Symphony Orchestra, conducted by John Pritchard); Choral Fantasia, Cantata: Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage, and Incidental Music to The Ruins of Athens (all by Beethoven) (all performed by the Berlin Singakademie, and Symphony Orchestra of East German Radio, conducted by Dietrich Knothe); Symphony No. 1 (Elgar) (BBC Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Sir Adrian Boult).

SUNDAY
AM Network

8:05 p.m. Special Occasion— Host: Alan Maitland. Today: The Last Run of the Orient Express — Train of Kings, King of Trains. From 1889 to May 19, 1977, the Orient Express made regular runs from Paris to Istanbul, Turkey. No train has passed through so many countries, initiated so many stories, screenplays, novels and just plain rumours, or carried so many famous or eccentric characters. This spring freelance journalist Jurgen Hesse, CBC Vancouver producer Don Mowatt and CBC technician Lars Eastholm travelled from Paris to Istanbul on the Orient Express, recording the sounds of the cities and people that have made the train a legend.

9:05 p.m. Concern—"The Missing Movement — Black Activism" — is it the missing movement of the 70s? U.S. journalist Jeff Kamen travels back in time to the period in the 60s when the American civil rights movement was at its peak. What has happened since? Andrew Young and Dick Gregory bring listeners up to date on the movement.

FM Network

11:05 a.m. Music West—Part I — From Vancouver, the Vancouver Symphony Chamber Ensemble perform Sonata in F minor for Bassoon and Harpsichord (Telemann); Sonata for Trumpet and Continuo in G minor (Handel); Suite in G minor for Oboe and Continuo (Telemann). Part II — From Winnipeg, Jan Kocman, flute, Eugene Kowalski, violin, and David Banton, cello, perform Movements from Serenade in D Major for Flute, Violin and Viola, Op. 23 (Beethoven).

7:05 p.m. Opera Theatre— Host: Jan Tennant. Tonight: Der Ferne Klang (The Faraway Sound) (Franz Schreker) (Maria de Francesca, Eberhard Buchner, et al; ORF Chorus and Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Ernst Marzendorfer).

MONDAY
AM Network

2:04 p.m. Crime Drama — "The Toff and the Runaway Bride". A six-part serial dramatized by Roy Lomax from the novel by John Creasey. Terence Alexander stars as the Mayfair man-about-town and amateur detective, the Hon. Richard Rollison, otherwise known as The Toff. The story begins with a wedding, but when The Toff arrives home, he is confronted with the first of many surprises that lead him on a trial of danger, death and intrigue. Today: Part V — Motive for Murder.

FM Network

9 p.m. CBC Monday Evening: Seabird Island — An opera by Derek Healey, libretto, Norman Newton. First performance of a new Canadian work recorded at Guelph Festival, with singers Donal Bell, Garnett Brooks, Phyllis Mailing, Ingemar Korjus and Roxolana Rosiak. Conducted by Nicholas Goldschmidt.

FM Network

9:04 p.m. Opera Time — Host: Ruby Mercer. Tonight: La Sposo Deluso (highlights); and Der Schauspiel-direktor (highlights) (both by Mozart) (Ileana Cotrubas, Ruth Welting, et al, conducted by Colin Davis). Intermission guest: Mario Bernardi.

THURSDAY
AM Network

11:20 p.m. Nightcap—Host: Jim Coward, The Literary Scene. Tonight: Irwin Shaw, author of Rich Man, Poor Man, speaks about critics, his friend William Saroyan, and his early years as writer. Also, Naim Kattan, head of writing and publications for the Canada Council and author of the novel Farewell Babylon, talks about sexual life in Iraqi Muslim society and his own escape from its suppression. The Sole Survivor — Part IX.

FRIDAY
AM Network

2:03 p.m. Souvenirs — Cape Breton oldtimers including coal miners, fishermen, postmen, sailors, schoolteachers, reminisce about their pasts. Recorded music from the 20s, 30s and 40s adds to the nostalgia. Hosted and produced by Daphne Mackay in Sydney. Today: Stan Michalik and Gus Butts, coal miners from Glace Bay talk about the elements of toughness, courage and humour of life in the mines.

FM Network

8:04 p.m. Ideas — Host: Russ Germaine. Start of five Friday repeats on Mexico. The series examines the nature and development of Mexican culture: Aztec roots in religion, creativity, relationship to the land, mythology, and of life and death; the Spanish conquest and its profound effects on the culture and way of life; the inevitable revolution; the legacy of the past in the Mexican spirit and character. Tonight: The Aztecs: People of the Sun.

9:04 p.m. Thanks for the Use of the Hall — Start of a summer series of musical documentaries focussing each week on one of the great musical gathering-places of the world — the people, events and music that have made each unique. Prepared by Pat Patterson. Tonight: Canada's National Arts Centre.

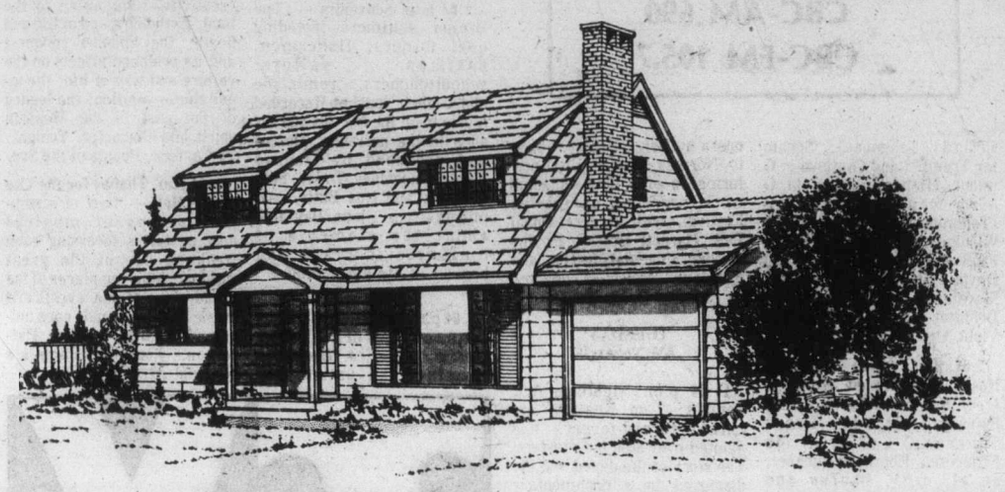
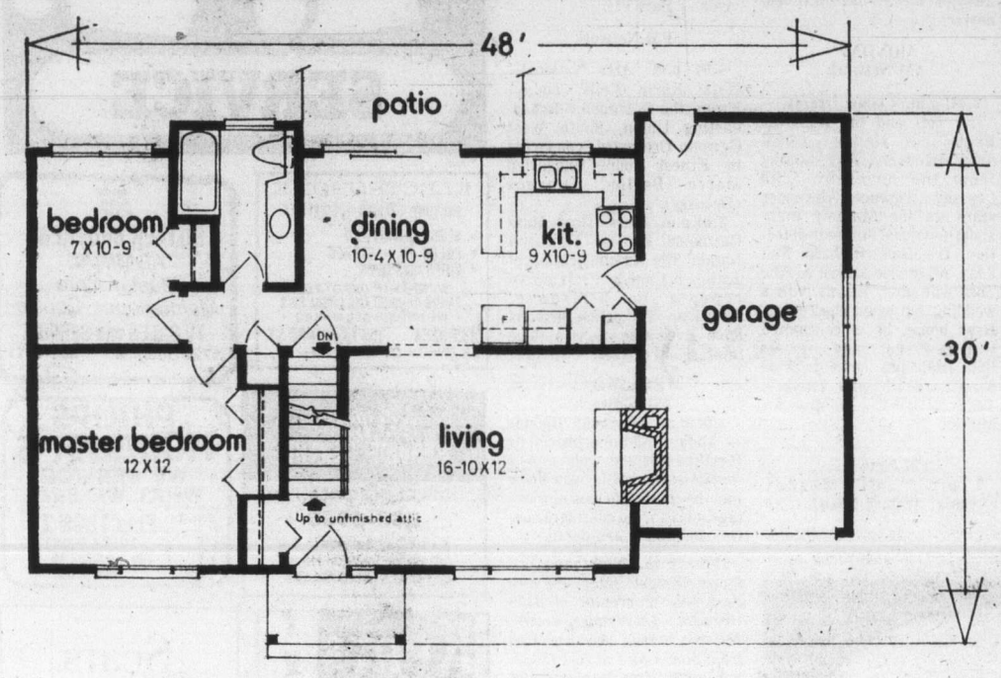
Home of the Week





PLAN Nº 76-864
AREA : 864 sq. ft.
WIDTH : 48 ft.

Cape Cod Home for Young Family

A delightful house designed as a starter home for the young expanding family. By leaving the second floor and basement unfinished, and if further economy is required, not erecting the garage, this house should meet the most demanding budgets. In many areas it will qualify for the Government Assisted Home Owners Plan.

The kitchen and dining room form an old style "country kitchen," where the whole family become involved in household activities. A sliding glass panel opens to the patio and a direct exit to the garage facilitiates easy movement of groceries from car to counter.

With a central location the three piece bathroom serves the bedrooms and is convenient to the living areas for guest duty.

The unfinished attic, with a stairway up from the front foyer, will accommodate two bedrooms and a full bath. As space is required and funds are available, expansion becomes a handyman's dream.

Plans for design No. 76-864 may be obtained at a cost of $50 for the first set and $9 for each additional set, plus $3.50 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Series No. 33 featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus more than 300 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 (1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling.) To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o The Daily Colonist, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y IR2.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Goodbye, Goodbye Mary Hartman . . .

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Goodbye, goodbye Mart Hartman, Mary Hartman. This Friday, July 1, Louise Lasser's earnest, complex, chattering Mary packs it in after 325 episodes.

Until the role of Mary dropped out of the sky, actress Louise Lasser's following consisted mostly of her former husband Woody Allen and a group of friends. Then Norman Lear's syndicated soap opera centering on the weirdos of Fernwood, Ohio, came along and turned the talented actress into a star, fulfilling the fantasy Louise dreamed about as a kid.

The fame, the resultant publicity, the dream come true, Louise has said, became totally unreal. It was too loud, too fast, and it reached a point where Ms. Lasser wanted to get off the bandwagon and give up her gruelling schedule as the series' star.

On her birthday last April, Louise dropped in to see her boss Norman Lear and broached the subject of turning Mary out to pasture. Shortly after the meeting, Lear announced his decision to bring "Mary Hartman 2" to an end as of July 1.

Hartman fans need not despair, however. With the exception of Louise Lasser, every member of the soap has been retained for the new fall sequel, "Fernwood, U.S.A." The summer months will be taken up with "Fernwood Tonight" a sort of regional "Tonight Show" with many of the Fernwood zanies on tap.

Then Dabney Coleman's Mayor Jeeter, Mary Kay Place's Loretta Haggers, Bruce Solomon's Dennis Foley, Greg Mullavey's Tom Hartman, plus Dody Goodman, Debralee Scott, Graham Jarvis, and Claudia Lamb report for duty when the "Fernwood U.S.A." show goes into production this August.

According to major-domo Norman Lear, the new show becomes an extension of the old. Comedy will again be emphasized, name guest stars will be recruited, and stronger plotting can be expected.

So fans won't have to kick the habit of watching Fernwood's kooky citizens perform next fall. Only the star will be missing. If Lear's luck holds true, a newcomer may emerge to take up where Louise Lasser left off.

PLOT PORTENTS

Heather's illness has changed the plotting of "General Hospital" (ABC). Now Gina Dange wants to take Heather's baby, and Heather will remain with the Taylors. Evil Monica has been found out at last, but Steve hasn't made up his mind about canning the lady. Cornered, Monica agrees to get a divorce in the Caribbean.

Brooke continues to be the spoiler in "Days of Our Lives" (NBC), letting Mike know who fathered Trish's baby, setting up the fight between Mike and David. In addition, Brooke is photographing engineering drawings at the Anderson plant. As for the affair between Neil and Mary — the two are bound to be caught soon after recent close calls.

Ron Becker, that cad in "The Young and the Restless" (CBS), deserves hisses for his scheme to get his wife Nancy out of the institution. The loveless marriage between David Mallory and Jill is still on, even though Jill admits she's going through with it for the money. At least Joann Curtzynski, the former "tubbo," is blooming and ready to spread the word about discipline and diets.

With Bert still in the closet, Christina plays the domestic game and is bored on "All That Glitters." Secretaries Marshall and Michael dig into equal rights strategies, and Andrea begins to understand the connection between oil wells and movie-making under the astute tutelage of Farrah Abuban.

LOUISE LASSER, after 325 episodes, bids farewell to Fernwood and her "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" series. Don Stewart will be seen in a new light as he takes time off as Michael Bauer in "The Guiding Light" (CBS) to rehearse for stage appearances in "Bell, Book and Candle."

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — Ask Lauren Chapin how she survived her own near fatal illness, the shock of almost losing her only child, and the transition from child star in Father Knows Best to the relative obscurity of maturity, and she'll reply:

"I'm a born-again Christian!"

Christ, she says, has not only saved her life but has given it clear focus.

That makes her fortunate among former child stars, some of whom have become less than radiant, well-adjusted adults.

Lauren was the cute little Kathy of "Father Knows Best," the long-running television series of the 1950s which starred Robert Young and Jane Wyatt as the Jim Andersons, America's most perfect parents, whose brood included, in addition to Kathy; Bud, played by Billy Gray; and Betty played by Elinor Donahue.

Stars of the hit television show were reunited this spring by Columbia Pictures Television for a 90-minute TV movie to air May 15 over NBC in which the Anderson family was brought up to date.

No more than a tot when she was first cast as Kathy, Lauren was chosen for the part by Robert Young's own daughters who, upon meeting her, decided she was more like a member of their dad's real family than any of the other kid actresses aspring to the role.

"I went out to be interviewed for the Kathy part just like anybody else," Chapin remembers. "Then a few of us were taken to Robert Young's house where we met his family. That's when I was chosen."

While the casting made Lauren famous, it didn't, as she remembers it, make her particularly happy. "Because," she says, "I resented the fact that I couldn't have a normal childhood.

"I couldn't relate to other children nor they to me. We didn't have any interests in common."

In the early 1960s, Father Knows Best went out of production (though it continued to air through syndication), and Lauren, not quite 15, was unemployed.

She was no longer an adorable little tyke nor was she at an age to play romantic leads. In short, her acting talent wasn't in great demand. So, for a creative outlet, she turned to another field: music.

"I've always liked music, and I studied music and dancing while I was still in 'Father Knows Best,' " Lauren tells.

Because she was particularly drawn to country music, she met several of its singers.

"So I began singing and picking along with them," she says, "and I helped some of them write songs."

Among those with whom she sang and picked along with were Roger Miller and Ray Stevens, less famous then than they became later.

Lauren cut two records financed by a friend, but they didn't move, since, as she tells it, "the material was pretty bad."

Nevertheless, everyone, including recording studio personnel, assured her that her voice was appealing, so she kept using it and was singing professionally on the Queen Mary just before she went to work in the movie for TV updating Father Knows Best.

"I was tickled to death to be called for the show," Lauren confesses, the more so because she got the call on the heels of a near tragedy which made any good news doubly welcome.

She has a 4-year-old son, Matthey Edward Chapin, who fractured his skull in a Halloween accident from which he was just recovering when the casting call came.

"He slid down a slide and hit his head behind the ear," Lauren says.

"At first he didn't seem hurt, but I took him to a doctor and within 10 minutes he was in the hands of 10 specialists who put him into intensive care.

"He was deaf for four months. But now he's as healthy as he's beautiful, and he is a beautiful little boy."

Lauren had acquired the religious faith which saw her through this ordeal earlier when she'd been extremely ill, almost fatally so.

"I had viral encephalitis," she says, "and was terribly sick until a girl friend told me, 'The only person who can cure you is God.'

"She called a church in the East and asked the members to pray for me. They did and I got well. Then my friend said, "You've got to go to church meetings with us.'

"I did and that's how I became born again."

THEN AND NOW — Lauren Chapi, youngest member of the Father Knows Best family, as she appeared in the heyday of the popular TV series. Today she is a professional singer.

Elvis Returns to Television

Elvis Presley, once one of the greatest box-office attractions of all time, and the one performer who more than anyone else, shaped contemporary popular music, will return to television this fall in a one-hour concert on the CBS Television Network, it was announced recently by B. Donald Grant, Vice President, Programs.

The program will be taped at two different locations while he is on a nationwide tour this summer. The television concert, which will include behind-the-scenes segments, will convey the excitement and electricity of the performer who, more than 20 years after his first recording, continues to draw capacity audiences in concert appearances on the road.

"We are tremendously pleased to be able to bring Elvis to a nationwide audience exclusively on CBS," said Grant. "Elvis is an American institution. Beginning with his first television appearance on 'The Ed Sullivan Show' back in 1956, Elvis has communicated a magnetism that few performers can even approach. His showmanship and staying power as a singer are phenomenal, resulting in loyal fans spanning all ages. We hope this is only the beginning of a long association."

The Ontario election is over; Leo Bernier, Bill Davis' minister of northern affairs, has been re-elected once more, and the number of seats on the government side of the house has been increased at a cost to Ontario taxpayers of three to four million dollars apiece. I'd give more than a penny for Warner Troyer's thoughts.

Warner Troyer has been one of Canada's more prominent public affairs journalists for years, yet his television image of undiluted ironic suavity might never have existed without the invention of the cigarette. Eyes narrowed, head cocked to the right to expose the planes of the left-hand side of his face, fingers gripping the ubiquitous weed, smoke encircling his head like a privately-owned patch of cirrus — Warner Troyer was unique among the household icons of TV viewers in the fifties.

When he finally discarded the cigarette it took a while to get used to listening to him without the distracting suspicion that he might actually be on fire somewhere. But gradually it dawned on us that behind the smoothie facade had been a genuinely committed and frequently angry young man. His concerns, because they seemed wholly outer-directed at last, grew more persuasive. And now, with the publication of No Safe Place, Warner Troyer's "cool" is completely kaput. Like Walter Stewart, that other professional journalist-turned-public investigator, he's become so angry he's now indelibly "hot."

No Safe Place is an uneasy but stunning amalgam of scientific data, quotations, opinions and facts. It's an in-depth survey of mercury pollution and poisoning in Ontario, an outspoken indictment of governmental ineptitude and neglect, and a blunt warning that what is happening to the Indians of White Dog and Grassy Lake can happen — indeed, already is happening — to the rest of us wherever industrial pollution is permitted to rampage unchecked.

"We need more specialists in journalism," says Troyer in his introduction, "people who study and stay with specialized areas or events." He recalls receiving a "national award for the script of a film made on the subject of this book"; he was proud then, but "horrified, after having the time and using the resources available to me in preparing this book, at the superficiality of my documentary film."

Troyer has come to believe that public safety may ultimately depend on the availability of concerned, "specialized" journalists who happen to have enough time, ambition and funds to investigate on our behalf. The effects of mercury poisoning, ugly though they are, are no more horrifying than the fact that Troyer has been able to assemble such a strong case to prove he is right. On any list of the Ontario government's priorities in the whole sorry White Dog-Grassy Narrows affair, public safety would come in a very poor last.

Troyer's case is strong because it's profusely documented. No Safe Place is no book for the casual reader (Troyer should have titled it Hard to Follow). Yet specific details are sure to stick in any reader's mind. I was much impressed by Troyer's comments on the link between mercury poisoning and alcoholism. One study shows that "a concentration of 20 ppb of mercury . . . inhibits the action of the enzyme which breaks down alcohol in the human system by 100 per cent."

Yet I would have been still more impressed if Troyer had shown any recognition that an important international conference on Heavy Metals in the Environment was held in Toronto in October, 1975. Troyer has invited suggestions from his readers, so here's one that he obtain a copy of the Abstracts from the conference and go through it with a fine-toothed comb. He'll find it interesting.

Most of Troyer's information — but not quite all — is contained in Grassy Narrows, by George Hutchison and Dick Wallace of the London Free Press. What Grassy Narrows lacks in down-to-the-wire data it makes up for in style and design, for this is a highly attractive book despite its dreadful subject. Wallace's photos are frequently stunning, Hutchinson's prose is lucid and humane, and together they place the mercury-mess in historical perspective and give it a truly tragic dimension. The epilogue alone is worth the price of the book.

Readers disturbed by the proliferation of industrial pollution combined with governmental neglect may wish to move on to Medical Nemesis, by the inimitable Ivan Illich. And teachers are especially referred to Quicksilver and Slow Death, a tabloid obtainable at 50 cents from the Ontario Public Interest Research Group, Room 351, Chemistry 1, University of Waterloo, Waterloo, Ontario. The message of all these publications is unanimous: Yes, folks, Minamata can happen here.

FAULKNER . . . some mundane notes

'He Made The Books And He Died'

Faulkner Didn't Want His Letters Published And He Was Right

By JACK SCOTT

Devotees of William Faulkner — and that would include every serious reader, since Faulkner was surely among the half dozen of America's great novelists — will open his "selected" letters both hopefully and fearfully.

Hopefully, because many literary men and women — John Steinbeck, Virginia Woolf, Horace Walpole, Henry James, H. L. Mencken and E. B. White come swiftly to mind — have revealed another side to their characters and, often, their basic motivations through the publication of their personal correspondence, almost always posthumously.

Fearfully, because Professor Joseph Blotner, a teacher of English at the University of Michigan and a long-time admirer and biographer of Faulkner, has already published his life of the southern novelist in not one, but two, massive volumes. It is among the more tedious of biographies simply because Blotner threw in every known fact about Faulkner. He can be forgiven as a conscientious researcher, perhaps, but not for his lamentable lack of selectivity.

On both counts these "selected" letters will confirm the reader's worst fears.

Faulkner was what one friend has called "a desperately private man" and his letters are, to say the least, largely prosaic and routine. They tell us little about the man beyond the well-documented fact that he enjoyed both bourbon and silence. Indeed, in sharp parallel with Ernest Hemingway, whose letters unhappily gave his widow so much embarrassing material, Faulkner's own wish was that they be filed, if necessary, and forgotten.

Blotner, himself, quotes the novelist on two occasions. "I'm old-fashioned and probably a little mad too," he had written to Malcolm Cowley. "I don't like having my private life and affairs available to just any and everyone who has the price of the vehicle it's printed in, or a friend who bought it and will lend it to him." He also wrote, "It is my ambition to be, as a private individual, abolished and voided from history, leaving it markless, no refuse save the printed books; I wish I had had enough sense to see ahead 30 years and, like some of the Elizabethans, not signed them. It is my aim, and every effort bent, that the sum and history of my life, which in the same sentence is my obit and epitaph too, shall be them both: He made the books and he died."

Yet the professor, like Mary Hemingway, apparently had no compunction about making them into a book, the last thing that Faulkner wanted.

It must be noted, too, that, as in his interminably long biography, Blotner has obviously put in every surviving Faulkner letter. To say that this correspondence is "selected" is yet another needless cruelty to Faulkner's memory, since the bulk of these letters are mundane, unliterary business notes to his various publishers and agents, written by a man who was clearly in constant need of money.

It can be said, of course, that this, in itself, is revealing and that Blotner's collection may be a valuable library-shelf reference work for future Faulkner students, but for the average reader they are just plain boring, a reaction never to be found in a Faulkner novel or short story.

One of his contemporaries has noted that Faulkner "never wrote a really personal letter, even to members of his immediate family," and in a collection such as this that is hardly a substitute for the "heroic dignity" or the "great weight of shyness" that marked the non-creative, hopefully anonymous, man.

Faulkner, himself, in an uncharacteristically "literary" letter to a scholar who had invited him to a conference in 1931, probably put it best:

"You have seen a country wagon come into town with a hound dog under the wagon," he wrote. "It stops on the Square and the folks get out, but that hound never gets very far from that wagon. He might be cajoled or scared out for a short distance, but first thing you know he has scuttled back under the wagon: maybe he growls at you a little. Well, that's me."

Since it was not until he sold the motion picture rights for $50,000 for Intruder in the Dust that Faulkner enjoyed some measure of financial security, almost every earlier letter has to do with royalties or advances and this gives a false picture of the artist and his deep integrity. None of the dark, mystical, eloquent qualities he possessed are even remotely reflected in the hurried notes that, he was sure, would never see the light of print.

Those that are even perfunctorily entertaining were, in fact those of a much younger man in his youthful sojourn in Europe and, while pleasant enough, hardly suggest that the same writer would win the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1950.

For all of his life, until his death from a heart attack at 64, he remained determinedly rural and southern, even self-consciously shunning any pretension of being other than "a country man" who enjoyed horses, hunting, fishing, farming, his pipe and an occasional pretty girl.

John W. Aldridge, looking back at his first encounter, says that they found common ground only in discussing mules and Faulkner's own eventual summary of his success — "I own four gallons of corn liquor and four pounds of English tobacco" — was the real measure of an introverted man.

"Selected Letters," then, adds very little to the legend. Much better to read or re-read any Faulkner novel, as he, himself, would doubtless agree.

Economist J. K. Galbraith: One of Great Teachers of Modern Age

Once again we must touch our forelocks to BBC television for supplying us with a first-rate book, this time The Age of Uncertainty, a collection of fine essays by John Kenneth Galbraith, the basis of the television series of the same title which features the great economist and which is giving viewers the opportunity of discovering what thousands of readers already know, that he is one of the great teachers of the age.

The ideas of economists and social philosophers shape actions and events even when we are unaware of their sources, and they have certainly had a decisive influence on the bewildering change and revolution through which the world has passed in the last 200 years.

In The Age of Uncertainty, which should find an even wider audience than his earlier books, Professor Galbraith traces these ideas and their consequences from Adam Smith and Herbert Spencer, through Ricardo, Malthus, Marx and Lenin, to John Maynard Keynes and on to concepts and events that gave shape to the Cold War, the modern corporation, the struggles of the Third World and the problems of modern urban society.

When I tell you that this is an amusing book you may think I've taken leave of my senses. How can such a weighty subject be made amusing? It's not easy but Galbraith manages it, thanks to his accustomed wit, clarity and great professional competence. He has the rare ability of being able to express passionate and ironical thought laconically, and there aren't many ideas he cannot put in a nutshell.

Although surgar-coated, the book is a serious one and it pays to read it slowly and carefully. To do it full justice in a review would require an inordinate amount of space. The best thing I can do, therefore, is to show how Galbraith combines wit with wisdom.

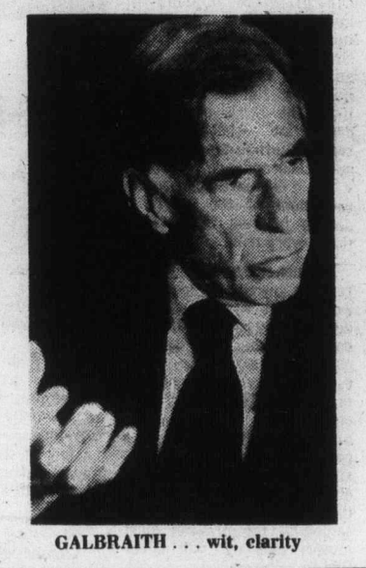
Economists rarely agree with one another but they all agree that the founding father of economics was Adam Smith (1723-1790). Galbraith greatly admires Smith and devotes a lot of space to him. Two quotes from Smith show why he has such appeal.

Here's Smith on Spanish colonialism: "The pious purpose of converting . . . (the inhabitants) to Christianity sanctified the injustice of the project." And again, this time on businessmen: "People of the same trade seldom meet together, even for merriment and diversion, but the conversation ends in a conspiracy against the public, or in some contrivance to raise prices." I didn't know they held conventions in the 18th century!

Galbraith expresses himself in the same pungent manner. Advice to bureaucrats and academics: "Where things are simple one should avoid making them complicated; there are other ways to display subtlety of mind."

Harvard's best-known professor has no illusions about the university world: "I went there (Berlin) in 1938 to study Hitler's land and agricultural policy. I had just learned that, in academic life, the selection of improbable subjects of study involving extensive travel is taken to suggest an imaginative and inquiring mind."

On the money chain: "Income almost always flows along the same axis as power but in the opposite direction." And on changing times: "No one spends his life affirming the superiority of other people if he has any alternative . . . The very first manifestation of the classless society is the disappearance of the servant class."



GALBRAITH . . . wit, clarity

Galbraith is at his best in an informative and entertaining chapter dealing with the manners and morals of the very rich of the last century.

He makes the point that for members of the wealthy class money is more enjoyable if you can be seen to possess it. Hence, palatial homes, hordes of servants, a large yacht, expensivly gowned and bejewelled women, and so on, not forgetting over-indulgence in food, drink and sex.

The modern affluent society (the phrase was coined by Galbraith) has largely taken the fun out of all this. Take sexual promiscuity as an example. As Galbraith points out, this activity, once considered the greatest of the delights of wealth, has become mass recreation and even a branch of physical therapy. So sensuous enjoyments have ceased to be the exclusive pleasure of the rich. And that hurts because "much of the enjoyment had always consisted in having that of which others were deprived."

Galbraith's wit has full rein when he describes how money had to be aged to become respectable. He lists many of the American rascals of the last century (the Vanderbilts, Astors, Whitneys, Goulds, and others, all of whom were regarded as crude individuals) and shows how they became civilized, then distinguished, by trading their daughters and a lot of money for European titles.

But titled sons-in-law were not enough; the nouveau-riche still sought and needed the advertisement of the existence and extent of their wealth. So they went to Monte Carlo to gamble — not to win, but to lose vast sums to show they could afford to lose vast sums. "The casino," says Galbraith, "solved all problems. You could lose whatever you could afford. And this required no taste, no entre to society, no social grace, no friends, nothing but the money."

Galbraith touches on a whole range of subjects — and always pithily. I know of no other writer who could explain the core of Karl Marx's thought, which was based on Hegelian philosophy, and go on to explain modern communist repudiation of Hegel as an embarrassment, and do it clearly in only a single page.

And here's Galbraith's neat summing-up of the root cause of the French Revolution: "People of privilege will always risk their complete destruction rather than surrender any material part of their advantage . . . The sensitivity of the poor to injustice is a trivial thing compared with that of the rich . . . When reform from the top became impossible, revolution from the bottom became inevitable."

As befits a Keynesian, Galbraith lavishes considerable space on John Maynard Keynes and cites many reasons why the Establishment disliked both him and his economic unorthodoxy. Here is a typically Galbraithian reason:

"Good writing in economics is suspect — and with justification. It can persuade people. It also requires clear thought. No one can express well what he does not under stand. So clear writing is perceived as a threat, something deeply damaging to the numerous scholars who shelter mediocrity of mind behind obscurity of prose. Keynes was a superb writer when he chose to try. This added appreciably to the suspicion with which he was regarded."

Galbraith, too, is a superb writer, with a style that has sometimes been compared to Swift's, sometimes to Voltaire's. Like Voltaire he is a man of reason, one who concentrates on all relevant and available information before reaching a conclusion, ruling out religion, rule, prejudice and passion.

But in the last analysis the style is pure Galbraith. Its hallmarks, never clearer than in The Age of Uncertainty, are extreme clarity and intolerance of humbug and underneath the cerebral sparkle a deep vein of compassion and ethical integrity.

Blind Ambition at the Top

By JOHN LEONARD

It has been William Safire's profession, since 1973, to offend the liberal pieties of readers twice a week on the Op-Ed Page of The New York Times. Before that, he was a senior speech writer in the white House of Richard M. Nixon. And before that, he was a successful public relations man. Indeed, in his first book, The Relations Explosion, a very entertaining chapter is devoted to how he set up the notorious Nixon-Khrushchev "kitchen debate." (His client at the time was the model kitchen.) Whether or not you choose, then, to consider Full Disclosure Safire's first work of fiction will depend on how much he has managed to hurt your feelings in the past.

One thing is made perfectly clear: He can rattle the narrative chains. Full Disclousre is the best sort of commercial novel, full of action, sex and facts. What we want — or I do, anyway — from such novels is not merely distraction, but also know-how and lowdown. How does "it" really work, whether "it" is an airport, hotel, assembly line, pro-football, Wall Street or, in this case, White House staff in the middle of a cover-up. At the same time, at all costs, the story must rush on. The facts are not to be marshaled; they are to be stampeded.

Like Irving Wallace, Safire gives us our money's worth. Full Disclosure does for the 25th Amendment to the Constitution what Seven Minutes did for the various Supreme Court decisions on obscenity. It explains, with heavy breathing; it entertains, with serious matters on its mind, and it is long enough to kill a weekend.

We are in the 1980s. Our 41st president is blind, after an assassination attempt at Yalta. (Safire must have his fun: a president being blind at Yalta is one of those puckish touches.) He must go home to face, behind sunglasses, his political opponents and that 25th Amendment on "disability." It seems that, temporarily, he has been blind before, and the fact was covered up. Many cabinet meetings later . . .

Safire, not without guile, asks us to empathize with honorable men and women who lie to one another and to the Republic because of their loyalty to their presidential client. By implication, damage to the presidential optic nerve in the future is equated with a severing of the moral arteries in the recent presidential past: If I say so myself, I am not a crook — and there are more important things for me, in my blind ambition, to think about.

From his portrait of the secretary of the treasury, we gather that Safire has his doubts about Nelson Rockefeller. From his references to the Book of Job and "Billy Budd," we learn to duck all unidentified flying literary allusions. As we might have expected from the author of The New Language of Politics he makes better conversation than anything Nixon recorded. As we might not have expected from a writer who plays word games as recklessly as Terry Sanford runs for president, his prose here for the most part is neither purple nor pun-tanned.

However, Safire knows how to tell a story and mix a motive. This, I felt, is how policy and fiascos are made. Personally, I was more prepared to forgive our 41st president his cover-up than I was to tolerate his economics. The sex stuff is handled with more gusto and assurance than William F. Buckley Jr., John D. Erlichman and Spiro T. Agnew have managed in their first novels — although speechwriters seem to have all the luck. Full Disclosure is accomplished fun.

Cosmologist in Reverse

By JULIAN REID

Measured against the logarithmic yardstick of science, Man stands midway in stature between atoms and stars. Whichever way he turns his gaze, his vision shades gradually into indefinite obscurity. These shadowy distances, which cloak the ultimate mystery of cosmic origins and destinies, are the special sphere of the cosmologist.

What overriding imperative drives supposedly hard-headed scientists to grapple with such intangibilities? The motive, Fred Hoyle asserts, is fundamentally religious. "Whenever any one, at whatever level of sophistication, makes the effort to understand a little more about the world, that is worship. There will never be any longterm purpose for our species other than understanding of the universe."

But unlike conventional religiosity, the cosmologist's faith is open-ended and continually evolving. Witness Hoyle's lastest book, Ten Faces of the Universe — from the layman's perspective perhaps his most lucid and stimulating essay since The Nature of the Universe appeared more than a quarter-century ago.

There the general public was introduced to the theory of the "steady-state universe," which had neither beginning nor ending in space or time, its materials being everlastingly replenished through a magical process of "continuous creation." It was an appealing notion — but, alas, the weight of subsequent evidence has gone against it.

Hoyle's current speculations, outlined in Ten Faces of the Universe, represent a fundamental reversal of his earlier standpoint. The "steady-state" theory was founded on one basic guiding credo — the so-called "Perfect Cosmological Principle," which held that the universe is essentially homogenous in both space and time. Hoyle now advances a diametrically opposite proposition: that conditions differ fundamentally in different regions of space-time, so that the alleged "universal laws" physicists have formulated on the basis of local conditions do not necessarily hold true in realms beyond our present ken.

This is unlikely to prove a popular position, since it flatly denies what is perhaps the single most basic tenet of modern science. Yet on purely philosophical grounds, Hoyle makes a persuasive case in favor of his heresy.

His newest cosmology resembles its predecessor in one noteworthy respect — it, too, holds that there was no initial instant of creation. Instead of the familiar "expanding universe," he postulates one in which matter is steadily contracting because the mass of its subatomic constituents is increasing with time. According to Hoyle, what most cosmologists take for the "origin" of things is in fact merely the moment when all masses equalled zero; it was preceded by a kind of anti-universe, parent to ours, in which masses were negative rather than positive.

Around this central theme, Hoyle weaves a discursive but stimulating essay on the nature and evolution of things, on the place of life in a cosmos where causality seems to run from future-to-past as well as past-to-future, and on the connections between the current population and energy crises and the ultimate destiny of humanity. Regarding our future prospects he is pessimistic, but not unreservedly so. All intelligence, he believes, "contains within itself the seeds of its own destruction" — but it also carries an alternative potential for self-transcendence, through which it can participate in the fulfilment of the universal destiny inherent in the laws that govern nature.

All such speculations, Hoyle realizes, are merely tentative, and must stand or fall depending on how well they accord with the incoming empirical evidence. Such is the essential nature of cosmology, in which the human mind, itself only a minuscule fraction of the universe, attempts the paradoxical task of assimilating the whole. As Hoyle observes wryly: "An ultimate theory, like the Holy Grail, is something the physicist must always seek but will never find."

THE DEBUNKER

By now there have been so many books exposing the inanities of Erich von Daniken's "ancient astronauts" theory that yet another addition to the corpus seems somewhat superflous. Nevertheless, Peter White's The Past Is Human is easily the best of the lot.

Briefly and readily, the author, an Australian prehistorian, discusses a host of allegedly unaccountable "mysteries"—among them the building of the pyramids, the Mayan calendar, the Easter Island statues, and the Nazca markings in Peru — and shows that there is no earthly need to invoke imaginary extra-terrestrial influences in order to account for them.

Buttressing his presentation with shrewdly aphoristic observations ("We are so used to machines we forget what man can do on his own:" "I argue that men are more creative than some of us will admit"), White has produced not only a tasty antidote for "Danikenitis," but also an entertaining elementary introduction to the fascinating field of prehistoric archeology.—J.R.

No Matter Who Wrote It It's an Impressive Work

By FRED BARNES

The Main by Trevanian is a beautifully written word-picture of Montreal's immigrant district and its hybrid population. One is hard-pressed to think of a better portrayal of a big-city slum area and the characters who infest such a warren.

Any reader will feel that he could now journey to the world's second-largest French-speaking city and recognize the streets, buildings and even the people who use them.

What better principal character could be employed to tell the story of The Main than a rough-and-ready police lieutenant? His beat for 30 years has been a rotting area that, in his mind, has been held together only by the surgery of frontier justice.

That justice sees him ban a punk from the street until further notice, after the punk displeases him; and beat and blackmail a gang leader who at first refuses him information. This type of shenannigan keeps Inspector Claude LaPointe in constant trouble with the police commissioner, but, what the heck, he's going to retire shortly anyway.

On the surface, The Main is a mystery along the lines of Columbo, where a tough, resourceful police officer tracks a killer. On that level it's a good mystery with the years rolling back to link one crime with earlier murders.

Below the surface, The Main is much more — brilliant characterizations that leads you to understand the merchants, prostitutes, gangsters, punks, even les bommes or winos, who people the pages. A brilliant portrayal of one small but fascinating area of a large and fascinating city.

LaPointe unfolds as a complex character — hard and brutal at times, but capable of friendship, of compassion, of being a soft touch. His one great love, since the early death of his wife, is The Main.

Tagging along behind him is Guttman, his Anglo Joan — in Montreal police parlance a Joan is a rookie cop attached to an experienced officer for seasoning. Guttman, a promising young officer, dislikes, detests, LaPointe on sight. As the chase moves on, his dislike becomes distress at the methods employed by the brusque lieutenant. Although the dislike and distress remain, Guttman, at the last, finds grudging respect and understanding of his superior.

Trevanian, the only name mentioned anywhere on the book for the author, is Canada's mystery writer. The publishers issue no information, refuse any biographical data, and seem determined to keep mum.

Previous published works are two spy stories made into movies —The Elger Sanction and The Loo Station.

A Toronto reviewer as "a wild guess" suggested that Trevanian could be a pseudonym for Mordecai Richler. Indeed, Richler grew up on the Main, on St. Urbain, which spawned Duddy Kravitz and St. Urbain's Horseman. Some of the dialogue has the ring of Richler, too, and the quality of writing is high in both cases.

On the other side of the fence, while Richler might like to be Trevanian while writing spy stories. The Main is right down his alley and something in which to take pride.
